Country Report: Türkiye
Acknowledgements & Methodology

The original report and first update were researched and drafted by Refugee Rights Türkiye and edited by ECRE. The updates since 2017 have been researched and drafted by an independent consultant and edited by ECRE.

The 2021 update of the report draws on desk research and information collected from civil society organisations, academia, and legal practitioners from cities across Türkiye through Zoom interviews due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Access to official information on the situation of persons under international or temporary protection in Türkiye remains limited to date.

The information in this report is up-to-date as of 31 December 2021, unless otherwise stated.

The Asylum Information Database (AIDA)

The Asylum Information Database (AIDA) is coordinated by the European Council on Refugees and Exiles (ECRE). It aims to provide up-to-date information on asylum practice in 23 countries. This includes 19 EU Member States (AT, BE, BG, CY, DE, ES, FR, GR, HR, HU, IE, IT, MT, NL, PL, PT, RO, SE, SI) and 4 non-EU countries (Serbia, Switzerland, Türkiye, UK) which is accessible to researchers, advocates, legal practitioners and the general public through the dedicated website www.asylumineurope.org. The database also seeks to promote the implementation and transposition of EU asylum legislation reflecting the highest possible standards of protection in line with international refugee and human rights law and based on best practice.

This report is part of the Asylum Information Database (AIDA), funded by the European Programme for Integration and Migration (EPIM), a collaborative initiative by the Network of European Foundations, and the European Union’s Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF). The contents of this report are the sole responsibility of ECRE and can in no way be taken to reflect the views of EPIM or the European Commission.

List of PMM restriction codes and forms

Restriction codes are issued by PMM but are not governed by clear, publicly available criteria. The implementation and regulation of these codes is not set out in the law but likely in internal circulars and instructions within the administration.

Different letters stand for discrete categories of persons. “A” refers to court decisions, “Ç” refers to temporary entry bans, “G” and “O” to entry bans, and “N” to entry based on work permits. A few examples of restriction codes are listed below:

A99 Convicted by court (and unable to leave Türkiye) | Mahkeme kararı (yurt dışına çıkış yasağı)
Ç114 Foreigner under criminal proceedings | Haklarında adli işlem yapılan yabancılar
Ç116 Foreigner threatening public morality and public health | Genel ahlak ve kamu sağlığını tehdit eden yabancılar
Ç119 Foreigner under administrative fine pursuant to Law 4817 for undeclared employment | 4817 sayılı kanun, kaçak çalışan idari para cezası
Ç120 Visa / residence permit violation | Vize ve ikamet ihlali nedeniyle
Ç137 Person invited to leave | Terke davet edilen şahıslar
Ç141 Entry ban | Ülkemize giriş bakanlık iznine tabi
G78 Illness | Hastalık
G82 General security | Genel güvenlik
G89 Foreign terrorist fighter | Yabancı terörist savaşçı
G89 Foreign terrorist fighter | Yabancı terörist savaşçı
H42 Drug-related offences | Uyuşturucu madde suçu
N82 Work permit – activities against national security | İstizanlı vize – milli güvenlikimmiz aleyhine faaliyet
N99 Work permit – other activities | İstizanlı vize – diğer
O100 Entry ban and cancellation of asylum | Semt-i meçhul yurda giriş yasaklı sığınmacı
V71 Unknown location | Semt-i meçhul
V74 Person requiring permission to exit | Çıkış İzni Bakanlığı – Valilik İznine Tabidir
V84 Short-stay entry (180/90 days) | 180/90 İkamet şartlı vize
V87 Voluntary returned foreigner | Gönüllü geri dönen yabancılar
V89 Greece – Return | Yunanistan – geri dönüş
V91 Temporary protection holder requiring permission to exit | Ülkemizden Çıkışı İzne Tabi Geçici Koruma Kapsamındaki Yabancı
V92 Subsequent registered foreigner | Mükerrer kaydı olan yabancı
Y26 Illegal terrorist activity | Yasadışı örgüt faaliyeti

PMM also has different numbers for forms issued to persons in immigration and asylum proceedings. Examples include the following:

T1 Deportation / Irregular Entry Form | Sınır Dışı Etme Kararı Tebliğ Formu
T2 Invitation to Leave the Country Form
T6 Administrative Surveillance Decision Form ordering release from a Removal Centre and reporting obligation | İdari Gözetim Kararı Sonlandırma Tebliğ Formu

Overview of statistical practice

Statistics are provided by the Presidency of Migration Management (PMM) on the total number of international protection and temporary protection beneficiaries, as well as data on the registration of the latter across provinces. The number of decisions on international protection issued by PMM is not available.

Overview of main changes since the previous report update

The report was last updated in May 2021.

2021 was a year of two halves. The first half of 2021 was not significantly different from 2020 in that the effects of the epidemic were still being felt until mid-2021 when COVID-19 measures loosened and vaccines were more widely available. Then in August 2021 the Taliban took over the government of Afghanistan. The migration flow from Afghanistan to Türkiye was the highest priority topic of 2021 for both the government and the general public. There was a public outcry against the irregular crossings at the Iranian border. The underlying economic crisis also shaped the discourse throughout the year.

Access to and from the territory remained deadly with pushbacks continuing on the Greek-Turkish border and ‘blocking’ on the Turkish-Iranian border.

Access to registration was one of the biggest problems for people seeking international protection in Türkiye in 2021, perhaps because of fears of large numbers of arrivals. Registrations did still take place, but it was unclear which PDMMs were taking applications and all stakeholders reported barriers for applicants during the year. This was mentioned in particular for Afghans seeking protection but it was also difficult to register for temporary protection.

By May 2022, the lack of access to registration in many cities became official policy with the “deconcentration” policy to ensure that no more than 25% of inhabitants of a particular area were foreign citizens. This affects many bigger cities including Istanbul, Ankara and cities on the coast.

There was a total of 29,256 applicants for international protection in 2021, down from 31,334 in 2020. The number of registered temporary protection beneficiaries increased from 3,641,370 in 2020 to 3,737,369 in 2022, but this figure does not only include new arrivals.

Registrations are also frequently deactivated. For example, the foreign identity number of applicant gets deactivated if their application for international protection is rejected. When you appeal against the rejection of the international protection application, it gets activated again, but it gets deactivated once you receive a final rejection decision about the international protection application. In addition, if a deportation decision is issued, the applicant’s foreign identity number does not get reactivated. There have also been problems with temporary and international protection holders found to be outside of their satellite city having their registration deactivated.

This lack of registration affects people’s access to the most basic services and means that they are forced to live irregularly. For those who have their registration deactivated it even causes problems for children accessing education in schools.

Integration programmes were not widely discussed in 2021, perhaps because of the shadow of the economy.

By 14 August 2021, the Turkish government stated that they would suspend deportations to Afghanistan due to a lack of country-of-origin information. However, this was not uniformly implemented. Van PDMM requested the deportation of 227 Afghans to Afghanistan in January 2022, for example. Case law on Afghanistan was not consistent despite the announcement that deportations would be suspended.

Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.
IOM’s assisted voluntary returns to Afghanistan were stopped after August 2021. However, PMM founded its own voluntary returns mechanism in 2021 (with the assistance of ICMPD and financed by the national budget), so if an Afghan wants to return to Afghanistan voluntarily this can happen through PMM’s voluntary return mechanism but not through IOM. This mechanism is less transparent; and the number of returnees is unclear. These returns were stopped for a couple of months following the fall of Kabul, but as of early 2022 the state is again sending back large numbers of Afghans to Afghanistan under ‘voluntary return.’

There has been an upsurge in ‘voluntary’ returns to Syria too, including to Idlib region where the Turkish government is building houses and investing in schools and hospitals. UNHCR reports returns are mainly for family and work reasons.

The voluntary nature of the large number of reported returns is unclear, particularly when coupled with a hostile environment for refugees, a focus on return and the deactivation of registration for people outside of satellite cities.

As of March 2022 58,000 Ukrainians had come to Türkiye since the beginning of the conflict, with at least 30,000 arriving by land and 900 by air via third countries. Some support programmes had already started including in Kuşadası Municipality where they have started an initiative for Ukrainian women who left their country to work online and earn income. As of March 2022, it was reported that around 14,000 Russians who opposed the war had fled the Russian Federation to Türkiye. These included anti-war bloggers, academics, activists and businesspeople.

The EU continued to provide funding including for education services and cash assistance programmes. In the context of the implementation of the EU-Türkiye readmissions to Türkiye were frozen throughout 2021. As of June 2022, 33,961 Syrians had been resettled (since 2016) to the EU under the 1:1 scheme.

In other news Presidential Decree No 85 amending several presidential decrees was issued in October 2021. With this Presidential Decree, the status of the Directorate General of Migration was increased to the Presidency of Migration Management.

International protection

International protection procedure

- Access to the territory: The effects of COVID-19 were still felt in early 2021. The border was closed and the weather conditions in winter were harsh. Pushbacks were prevalent and the political and media discourse turned negative to such an extent that some officials openly spoke of pushbacks as a positive thing. Access at air borders became more difficult than it had been in previous years, particularly at Istanbul airport.

3 Sertaç Bulur, ‘Minister Soylu: 58 thousand Ukrainians came to Türkiye since the war started’, Anadolu Ajansi, 22 March 2022, available in Turkish at: https://bit.ly/3rpHTaq.
Registration: The registration of applications was one of the biggest obstacles to people accessing international protection in Türkiye in 2021. During the year PDMMs in many big cities and on the coast or near the borders did not take new applications and referred people instead to so-called ‘satellite cities.’ Although registrations did not cease completely, they were reported as being ‘nearly impossible’ in several places, including for people with vulnerabilities. Inconsistencies in practice by PDMMs also created barriers. Meanwhile, persons in need of protection were left destitute with limited access to basic services and at risk of human rights violations.

Deconcentration: From May 2022, it is against the law for any region or area in Türkiye to have a population of foreign nationals that is more than one-quarter of the total population. This includes both people who have made Türkiye their permanent home and those who are merely visiting the country. This rule has been given the name the 25 percent limit or the 25 percent rule. 781 neighbourhoods in different provinces are now closed to foreign nationals seeking address registrations for temporary protection, international protection, and residence permits, as well as changes to their city of residence if they are foreign nationals with residence permits or are under temporary or international protection, with the exception of newborns and instances of nuclear family reunification. Because of this, no non-Turkish national will be able to select any of these 781 neighborhoods in Türkiye as their registered address for official matters, nor will they be able to ask the authorities to change their address to any of these places. Adana, Ankara, İstanbul, İzmir, Muğla, and Antalya are some of the cities that fall into this category, along with a great number of others. 7

Quality of the first-instance procedure did not improve: Similarly to previous years, in 2021 practice on the examination and the decision-making at first instance was not uniform across provinces. The quality of interviews, the assessment of evidence, the lack of identification of vulnerable groups, the lack of training of migration experts as well as the lack of available interpreters have been reported as particular concerns throughout the year. Structural problems in the international protection application procedures include a lack of uniform application of procedural rules at PDMMs and no information about the “opening” and “closing” of satellite cities.

Protection from refoulement: In December 2020, the Constitutional Court ruled on the suspensive effect of administrative appeals against deportation decisions. The Court said that the appeal has to suspend the deportation process otherwise, it violates the prohibition of ill-treatment and the right to an effective remedy. 8 In 2021, an increase was reported in the Constitutional Court’s decisions to reject objections to deportation decisions. Stakeholders noted more cases where the Court did not give an injunction, but the ECtHR did. 9

Legal assistance: The legal aid project implemented by the Union of Bar Associations in Türkiye in collaboration with UNHCR continues to provide free legal assistance to asylum seekers at all stages of the international protection procedure, detention, as well as on civil law matters and women’s rights. The project does not serve those who have received a security code and as such limits those who can access its services. Overall, though, it was welcomed as a much-needed service, particularly in smaller cities.

Access to information: Access to information on the international protection procedure and applicable rights and obligations remains a serious matter of concern in practice. Information as to which PDMM office was open to registration was reported as a particular concern.

Reception conditions

- The Cohesion Strategy and National Action Plan: The Cohesion Strategy and National Action Plan continued to be implemented in 2021 according to some stakeholders, however, it was not particularly visible. Some believed this was because of the public outcry about migration in 2021, meaning the government did not want to be seen making too much effort in terms of integration programmes.

- Access to housing: One of the most prominent shortcomings of Türkiye’s legal framework for asylum remains the failure to commit to providing state-funded accommodation to asylum applicants. This results in important issues of homelessness or sub-standard living conditions putting them at serious risk of discrimination and serious violations. Refugees’ material conditions further considerably worsened due to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020-2021 and the economic crisis of 2021.

- Access to the labour market: Due to the nature of their work and frequent lockdowns and the impact of COVID-19 on the economy, many refugees, asylum seekers and beneficiaries of temporary protection struggled to find work and to cover their basic needs including protective equipment and hygiene products. The economic crisis in 2021 meant that many refugees and asylum seekers continued to struggle.

- Access to education: COVID-19 still played a role in access to education in early 2021 and combined with the economic crisis meant that there were serious issues of child labour. All foreign students need to pay for university including Syrian beneficiaries of Temporary Protection and blue cardholders.

Detention of asylum seekers

- Place of detention: The number of Removal Centres increased from 26 to 30 in 2021.

- Forced or mandatory returns to Afghanistan: By 14 August 2021, the Turkish government stated that they would suspend deportations to Afghanistan due to a lack of country of origin information. However, this was not uniformly implemented. Van PDMM requested the deportation of 227 Afghans to Afghanistan in January 2022, for example. Case law on Afghanistan was not consistent despite the announcement that deportations would be suspended.

- Voluntary returns to Afghanistan: IOM’s assisted voluntary returns to Afghanistan were stopped after August 2021. However, PMM founded its own voluntary returns mechanism in 2021 (with the assistance of ICMPD and financed by the national budget), so if an Afghan wants to return to Afghanistan voluntarily this can happen through PMM’s voluntary return mechanism but not through IOM. This mechanism is less transparent; and the number of returnees is unclear. These returns were stopped for a couple of months following the fall of Kabul, but as of early 2022 the state is again sending back Afghans to Afghanistan under ‘voluntary return.’

- Alternatives to detention: New amendments to the law in December 2019 included Article 57(A) LFIP which lays down alternatives to pre-removal detention including inter alia: residence at a specific address, working on a voluntary basis for public good, reporting duties, family based return.

return counselling, financial guarantees and electronic tagging. These measures shall not be applied for more than 24 months and non-compliance shall be a ground for imposing pre-removal detention. A lack of an implementation regulation in 2020 meant that these measures were not implemented apart from reporting duties. They were not in evidence in 2021.

- Appeals against detention orders: The seven-day limit was not applied uniformly across Türkiye but where it was applied, it caused difficulties for lawyers to be able to make an appeal in time for their clients.

Content of international protection

- Residence permits and other administrative procedures: PDMMs ran address verification procedures for both international and temporary protection holders. Where they were not found at the correct place of registration, deportation orders were issued.

- Resettlement: In 2021 despite the challenges of the pandemic, UNHCR submitted 12,270 files for resettlement and 7,400 individuals departed from Türkiye through resettlement procedures. 76% of these were Syrian, 12% Afghan and 12% from other nationalities. It is expected that this will increase in 2022. According to PMM statistics, 19,189 Syrians had been transferred to third countries between 2014 and June 2022, mainly to Canada, the US, the UK and Norway.

- Ukraine: Citizens of Ukraine can enter Türkiye with a passport or their national ID and stay in the country legally with a visa exemption for up to 90 days. For citizens of Ukraine who entered Türkiye legally but have not been able to leave due to the conflict, as of March 2022, governorships were instructed to provide support with residence permit applications. Later in March, Interior Minister Süleyman Soylu reported that 58,000 Ukrainians had come to Türkiye since the beginning of the conflict, with at least 30,000 arriving by land and 900 by air via third countries. Some support programmes had already started including in Kuşadası Municipality where they have started an initiative for Ukrainian women who left their country to work online and earn income. There were 551 Crimean Tatars and Meskhetian Turks among the Ukrainian citizens who came to Türkiye, who were placed in dormitories in Edirne and Kırklareli, with support from AFAD. Russian nationals can also travel to Türkiye visa-free for 90 days. As of March 2022, it was reported that around 14,000 Russians who opposed the war had fled the Russian Federation to Türkiye. These included anti-war bloggers, academics, activists and businesspeople.

Temporary protection procedure

12 Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2021.
Registration: The issues mentioned above on the registration of applicants for international protection also apply to the registration of individuals falling under the temporary protection procedure (i.e. unclarity as to which cities are open/closed for registration, lack of ID documents resulting in irregular migrants being at risk of deportation and administrative detention). Additional issues relate to the significant delays in security checks and pre-registration which may take several months depending on the province. This is exacerbated by a lack of interpreters and other practical impediments to registration such as errors on the part of PMM officials, which may only be corrected following time-consuming legal intervention. There was an additional issue in 2021 with ‘address verification’ procedures leading to the deactivation of registration for those outside their satellite city.

Voluntary return: Serious concerns continued to be expressed by stakeholders on the enforced signing of voluntary return forms in 2021. Conditions in removal centres were also mentioned as a factor that could push people to return. Türkiye started a housebuilding programme in several regions including Idlib and by May 2022 said 400-500 Syrians were returning to Syria voluntarily per week.

Content of temporary protection

Housing: The number of people in temporary accommodation centres continued to go down in 2021. The number of residents decreased from 56,970 in April 2021 to 49,349 as of June 2022.

Education: There were problems accessing education for the children of some temporary protection holders whose registration was deactivated after they were found to be living outside of their satellite city. The waiver of university fees for Syrian temporary protection holders was cancelled which stakeholders fear will lead to less registrations.
Introduction to the asylum context in Türkiye

Türkiye currently hosts both a population of over 3.5 million refugees from neighbouring Syria and several hundred thousand asylum seekers and beneficiaries of protection of other nationalities, most principally originating from Iraq, Afghanistan, and Iran, among others. These two populations of protection seekers are subject to two different sets of asylum rules and procedures. As such, the Turkish asylum system has a dual structure.

Türkiye maintains a geographical limitation to the 1951 Refugee Convention and only applies it to refugees originating from European countries. That said, in April 2013 Türkiye adopted a comprehensive, EU-inspired Law on Foreigners and International Protection (LFIP), which establishes a dedicated legal framework for asylum in Türkiye and affirms Türkiye’s obligations towards all persons in need of international protection, regardless of country of origin. According to the UNHCR, the European acquis in the field of asylum and migration is clearly visible in Turkish asylum legislation thanks to this reform. The law also created the Directorate General of Migration Management (DGMM) as the agency responsible for migration and asylum, which conducts the status determination procedure. Toward the end of 2018 DGMM took over all tasks relating to international protection, while UNHCR and its implementing partner, the Association for Solidarity with Asylum Seekers and Migrants (SGDD-ASAM), phased out of registration of international protection applicants. UNHCR maintains contact with the authorities and has a Host Country Agreement with Türkiye, which was signed in 2016 and entered into force on 1 July 2018. As of 29 October 2021, DGMM became the Presidency of Migration Management (PMM). The LFIP provides three types of international protection status in accordance with Türkiye’s “geographical limitation” policy on the 1951 Refugee Convention.

1. Persons who fall within the refugee definition of the 1951 Convention and come from a “European country of origin” qualify for refugee status under LFIP, in full acknowledgment of Türkiye’s obligations under the 1951 Convention.

2. Persons who fall within the refugee definition of the 1951 Convention but come from a so-called ‘non-European country of origin’ are instead offered conditional refugee status under LFIP. Conditional refugee status is a Turkish legal concept introduced by the LFIP for the purpose of differentiating in treatment between 1951 Convention-type refugees originating from ‘non-European’ states and those originating from ‘European’ states.

3. Persons who do not fulfil the eligibility criteria for either refugee status or conditional refugee status but would however be subjected to death penalty or torture in country of origin if returned, or would be at “individualised risk of indiscriminate violence” due to situations or war or internal armed conflict, qualify for subsidiary protection status under LFIP. The Turkish legal status of subsidiary protection mirrors the subsidiary protection definition provided by the EU Qualification Directive.

For refugees from Syria, Türkiye implements a temporary protection regime, which grants beneficiaries a right of legal stay as well as some level of access to basic rights and services. The temporary protection status is acquired on a prima facie, group basis, to Syrian nationals and stateless Palestinians originating from Syria. DGMM is the responsible authority for the registration and status decisions within the scope of the temporary protection regime, which is based on Article 91 LFIP and the Temporary Protection Regulation (TPR) of 22 October 2014.

In line with the legislative framework, this report is divided into two sections, the first on international protection and the second on temporary protection.

PMM is structured as a civilian agency. It has Provincial Departments for Migration Management (PDMM) across the 81 provinces of Türkiye. A Council of Ministers Decision issued in February 2018 established 36 District Directorates for Migration Management (İlçe Göç İdaresi Müdürlüğü) in 16 provinces, under the responsibility of the respective PDMM.27

The functions and structure of the PMM were revised in 2018 following the inauguration of the presidential system in Türkiye. Presidential Decree No 4 abolished previously established councils within PMM such as the Migration Policy Council and the Migration Advisory Council, which were responsible for developing policies in this area.28

UNHCR continues to assist PMM in building capacity in refugee law and provided training to staff. Similarly, the European Union Agency for Asylum (EUAA) provides support to PMM and PDMMs. EUAA was implementing its third roadmap for cooperation with Türkiye in 2021 and launched discussions for establishing a new fourth roadmap for 2022-2023. This new roadmap will ‘facilitate exchanges of best practices on organisational development, asylum and reception.’ In 2021, EASO training core modules were also used in Türkiye.29

As mentioned previously, as of 29 October 2021, DGMM became the Presidency of Migration Management (PMM). Five new Directorate Generals (DGs) were created in the new system. At first, it was unclear which DGs would be responsible for which areas of work but as of March 2022, stakeholders reported it was working swiftly.30 This change seems mainly administrative but there might be some implications, for example, on human trafficking. Previously, it was a separate DG but now it is under the International Protection DG. PMM should also have more budget and hire more staff later in 2022. PMM is becoming more of a coordination agency among other ministries, gendarmeries, and the police.

5. Short overview of the asylum procedure

To register an international protection application, potential applicants have to approach a PDMM to register their application. As of 10 September 2018, UNHCR is no longer involved in registration of applications. If the PDMM cannot register the application itself, it instructs the applicant to report to a different province (“satellite city”) within 15 days, where he or she is required to reside and to register the application. Transportation costs are not covered but DGMM refers people in need to NGOs such as SGDD-ASAM for assistance. Practice is not standardised and persons are often refused registration by the PDMM without being referred to another PDMM.

An international protection applicant has the right to remain on the territory throughout the asylum procedure, although a derogation applies on grounds of “public safety”, “public health” and “membership of a terrorist or criminal organisation”. The Constitutional Court issued a pilot judgment in the case of Y.T. in 2018, launching the pilot procedure to examine whether requests for interim measures it has received stem from a structural problem to protection from refoulement and, if so, what measures can be taken. The Court published its decision in July 2019. In its decision, the Court states that the application of Articles 53(3) and 54 of LFIP should be revised and that appeals against deportation should have suspensive effect especially where deportation could create severe human rights violations. The Court gave the governmental authorities one year to make the necessary legal changes or it would examine all applications filed requesting an interim measure to stop deportations in substance. The authorities adopted the legal amendment in December 2019. The authorities obey the ruling and now appeals often stop deportations, so rights to prevent refoulement have been strengthened. However, there have been concerns that this had a knock-on effect of increasing ‘voluntary returns’ (see section on Removal and refoulement). In 2021, an increase was reported in the Court’s decisions to reject objections to deportation decisions. Stakeholders noted more cases where the Court did not give an injunction, but the ECtHR did. The Court reportedly gives more importance to concrete documents that prove that the applicant is in danger with the applicant's story considered less as evidence.

Under the LFIP, the PDMM shall aim to issue a first instance decision in 6 months in the regular procedure. This time limit is not binding and may be extended if deemed necessary. Under the accelerated procedure, the personal interview has to be conducted within 3 days of the date of application and a decision must be issued within 5 days of the interview, thus reaching 8 days in total.

The LFIP also provides a differentiated set of remedies against decisions issued under the regular procedure compared to the accelerated procedure and admissibility decisions. Judicial appeals against negative decisions under the accelerated procedure and inadmissibility decisions have to be filed within 15 days. Negative decisions in the regular procedure can be challenged at the International Protection Evaluation Commission (IPEC) within 10 days or directly at the competent Administrative Court within 30 days; in practice, the latter remedy is applied. All international protection appeals generally carry suspensive effect and guarantee applicants’ right to stay in Türkiye until the full exhaustion of remedies, except for persons facing deportation on grounds of “public safety”, “public health” and “membership of a terrorist or criminal organisation”.

Türkiye constructed a 144km wall on its Iranian border in 2018-2019. The wall was extended along the southern and eastern borders and in 2021 trenches and wire fences were added. The number of watchtowers and police stations also increased, and the border was controlled with technological devices, including surveillance by UAVs. President Erdogan reported the wall was 1040 metres long by August 2021, with plans to extend it further including a wall on the border with Iran. These measures affected the flow of immigrants to a certain extent, and numbers of crossings in Van decreased although some stakeholders have questioned the wall’s efficacy. Nevertheless, the wall(s) continued to be an important feature of government rhetoric on migration in the media. The interior ministers of Türkiye and Iran also signed a memorandum of understanding to increase security along their borders.

Increasing numbers of arrivals through the Iranian border has led to restrictive measures and arbitrary detention and deportation practices (see Place of Detention), with mainly single Afghan men being issued deportation (“T1”) forms. The “T1” forms are usually issued following administrative detention in a Removal Centre or a police station, and are stored in the PMM electronic file management system named “Göç-Net”. If a “T1” deportation decision has been issued, the person cannot apply for international protection and the decision can only be challenged by a judicial appeal.

There was a decrease in the number of refugees who entered Türkiye via Iran in 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic but the numbers rose again in 2012. According to PMM statistics, Afghanistan was the top nationality of persons apprehended for irregular migration by far in 2021, with 70,252 out of a total of 162,996 apprehended persons. This represents a rise in the total number of irregular migrants apprehended from 2020 (122,302), although it is still far from 2019 (454,662) which had seen the highest number since records began.

Pushbacks remained a concern. It was said that there are around 2000 irregular entries per day to Türkiye but only 200 people are sent to removal centres, so the rest are either pushed backed or manage to go to other cities.

There were several official acknowledgements of pushbacks in 2021. A report claimed that gendarmerie had confirmed the national police had told them to push migrants back on the Türkiye-Iran border due to the high cost of feeding, housing and legally processing their claims. In December 2021, Governor Bilmez from Van admitted to pushbacks against migrants on the Iranian-Turkish border, stating that nearly 120,000 migrants had been blocked from entering via the Van border that year. The same governor admitted to

1,137 irregular migrants being blocked in January 2022.\textsuperscript{47} Ağrı Governor Osman Varol reported that 75 percent of the irregular migrants caught in Ağrı on the Iranian border in recent years were from Afghanistan, 10 percent from Pakistan, 10 percent from Iran, and 5 percent from other countries. In 2021, the number of people prevented from illegally passing through the Ağrı border was 28,509.\textsuperscript{48}

This continues to be a deadly border.\textsuperscript{49} For the majority of migrants and refugees, it is critical not to be caught by law enforcement in Türkiye because of fears of refoulement. This causes immigrants and smugglers to prefer steep and dangerous roads where there are no gendarmerie or police control. Migrant smugglers who do not want to be caught use Lake Van, which means the number of boats sinking in Lake Van and the number of immigrants who have lost their lives has been increasing in recent years. Migrants also pass through mountains and steep cliffs to cross the border, especially in winter, away from checkpoints. People lose their lives due to extreme cold, blizzard and occasional avalanches. There were three deaths in March 2021 in Ozalp due to freezing, one in Baskale and three due to attacks by wild animals. Human traffickers often abandon refugees in inaccessible areas, and many die alone in the mountains. Bodies are buried in a potter’s field in Van with over 200 graves.\textsuperscript{50} Many immigrants have also lost their lives because of traffic accidents in vehicles organized by smugglers.\textsuperscript{51} In July 2021, 12 people died as a result of a minibus carrying asylum seekers rolled into a ditch in the Muradiye district of Van.\textsuperscript{52} It is a border frequently used by Afghan nationals and as such caused barriers to them seeking protection in 2021.\textsuperscript{53}

One stakeholder spoke of a case where 61 people had lost their lives in a sinking boat and some were charged with intentional murder. Only one defendant was held in pre-trial detention. The case is still pending before the local court.\textsuperscript{54} Those pushed back to Iran can be trapped in the mountains between Türkiye and Iran and face harsh treatment by the Iranian state authorities, including shooting and injury.\textsuperscript{55} A stakeholder interviewed for the report had also heard Iranian soldiers caused physical injury and did their own ‘pushback’ so that Afghans could not return to Iran.\textsuperscript{56} Another stakeholder noted that irregular migrants who were not caught often went into hiding in Van and were hesitant to apply for international protection in case they were pushed back. People were pushed from the border four or five times but still tried to enter Türkiye. Once they had entered many tried to travel to the western provinces of Türkiye. Afghans in particular, socially isolated themselves in order to avoid pushbacks.\textsuperscript{57}

They were told to keep their heads down. There have also been reports of pushbacks from Greece to Türkiye for several years. Lawyers in Van have assisted in cases and highlighted illegalities in the deportation procedures.

In 2020, there was a particular difficult situation at the Pazarkule border between Greece and Türkiye. The Turkish authorities announced that they would open the borders with Greece and Bulgaria on 27 February 2020 and refugees were encouraged to leave their registered provinces and go to the Pazarkule border gate by state officials. This provocation led approximately 13,000 (mostly undocumented) refugees to gather at the Pazarkule border in Edirne. In response to the Turkish State’s announcement, the Greek government chose to militarise the land border. It was reported that Greek border guards used pepper spray, tear gas, high-pressure water, and even real bullets, leading to several cases of injuries, whilst the medical assistance provided in the Field Tent Hospital was reportedly insufficient. There is more information on the situation in Greece available on the AIDA report on Greece.

In Türkiye, the Pazarkule border crisis got worse with the outbreak of the pandemic. Due to unfavourable weather conditions, heating became a serious problem for those at the border. PMM and the gendarmerie controlled the entrances and exits from the buffer zone by checking fingerprints. Young men, in particular, waited in line for 4-5 hours to exit to find food and shelter. In April 2020, 50 refugees (including Afghans, Syrians, Pakistanis and Algerians) in the Greek-Turkish buffer zone were taken to the riverside by the Turkish border guards and pushed back to Greece. After being forcefully pushed back to Türkiye by Greek forces, one Turkish police officer pointed his gun at one refugee’s head from the group and threatened that they had to leave Türkiye.

After the Pazarkule incidents, those in need of healthcare struggled to access it. The only way to register them was through ‘acquaintances’ as even very ill Syrians cannot be registered in İstanbul. People were held in removal centres for quarantine. Deportation orders were issued in some places to create a legitimate basis for their detention. There were hundreds of refugees whose legal status was uncertain. Those who were registered returned to their satellite cities, but for those who were unregistered it was difficult to know whether a deportation decision had been issued or not. Administrative penalties were then imposed on people on their way back to the satellite cities where they were registered. When they returned to their assigned cities, people had more problems because they had sold all their assets before going to Pazarkule. It was claimed that as there was no written statement that they could go to a third safe country, their temporary/international protection applications were deemed withdrawn by DGMM. Some were told that they had missed the signature day.

Several men were severely burned trying to cross the border to Greece. 4-5 Afghan men tried to jump across to the Greek side at midnight, but a Greek soldier poured boiling water with a kettle on their faces. Reportedly, a case was brought in front of the European Court of Human Rights.

Since then there has been regular reports of pushbacks from Greece. Türkiye reported that it had rescued 6,000 immigrants left to die by Greece in January to August 2021, and that the Turkish coastguard had caught or rescued 87 out of every 100 migrants using the Aegean Sea in 2021. In interviews, stakeholders confirmed that pushbacks from Greece continue, especially into the Meriç River. IOM and NGOs provide humanitarian aid, particularly during the winter season. One expert said that up to 100 people could attempt to cross the Edirne border a day on busy days. This makes following up on pushback cases and injuries more difficult for lawyers.

It is estimated that around 100 applications against Greece have been lodged with the ECtHR from Türkiye, although due to the lack of communication among attorneys and bar associations, some of the cases have been submitted multiple times by different bars. In one case, Mülteciler-Der saved a child’s life, but his family crossed the border and fled to Greece. Although the boy was relatively young, he was sent to Akyurt (Ankara) removal center because he looked older than his age. Refugees who have been pushed-back are released from removal centers after a while. The PMM encourages families to apply to the ECtHR against Greece. In one case, PMM reportedly released the families from the removal center to encourage them, and they were registered in provinces where registration was generally closed to registration.

Several stakeholders had met with individuals who had been pushed back. After an uprising in Cuba in July 2021, around 150 Cubans planned to seek asylum in Europe via Türkiye. Their intention was to reach Portugal via Greece, but Greek authorities thought they came from Middle-Eastern countries and pushed them back to Türkiye. One stakeholder interviewed 10 pushed-back Cubans and their stories matched those of Syrians and Afghans. The Cuban nationals were forced to get off the bus, the Greek police said they were lying and looked like Middle Easterners, and the fact that they spoke Spanish meant nothing. The Greek authorities allegedly beat them, and police officers wearing blue berets in a black caravan without a license plate brought them to the border. From there, they were forced to walk barefoot. Many refugees pushed back from Greece tell the same story. It was not possible to register the Cuban asylum seekers in Istanbul. They also hesitated to apply to the Cuban consulate due to political concerns.

Another stakeholder had met with Afghan nationals who had been pushed-back and who were at the Pehlivanköy removal centre. There were 200-250 Afghans kept in the yard of the removal center with their passports and identity documents. They were taken to and from the border in shuttle vehicles: coming back to the removal center, then being dropped back to the border to try again. Those who crossed the border reported being stripped of their clothes; some got beaten, and others lost their lives. Longoz forests (Edirne) are swampy. People whose trousers and shoes have been taken, in particular, were at risk of serious injury, such as a broken leg or even death. It is also difficult to find/retrieve the bodies due to the conditions in the swamp.

Another stakeholder reported that 19 refugees lost their lives in the Aegean Sea at the end of December 2021. In this incident, the Greek side carried out the pushback process by stripping the clothes of 19 refugees who froze to death, whilst yet another reported that the type of boat that refugees use to cross the border is a Zodiac. When pushing people back, people are taken off this boat and put on an unsafe, inoperable raft.

The Ombudsman and PDMMs help people file pushback cases against Greece, especially in terms of access to legal aid. In one case, a lawyer was instructed to assist someone who had been pushed back by a removal center to file a complaint against Greece. However, the person was issued a deportation decision from Türkiye. This issue has been highlighted to the Ombudsman, as they were not able to pursue their application. The Ombudsman Institution in Ankara has monitored the pushbacks in İzmir, Aydın, and Van and penned a report that will be launched in 2022.

Stakeholders reported that removal center officials often call lawyers to pressure them to file cases before the ECtHR. Removal centers say that if an appeal is submitted, they will release X or Y refugee. However, they are released without any registration and/or contact information. It is believed that it is PMM policy for PDMMs to encourage complaints before the ECtHR against Greece.

Perhaps because of the difficulties in accessing Greece, one stakeholder reported an increase in irregular migration towards Italy instead of Greece in 2022.

Access to the territory through the Syrian land border is discussed in detail in Temporary Protection: Admission to Territory. However, one stakeholder reported that Afghans and a Yemeni person were pushed back to Syria in late 2021, or early 2022.

1.2. Access at the airport

Airports in İstanbul (Sabiha Gökçen and İstanbul) continue to serve as a key international hub for connection flights from refugee-producing regions to European and other Western destinations for asylum. It should be noted that visa restrictions have applied to Syrian nationals arriving from third countries by air and sea since 2016. The main airport is now the new İstanbul Airport and access there was improved before the COVID pandemic.

In 2020, strict measures were implemented at Turkish airports due to COVID-19. Admissible passengers, inadmissible passengers and waiting times all completely changed. Passengers were kept in quarantine for 14 days in tiny rooms at the airport until summer 2020. Later on, depending on their individual situation people were taken to removal centres or buildings that are called guesthouses and released from there. Some were returned directly to their country of origin, although issues arose in case of travel restrictions. Apart from the attempts to send people back to their country of origin, Turkish citizens were treated in the same way.

Normally, airports are problematic and individuals cannot submit their international protection applications. Türkiye’s open-door policy ended with the signature of the EU-Türkiye Statement in 2016 and since then very few applications have been accepted at the borders. The practice seems to be to reject them explicitly or implicitly – not processing the applications that are accepted. After the COVID-19 pandemic, people were taken from İstanbul Airports and placed in removal centres. They were then released. This was regarded as a good practice, as asylum seekers could thus enter the country, even if they were subject to an obligation to report regularly in İstanbul.

When a person was obliged to give their signature regularly as part of the reporting process, there were sometimes problems and they had to go to another city because applications were closed in İstanbul. In certain cases, when a person wanted to go to another city to apply for international protection, the application was not accepted because the person was obliged to periodically give their signature in Istanbul. Transferring the obligation to sign in to the city of registration takes a long time due to a lack of communication between PDMMs.

In 2021, it became more difficult to apply for asylum at the airport and many people were reportedly sent back to their country of origin. The conditions worsened in transit zones, even in İstanbul Airport where it used to be better. The airline company that brought the protection seeker to the country covers the food and beverage expenses of that person and meets some basic needs. One stakeholder described the conditions saying people were kept in a place with no windows, no ventilation, and the lights were on 24 hours for nine months, and the only thing they were given to eat was cold airline sandwiches. One person seeking asylum could not stand the conditions and had to return to his country before his case was finalized.\textsuperscript{76}

After the application is submitted to PMM, the procedure is managed by the PDMM. According to law, they have to be accepted into the country once the application is received. In Istanbul Airport, people who have applied for international protection can stay for months in rooms provided at the airport. Those whose applications are rejected file a lawsuit against the refusal decision before the administrative court and should remain in the room until the case is concluded. This makes it almost impossible to apply. According to law, an international protection application cannot be made through a proxy. This application cannot be made at the airport due to the physical limits of that area - an area that is very difficult to access. If the applicant needs to apply to the court after receiving an adverse decision, a lawyer, a private or legal aid lawyer, can meet with that person at the border at the airport. The lawyer cannot enter the transit zone, and the applicant cannot enter Türkiye. Lawyer-client meetings are held next to the police; there is no privacy. The Guardian reported a similar case.\textsuperscript{77}

Another stakeholder confirmed that it has become more difficult to get permission from the airport administration for a private interview with clients. The İstanbul airport administration no longer responded to requests, whereas it used to take less than an hour at Sabiha Gökçen Airport and Atatürk Airport. The problem had been reported to the PDMM, but there was no change. Even where a lawyer manages to meet the client, it is impossible to submit an international protection application at the airport. In one case the PDMM was requested to accept an application for 5 months. Even if the application is received, the stakeholder reported that applications get rejected in an accelerated procedure.\textsuperscript{78}

Again at İstanbul airport, another stakeholder reported that the transit zone was problematic. Permission is needed from the administrative unit at the airport to meet with a client. It can take up to 10 days for permission to be granted. Interviews are held in a publicly accessible space, without any attorney-client privacy. After making the application for international protection, although the person had IP applicant status, he had to stay in the transit zone until his application was finalized.\textsuperscript{79}

If the person has arrived with a fake passport, they are taken to a ‘problematic passenger’ room. Communication with PDMMs about asylum requests is not quick. This systemic issue can lead to the extended stay of such persons in the transit zone or problematic passenger room.\textsuperscript{80}

In a case from İzmir airport, a 12-year-old Iranian girl who arrived by plane before her family was released but her registration request was not accepted by the PDMM for a long time. After 2 months, her family also came; it took 9 months for her to obtain registration. Manisa Deputies had to assist so that the child could be registered.\textsuperscript{81}

In 2021 notary fees were very expensive for refugees, costing 2500-3000 Turkish Lira at the airport (on average 244-293 Euros although exchange rates varied widely in 2021). Interpreting also cost 800 TL (on average 78 Euros). The notary requires an interpreter even if the client knows Turkish.\textsuperscript{82}

2. Removal and refoulement

2.1. The derogation from the non-refoulement principle

Applicants for international protection generally have the right to remain on the territory of Türkiye throughout the procedure.\(^{83}\) However, an exception to this rule was introduced by way of emergency decree in October 2016, providing that a deportation decision “may be taken at any time during the international protection proceedings” against an applicant for reasons of: (i) leadership, membership or support of a terrorist organisation or a benefit-oriented criminal group; (ii) threat to public order or public health; or (iii) relation to terrorist organisations defined by international institutions and organisations.\(^{84}\) The reform was consolidated by Law No 7070 on 1 February 2018.

For foreigners who have been convicted of an offence, the Public Prosecutor shall request the opinion of the Ministry of Interior as to whether or not they should be removed from the country.\(^{85}\)

The law effectively enables the deportation of asylum seekers, beneficiaries of international protection and beneficiaries of temporary protection (see Temporary Protection: Protection from Refoulement) on the aforementioned grounds which remain largely vague and could be interpreted widely.\(^{86}\) The reform introduced by the Decree has been criticised for facilitating and exacerbating risks of arbitrary deportations jeopardising the life and safety of refugees.\(^{87}\)

Deportation on public order, public security and public health grounds is linked to the security restriction codes issued by PMM, a practice still not governed by clear, publicly available criteria.\(^{88}\) The implementation and regulation of these codes is not set out in the law but likely in internal circulars and instructions within the administration.

Security-related codes such as “G89” for foreign terrorist fighters and “G87” for general security seem to still be applied, though mainly in specific parts of the country, such as Gaziantep\(^{89}\) and İstanbul.\(^{90}\) The assessment of risks, conducted by the Risk Analysis Department as far as airports are concerned,\(^{91}\) is made with reference to broad criteria and in practice may be based on the appearance or point of entry of the individual e.g. Turkish-Syrian border.\(^{92}\) Intelligence from other countries often leads to the issuance of a security restriction code, even though the content and quality of intelligence vary depending on the issuing country.\(^{93}\)

Security codes can be only appealed before the Administrative Court of Ankara, since they are issued by PMM Headquarters. In appeals against the issuance of restriction codes, confidential documents submitted by PMM are not available to the individual or his or her lawyer; they can only be accessed in person at the registry of the Administrative Court of Ankara.\textsuperscript{94} The court generally leaves a wide margin of discretion to PMM with regard to the issuance of codes. It has not taken a uniform approach to the scrutiny of codes, with some rulings annulling the issuance of codes for want of evidence and others upholding them.\textsuperscript{95} In İzmir, lawyers had some success in appealing codes due to procedural errors by the administration who at times have been unable to provide information on the legal basis for applying the code, or where there is a lack of legal notification or translation. In İzmir there is no specific profile of the people being assigned codes, anyone can be assigned a code, even Americans or Germans.\textsuperscript{96}

In many cases,\textsuperscript{97} Administrative Court rulings annulling the issuance of a security restriction code are later overturned by higher instance courts.\textsuperscript{98} In a January 2019 ruling, the Constitutional Court declared lack of jurisdiction to rule on a complaint concerning the cancellation of a code.\textsuperscript{99} However, there were two interesting cases in 2020. In 2020 the Constitutional Court ruled that the right to respect the family unity of a citizen of the Russian Federation of Chechen ethnicity with four children and a wife in Türkiye who had legally resided in Türkiye for three years. PMM had issued a G-87 code and an entry ban to Türkiye. The applicant had appealed the code and the entry ban but lost the case at the local level. The Constitutional Court found a violation and granted him the right to re-trial.\textsuperscript{100} In 2020, Ankara’s 1\textsuperscript{st} Administrative Court also cancelled a G-87 code issued to an Iraqi because the PMM could not submit substantive materials proving the applicant’s relationship with the alleged terrorist organisation.\textsuperscript{101}

One stakeholder reported that numerous complaints had been filed against entry ban restriction codes in 2021 but all of them were rejected. In one case, an entry ban, which was initially issued for 1 year, had been extended to 5 years without a valid legal ground. Several appeals were filed: two in İstanbul, two in Ankara, two in Gaziantep, one in Bolu, and one in Mersin Administrative Courts. Court decisions regarding the entry ban were highly inconsistent; all had different grounds.\textsuperscript{102}

Amendments to the LFIP in 2019 allow for the travel costs for removal to be borne by the deportee. If the individual does not have sufficient money, the expense shall be borne by DGMM yet in the same article it states “money belonging to the foreigner, apart from the amount that is required to meet the basic needs identified by the Directorate General, will be recorded as income to the Treasury”.\textsuperscript{103} There is no information yet about how this has been applied in practice.

A new regulation on Penal Execution Institutions and Execution of Penalties and Security Measures was enacted on 29 March 2020. According to Article 52 the following principles apply to convicts to be deported:

a) The decree on expulsion is sent to the Office of the Chief Public Prosecutor where it is recorded in the execution book and sent to the highest security authority and immigration administration units.

b) Before being released from the institution, the administration of the institution informs the highest security authority of that place and the units of immigration administration on the release date of the convict. On the date of release, the convict is delivered to law enforcement for deportation proceedings.

c) The deportation of convicts not housed in institutions are carried out by immigration administration units.

(2) Assessments regarding deportation procedures for convicts are made by the Ministry of Interior.

Deportations from Türkiye were largely suspended from March to August 2020 due to the coronavirus pandemic, however, by September 2020 around 7,300 Afghans had been deported.\(^{104}\) There is a general lack of country-based information about returns, however, so it is unclear, for example, how many returnees were Syrians or non-Syrians.\(^{105}\)

The government had several drives to apprehend irregular migrants. For example, on 29 January 2022, the Ministry of the Interior carried out a ‘Peace Practice’ operation to combat irregular migration. The operation was carried out at 8,820 points with 36,126 personnel and 608 detector dogs searching abandoned places where foreigner citizens were known to stay, including public entertainment venues, truck garages, terminals, ports and fishermen’s shelters, public transport stops and stations. 127 organizers, 72 of whom were foreign nationals, were detained, and 2,028 irregular migrants were caught.\(^{106}\)

HDP Deputy Gülşan Kılıç Koçyiğit raised a question in parliament about the situation of 4 Iranian refugees, who were deported to Denizli, three of whom had taken part in a protest against scrapping the İstanbul Convention that had taken place on 20 March 2021.\(^{107}\) Others who had taken part in the protests were removed to different provinces.\(^{108}\)

In the Ümraniye district of İstanbul on October 4-5, 2021, 33 foreign nationals were found to be employed in the recycling workplaces without social security, and were subject to deportation procedures.\(^{109}\)

There was also a well-known case of 45 foreign citizens being detained in removal centres and threatened with deportation for posting videos of eating bananas on social media during a cost-of-living crisis,\(^{110}\) although it was reported later that the individuals were not actually deported.\(^{111}\)

The Turkish government was very concerned about the situation in Afghanistan in 2021 and a potential increase in arrivals from Afghanistan to Türkiye. Afghans were mainly treated as ‘illegal migrants’ in the press and by government officials and were singled out for restrictive migration measures. For example, İstanbul Governor Ali Yerlikaya reported that 547 illegal immigrants, 167 of whom were Afghan, were caught during the controls carried out in 18 districts in August 2021 and handed over to the Removal Center for deportation procedures.\(^{112}\) A tip off in Van led to a raid where 164 Afghans were caught in abandoned houses. In the press, they were referred to as illegal immigrants who were sent to the Provincial Directorate of Migration Management whilst the police started work to catch the immigrant smugglers.\footnote{CNN Türkiye, ‘164 illegal immigrants caught in abandoned houses,’ 9 October 2021. Available in Turkish at: https://bit.ly/3tkiDmW.}

However, in August 2021 the Turkish government stated that they had suspended deportations to Afghanistan due to there being no detailed

\COI\ that authorities could rely on to evaluate Afghans’ applications. During this period, some courts looked more favourably on Afghan applicants who were applying for asylum. For example, the 1st İzmir Administrative Court ruled positively on appeals against deportations to Afghanistan in late 2021, and deportation decisions were overruled.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.}

Although the authorities had decided that Afghans could not be deported, overall they did not direct them to protection procedures either. Some of the newly arrived were highly educated people, who had worked in non-governmental organizations in Afghanistan and had a good knowledge of the English language. One stakeholder noted that PDMMs approached these people more moderately.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, April 2022.}

This good will seemed to run out in early 2022. In January 2022, Türkiye’s interior minister said that Türkiye had (re)started sending ‘illegal Afghans’ back to Afghanistan with Ariana Airlines and charter flights. Minister Soylu said that five charter flights had left at that point with Afghans being sent back to Afghanistan every 3-5 days from removal centres as part of a ‘voluntary return’ programme.\footnote{Duvar, ‘Minister Soylu: Süleyman Soylu: We will not give temporary protection to those coming from Damascus’, available in Turkish at: https://bit.ly/3x6qo0R.}

On 25 April 2022, PMM acknowledged the 30th charter flight back to Afghanistan in a tweet, stating that 6,805 Afghans had been deported since 27 January by charter flight alone; 11,036 Afghans had been deported in 2022 as of that date out of a total of 23,853 deportations of irregular migrants – over 46\%.\footnote{@Gocdaresi tweet, 25 April 2022, available in Turkish at: https://bit.ly/3mTeu5B.}

The vast majority of returns from removal centres are believed not to be voluntary, although there were less of them in 2020.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2021.}

Lawyers in Van, İzmir, İstanbul and Antakya have all expressed serious concerns about clients being forced to sign voluntary return forms.

In 2021 an Afghan refugee claimed that Taliban members had come to the removal centre and introduced themselves as Afghan diplomats. They said that an amnesty had been declared in Afghanistan and asked them to return to Afghanistan. Asylum seekers signed a voluntary return form that included a sentence whereby the individual waived all lawsuits filed. A complaint was filed in court against this process since any abandonment of exhausting legal remedies must be made before the court in Turkish law. The court accepted the complaint and overruled the decision, but the client had already signed a "voluntary return" and been deported.\footnote{Information from a stakeholder, April 2022.}

Undocumented foreigners could not travel within the country, especially in Iğdır, Van, and Ağrı (border cities). They could not buy a bus ticket even if they were appointed to another city or stayed in a hotel. When they were caught, they were sent to the removal centres and then push backed towards the Iranian border. In Van, those who do not have a vulnerability are sent to removal centres and deported.
2.2. Appeal before the Administrative Court

Courts have clarified that the removal decision must be properly notified to the individual, either in writing or orally, and include information on appeal possibilities.\textsuperscript{120} The appeal against a deportation decision is a remedy separate from remedies in the international protection procedure.\textsuperscript{121} It now has automatic suspensive effect, following a review of the LFIP in reforms from December 2019, and the deletion of exceptions to the right to remain on the territory.\textsuperscript{122}

However, removal decisions must be appealed before the Administrative Court within seven days of notification.\textsuperscript{123} Lawyers say it is extremely difficult to gather all the information and write an appeal in seven days particularly if the case needs translation work or there are difficulties accessing a client in detention. This short time limit has a negative affect on both access to justice and the quality of the lawyer-client relationship.\textsuperscript{124} These new time limits were considered as one of the most negative changes in 2020 for refugee protection. Some courts exercise the seven-day rule very strictly. This creates a significant problem, as Administrative Court decisions on deportation appeals are now final. Appeals against deportation and administrative detention decisions mean different practices in different provinces since there are no higher judicial bodies or higher authority to standardise practices. Lawyers have found it difficult to prepare and file an appeal in such a short period.\textsuperscript{125} Notification is also a common issue in removal centres. The seven-day time limit starts with the notification of the deportation decision, so it carries special importance. When the file of the applicant is sent to the court by PDMM, sometimes there is no notification. In this case, the PDMM sometimes include a note such as “refused to give their signature” before sending the documents to the court. This unlawful practice has been challenged in court in one case.\textsuperscript{126} In Van, the seven-day limit was not strictly enforced but those who were able to access assistance from a lawyer were in the minority.\textsuperscript{127} \textbf{Istanbul} Administrative Courts were generally positive and more flexible in terms of deadlines. There were also positive decisions for citizens of Russia, Uzbekistan, and Tajikistan.\textsuperscript{128} \textbf{Manisa 1\textsuperscript{st} Administrative Court} sticks strictly with the 7-day period in appeals against deportation.\textsuperscript{129}

There were two separate internal communications sent from PMM to PDMMs in 2021, dated 29 March 2021, and 25 October 2021, directly linked to articles 60-65 of LFIP, which is about foreign nationals with a pending trial or legal problem. These letters extend the scope of the article against foreign citizens. A statement was added to the effect that those involved in crimes that could cause public outrage or who made statements that could cause a serious reaction in the locality, now come under this provision. If a foreign national has such a case filed against them, PDMMs will evaluate their situation and can issue a deportation decision. In criminal investigations with a political context (related to the PYD and ISIS), the mere existence of an investigation can be sufficient for a deportation decision to be issued. An acquittal has not stopped deportations. Deportation decisions have started to be made even for those whose trial was pending and brought before the court due to a summary offense.\textsuperscript{130}

There are centres for data verification for refugees in \textbf{Izmir}. People go there to change the information on their ID cards. In Izmir, there is a separate building from the PDMM. In the two communications, it was implied that the software used by the PMM (Göç Net database) is now connected to UYAP and can draw on personal information about foreigner nationals regarding their legal cases, etc. PMM did not have this access in the past. PMM does not look whether a final judgment is in place- it is sufficient to find a criminal file linked to the foreigner. In the past, in data verification centers, deportation procedures could be initiated if the foreigner had a security-related code such as G87. However, with the latest communications sent by PMM, it is possible to start the deportation process because of a simple fight with a neighbour.131

Since the appeal now stops the deportation and practice is in theory in conformity with the law, lawyers no longer need to apply to the Constitutional Court for interim measures to stop deportations except when an administrative body unlawfully deports their client or to secure a possible application to ECtHR.132

Since first instance Administrative Court decisions are not shared with the public in Türkiye, it is difficult for experts and lawyers to assess the effectiveness and quality of judicial review. In the past, there was no uniform application of the non-refoulement principle in Administrative Court reviews of deportation decisions. Even where the execution of removal was suspended by Administrative Courts, compliance with court orders was reported to be arbitrary and dependent upon the individual police officers in question.

In İzmir in 2021, the success rate for deportation appeals was reported to be 90% for one stakeholder. However, there were severe problems with cases of Syrians. Manisa 1st Administrative Court has given a suspension measure decision for a transgender client. The Aydın Court acknowledges irregular entry into the country as a reason for deportation.133 Another stakeholder received positive decisions from Ankara, Bursa, and İstanbul administrative courts. The lawyer requested the consulate provide a letter regarding the applicant’s family status, educational background, etc. With the help of these letters, it was argued that the deportation decision would cause significant harm to the applicant’s life. The consulate also attended the hearing which may have influenced the judge’s decision.134

In İzmir in 2021, people whose appeal against deportation decisions was accepted were sent to distant Anatolian cities to evaluate their re-application based on a PMM official internal letter from 2019. One lawyer was granted an interim suspension measure from the court in one case. The PDMM seemed to stop this practice at the end of 2021 apart from for single foreign citizens without family members.

There was a positive decision from the Van 1st Administrative Court concerning the deportation of a Christian Iranian in 2019. The grounds for the positive decision were the submission of translated evidence from the criminal court case of the applicant from Iran. The applicant was caught in Van without ID and sent to the removal centre to be deported. His application for international protection was not accepted by the removal centre management without a cover letter from his lawyer. The client was told that the accelerated procedure would be applied but did not receive a reply from Van PDMM for 11 months during which time he was in detention. His application was accepted only after the positive judgement of the Van 1st Administrative Court cancelling the deportation decision. His lawyer was not notified about his release from the removal centre. After three applications for his release from the removal centre which were all rejected without any legal grounds, he was released based on a need to undertake a careful assessment as per Article 55(2) of the LFIP. The potential returnee was from Mali, although the government claimed he was lying and came actually from Cameroon, which was a ground for deportation. The court ruled there was not enough due diligence and a lack of assessment to find out the returnee’s real name and nationality.

so the deportation should be cancelled. The assessment of nationality was not carried out in an effective way as required by Article 55(2) LFIP.\textsuperscript{136}

Deportations are executed from Van either to deportees’ own countries if they are from Iran or Afghanistan or to another country considered safe by Türkiye. In the removal centre in Van, there are leaflets and advertisements on voluntary return but no information about international protection or legal aid. Lawyers thus assume that the system is return-oriented. Clients have been deported even after lodging an appeal. There were allegations that potential returnees were given wrong or fraudulent information to make them sign the voluntary return document. In most cases, signatures are taken without the presence of a lawyer. Out of three cases of voluntary return forms assessed by a lawyer in Van, none of them were really ‘voluntary’. In one case, two Iranians signed the form because they did not want to stay in the removal centre. In another case, a client with a long-term residence permit in Türkiye was caught in Bodrum by the police while he was on holiday with a friend. When the police found a plastic boat in his car, they assumed that he wanted to leave Türkiye illegally.\textsuperscript{137} He was sent to the removal centre to be deported to Iran. He is now in Iran but wants to come back to Türkiye. However, there is a code on his name and a ban to enter Türkiye for 18 months.\textsuperscript{138}

A deportation decision against a Syrian automatically cancels their legal status. Several of these decisions have been successfully appealed before the İzmir Administrative Court. After the court decides in favour of the refugee, their temporary protection status is reactivated. However, if a refugee cannot access a lawyer in the removal centre, a voluntary return form is likely to be signed due to psychological pressure. Most Syrians come back to Türkiye after being deported. Some of them do not want to apply for protection out of fear, and they remain unregistered. Psychological pressure is exerted on Syrians in removal centres. If they do not sign the voluntary return form, they are threatened with 1-year administrative detention. In some provinces, this creates a problem because the decisions granted by first-degree judges are final. Removal centres are managed like prisons. Even a decision not to prosecute does not prevent refugees from being detained for 6 months to 1 year in a removal centre. There are many operations and police raids relating to ISIS, with some investigations having no objective grounds. People are taken into custody. Non-prosecution decisions can take 3 days but someone in the same situation can be detained for 10 months.\textsuperscript{139}

There have been returns from the İzmir removal centre judged not to be ‘voluntary’. People reported they were forced to sign the forms by threat or were given the wrong information,\textsuperscript{140} although generally they are encouraged to take up voluntary return. There were also allegations that an illiterate Syrian had his finger broken while forcing him to put his fingerprint on the form. ‘Real’ voluntary returns took longer. For instance, a voluntary return of a Pakistani refugee took three months.\textsuperscript{141} People who do not agree to suggested returns can be transferred to Gaziantep and Hatay removal centres, where practices such as ill-treatment and forcing refugees to sign voluntary return forms under physical pressure are reportedly more common.\textsuperscript{142} The İzmir branch of the Turkish Red Crescent (Türk Kızılay) and PDMM signed a protocol allowing the Turkish Red Crescent to supervise the signature of voluntary return forms in 2020. As of the summer of 2020, there had been no UNHCR, Türk Kızılay or any other NGO supervision for return forms in İzmir.\textsuperscript{143}

In the southeast region, voluntary returns from removal centres are ongoing and those returned are mostly Syrians. Similar to last year, there is no UNHCR supervision over voluntary returns that take place from removal centres.

Activists believe there were some voluntary returns in 2020 due to the difficult economic situation and COVID-19. Voluntary returns from PDMMs were chosen more freely than those from removal centres. In 2020 in İstanbul people who want to return from Kumkapı PDMM were thought to return on a more or less voluntary basis although independent researchers and NGOs could not attend ‘voluntary return’ interviews and UNHCR attends very rarely. This means that little was known about the information given to people at the meetings and whether they were provided with detailed information about the situation in Syria. There was a case from Ayvacık (Çanakkale) removal centre where an Iranian signed a voluntary return form after his international protection application was rejected. His wife said that it was voluntary and UNHCR reportedly checked the situation of this person as well.

Article 60(a) LFIP on assisted voluntary return was amended in December 2019 to add that in-kind or cash support can be provided to persons deemed appropriate by the DGMM in cases of voluntary return to their country of origin.¹⁴⁴ There were no cases of this reported in practice in 2020. There is perceived to be a lack of funding for voluntary returns. IOM has a protocol with PMM and IOM supports them in buying flight tickets and supervising voluntary return processes.

Several stakeholders reported that people who have been persuaded to sign a voluntary return form from removal centres generally come back to Türkiye. The temporary protection regulation provides a legal opportunity for re-arrivals, as it is stipulated in the law that re-application will reactivate IDs. In practice, however, people either cannot access registration or their applications are rejected and they have to appeal against the decision.¹⁴⁵

In early days of COVID-19, the borders were closed for a long time. Deportations were suspended from March to September 2020 due to COVID-19. People who could not be deported from removal centres were released. Deportations resumed again in September 2020 and Afghan, Pakistan, and Syrian nationals were deported, however, fewer people were deported compared to 2019. Most of those who were deported were involved in criminal cases. Ex-convicts were also deported on the pretext of public order. Previously, when lawyers filed an application to suspend deportation, written notices had to be sent to PMM. Due to COVID-19, lawyers can now notify them via e-mail. This is an example of good practice.¹⁴⁶

In one case in 2021, although the deportation decision was overruled, a foreign national was kept in the removal center for one year. This was based on concerns they would ‘threaten public order’. Peace courts usually make decisions arbitrarily and without justification. Administrative detention decisions about vulnerable groups are generally overturned in peace courts. There is no consistency because the evaluation is subjective.¹⁴⁷

2.3. The complaint procedure before the Constitutional Court

An individual complaints procedure is available before the Constitutional Court, which is styled after the individual complaints procedure of the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) and is partially aimed at reducing the high number of complaints against Türkiye at the ECtHR. Persons can file an individual complaint with the Constitutional Court on claims of a violation of "any of the fundamental rights and liberties provided by the Turkish Constitution and safeguarded by the ECHR and its Protocols within 30 days of the exhaust of all existing administrative and judicial remedies.\textsuperscript{148}

While individual complaints to the Constitutional Court do not carry suspensive effect, the applicants can request an urgent interim measure as per Article 73 of the Rules of Court on account of “serious risk on the applicant’s life, physical and moral integrity”. This urgent application procedure by the Constitutional Court, in situations of imminent risk of deportation where the person concerned alleges a risk to his or her life or risk of torture if returned, is similar in nature to the Rule 39 procedure of the ECtHR.

Although the individual complaint procedure at Türkiye’s Constitutional Court does not have automatic suspensive effect and a separate interim measure request must be filed and decided by the Court on a case-by-case basis, the ECtHR found in \textit{Sakkal and Fares v. Türkiye} that this procedure constituted an effective remedy, taking into consideration case law from the Constitutional Court which has halted deportations from Türkiye. The first interim measure was given in 2014 in a case of an Algerian political dissident who had been tortured and imprisoned due to his political opinions.\textsuperscript{149} In practice, the Constitutional Court seems to grant interim measures on different issues such as access to a lawyer or prevention of \textit{refoulement}.\textsuperscript{150}

After the entry into force of Emergency Decree No 676, the only effective recourse for preventing removal was a complaint before the Constitutional Court together with a request for interim measures. This changed in 2019. The Court had delivered a pilot judgment in the case of \textit{Y.T.} on 12 June 2018, launching a pilot procedure to examine whether requests for interim measures stemmed from a structural problem to protection from \textit{refoulement} and, if so, what measures should be taken.\textsuperscript{151} In its decision published in July 2019,\textsuperscript{152} the Court said that Articles 53(3) and 54 of LFIP should be revised and that appeals against removal should have suspensive effect, especially where deportation could create a structural problem and severe human rights violations. The Court gave the authorities one year to make the necessary legal changes otherwise the Court would examine all applications filed requesting an interim measure to stop deportations in substance. According to the Court, there were 1,545 such applications between 29 October 2016 and 8 April 2019. The Court also accepted the request of the applicant to not be deported and awarded compensation and legal fees. A legal amendment to these and other articles of the LFIP was made in December 2019.\textsuperscript{153}

Some lawyers still apply to the Constitutional Court when an administrative body unlawfully deports their client or to secure a possible application to ECtHR.\textsuperscript{154} Where the Constitutional Court grants interim measures, it is up to the legal representative of the applicant to transmit the order to the PDMM so as to prevent the execution of the removal decision.\textsuperscript{155} There have been cases where deportations took place due to the failure of lawyers to inform the PDMM of existing interim measures.

One lawyer in 2021 said that the lack of applying to the Court for interim measures had created problems, with unlawful deportations executed due to the lack of preventive measures.\textsuperscript{156} Another stakeholder commented that after the \textit{Y.T.} judgment, the Constitutional Court started to issue negative reviews or inadmissibility decisions. In addition, the Constitutional Court has established new, concerning

According to LFIP, the PDMM is the responsible authority for receiving and registering applications for international protection.\textsuperscript{158}

3.1. Applications on the territory

Applications for international protection are made to the “Governorates” “in person”, indicating that applicants are expected to physically approach the PDMM and personally present their request.\textsuperscript{159} Applications for international protection may not be made by a lawyer or legal representative. However, a person can apply on behalf of accompanying family members, defined to cover the spouse, minor children and dependent adult children as per Article 3(1)(a) LFIP.\textsuperscript{160} Where a person wishes to file an application on behalf of adult family members, the latter written approval needs to be taken.

According to the law, for applicants who are physically unable to approach the PDMM premises for making an international protection request, officials from the PDMM may be directed to the applicant’s location in order to process the application.\textsuperscript{161} In the same way, registration interviews with unaccompanied minors and other persons who are unable to report to the designated registration premises in the province may be carried out in the locations where they are.\textsuperscript{162} There is no indication that these provisions have been applied in practice so far.

Article 65 LFIP does not impose any time limits on persons for making an application as such, whether on the territory, in detention or at the border. However, Article 65(4) appears to impose on applicants the responsibility of approaching competent authorities “within a reasonable time” as a precondition for being spared from punishment for illegal entry or stay. The assessment of whether an application has been made “within a reasonable time” is to be made on an individual basis.\textsuperscript{163}

The LFIP states that applications for international protection shall be registered by the PDMM.\textsuperscript{164} Applicants can request and shall be provided interpretation services for the purpose of the registration interview and later the personal interview.\textsuperscript{165}

Access to the international protection procedure changed substantially in 2018. Whereas a “joint registration” arrangement was previously in place between PDMM and UNHCR, whereby UNHCR and its implementing partner SGDD-ASAM registered applications in Ankara and then directed applicants to “satellite cities” to lodge their applications with the PDMM,\textsuperscript{166} on 10 September 2018 UNHCR terminated its registration activities in Türkiye.\textsuperscript{167} UNHCR still has a role to promote access to and the provision of protection.

Applications for international protection are now registered solely by the PDMM in any of the 81 provinces. In practice, however, if the PDMM approached by an asylum seeker cannot receive his or her application, it directs the person to a “satellite city” with a view to registering the application there.\textsuperscript{168} Applicants are expected to register at the PDMM of the assigned “satellite city” within 15 days. Failure to appear within 15 days leads to the application being considered as withdrawn (“cancelled”). PMM does not provide assistance with transportation costs but can refer applicants to NGOs such as SGDD-ASAM for assistance.

Article 69 LFIP does not lay down any time limits for the completion of registration by the PDMM, although its Implementing Regulation, the Regulation on Foreigners and International Protection (RFIP), requires applications to be recorded “within the shortest time on the institutional software system” of PMM.\textsuperscript{169} The RFIP provides that application authorities shall notify the applicant a date for his or her registration interview during the application if possible, otherwise at a later stage.\textsuperscript{170}

In practice, the takeover of the process by PMM in September 2018 resulted in obstacles to access to the asylum procedure. Issues persisted in 2019 and arbitrariness increased after the takeover of registration of non-Syrians.\textsuperscript{171} It is difficult to assess the overall system since there is no standardised application.\textsuperscript{172} However, the main public policy has seemed to be to leave people unregistered to push them to leave Türkiye, especially Afghans, except in vulnerable cases.\textsuperscript{173} Afghans are thus kept as ‘unregistered irregular migrants’ in the migration system or they are treated under the accelerated procedure when their application for international protection is received.\textsuperscript{174} In 2020, problems were compounded by COVID-19.

The registration interview serves to compile information and any documents from the applicant to identify identity, flight reasons, and experiences after departure from country of origin, travel route, mode of arrival in Türkiye, and any previous applications for international protection in another country.\textsuperscript{175} The PDMM may carry out a body search and checks on the personal belongings of applicants in order to confirm that all documents have been presented.\textsuperscript{176} Where an applicant is unable to present documents to establish his or her identity, the registration authorities shall rely on an analysis of personal data and information gathered from other research. Where such identification measures fail to provide the relevant information, the applicant’s own statements shall be accepted to be true.\textsuperscript{177}

Where there are concerns that an applicant may have a medical condition threatening public health, he or she may be referred to a medical check.\textsuperscript{178} Information on any special needs shall also be recorded.\textsuperscript{179} Since the termination of UNHCR registration activities in 2018, it is unclear how this is handled by the PDMM. It appears, nevertheless, that registration is exceptionally allowed for asylum seekers facing emergencies such as pregnancy or severe illness, who are registered in order to make sure that they get medical assistance.\textsuperscript{180} One stakeholder in 2021 estimated that since 2018, the registration rate had dropped 50% for international protection status.\textsuperscript{181}

At the time of applying, the asylum seeker must provide a hand-written, signed statement containing information about the international protection application in a language in which he or she is able to express themselves. The statement shall contain specific elements including the reasons for entering Türkiye, as well as any special needs of the applicant.\textsuperscript{182} Illiterate applicants are exempt from this requirement. Furthermore, the PDMM shall also obtain any supporting documents that the applicant may have with him or her and fill in a standard International Protection Application Notification Form, which will be delivered to the DGMM Headquarters within 24 hours.

At the end of the registration interview, all the information recorded on the screen of the electronic system must be precisely read back to the applicant who will have the opportunity to make corrections.\textsuperscript{183} A printed version of the registration form filled in electronically is also handed to the applicant.\textsuperscript{184}

The law states that the applicant will receive an International Protection Applicant Identification Card upon completion of registration.\textsuperscript{185} The Ministry carries out the renewal and extension of International Protection Applicant Identification Card.\textsuperscript{186} As of 24 December 2019, the LFIP provides that this document is also issued to applicants falling under the Accelerated Procedure or the inadmissibility provisions,\textsuperscript{187} and the obligation to renew Identification Cards every six months was abolished.\textsuperscript{188}

Following this reform, the PDMM no longer issues a Registration Document when directing the asylum seeker to the assigned “satellite city” with a view to registering the international protection application. The only documentation the applicant receives is the International Protection Applicant Identification Card that is valid for six months after having registered the application with the PDMM at the appointed province.\textsuperscript{189}

This means that asylum seekers are required to travel to the assigned province without being provided documentation to attest their intention to seek international protection. In practice, people are often apprehended during police controls throughout the country and are thus at risk of being transferred to a Removal Centre (see Detention of Asylum Seekers).

Registrations of international/temporary protection were suspended from March to June 2020 in almost every city in Türkiye due to COVID-19. International and temporary protection applications could be submitted in very few cities and this information was not shared publicly. There were rumours that applications were open in Yalova one day, but then that they were closed after two weeks. Both unregistered refugees and new arrivals had problems accessing the procedure and registration.

There were additional problems such as physically accessing PDMM buildings due to COVID-19 measures as with most other public institutions. A HES code, which is a personal code implemented by the Ministry of Health in order to track positive COVID-19 cases, was requested from lawyers to enter PDMM buildings in İzmir. In İstanbul lawyers could not enter PDMM buildings at all, especially Kumkapi. Lawyers could only talk to the security at the door, not even someone from the administrative staff. The security guard took a note of messages and passed them on to the administrative office. Communication between the administration and lawyers was difficult, thus raising concerns as regards the right to an effective remedy. In Van, even applicants with UNHCR refugee status were summoned and notified that their application had been rejected. The most problematic group was those whose applications had been deemed withdrawn by PMM. In the Central Anatolia and the Marmara region, a HES code was also mandatory to enter the PDMM buildings and this caused problems for first-time applicants and refugees whose applications were rejected since they did not have an ID number and could not apply for a HES code. Those who did not have a smartphone also had difficulties in getting a code and entering PDMMs.

During COVID-19, signature obligations were relatively flexible for 4-5 months. PDMMs did not work at full capacity and some of the officers were working from home. Many refugees stayed in İstanbul without registration. Refugees tried to go to provinces of registration without a road permit and in violation their signature obligations; however, they could not be registered. Refugees in İzmir, Muğla, Aydin, the Marmara Region and Central Anatolia reported not being able to reach administrative staff (migration officers) at the PDMM offices with the security guards ‘informing’ them what to do. Security guards even referred people to other cities. This became common practice across Türkiye, which is a concern considering security guards have no legal knowledge. In Marmara a person who had signed a voluntary return form wanted to apply again. Even though they had the right to re-apply, a security guard told them that they could not.

In 2021, the registration system remained the biggest obstacle to accessing fundamental rights and services. Registrations for temporary protection have been closed for over 6 years in bigger provinces. Family reunification has become difficult. After the recent increase in arrivals from Afghanistan, access to registration for international protection became almost impossible. People cannot live in the province where they are registered due to economic reasons and so go to bigger cities. However, they can only access fundamental rights and services in satellite provinces.

One stakeholder estimated that 16 provinces were closed to international protection applications in 2021.

Except for Ankara, all of the 16 closed provinces were on the coast (Aydın, Muğla, Bursa, Kocaeli, etc.). 15 provinces including Ankara, Antalya, Bursa, İzmir, and Hatay were closed to registration for temporary protection. Another stakeholder included Şanlıurfa in the list of cities closed to registration. In Van, for a long time it has also been impossible to access the procedures. Iranian, Iraqi, Afghan nationals (and other groups under international protection) cannot access asylum procedures in Van, which do not function at all. The PDMM does not accept applications. When asylum seekers try to approach PDMM, they are immediately put under administrative detention; some have even been pushed back directly. For example, a young woman entered Türkiye in 2021 with her passport, but her asylum application has not been accepted since September.

In the context of international protection, İstanbul, Ankara, and İzmir have been closed for registrations for about three years. Some cities like Ankara were closed to all registrations in 2021, including vulnerable groups. In İstanbul, they no longer accept vulnerable groups such as pregnant women as exceptional registrants. In Şanlıurfa, a 1-2-year-old toddler was not given a foreign identity card despite his family having registration. In Central Anatolia the number of cities receiving international protection and temporary protection applications sharply decreased in 2021. Single men without vulnerabilities found it particularly difficult to register their application. Some cities in Central Anatolia, however, did prioritise applications from women who were victims of SGBV and who were able to access protection immediately.

In İzmir one stakeholder reported that out of 300 international protection applications sent to the PDMM approximately seventy of them were called in and given an ID. The rest were not contacted at all. They also reported it was not possible to apply if the applicant spoke a language for which there was no translator or without the help of a lawyer. A young and single applicant, nine months pregnant, started her life in İzmir, but was transferred to Uşak. One person from an Iranian gay couple was registered and working in Eskişehir. The had experienced trauma and had a report from a private psychiatrist that he should not be left alone. Despite this they were sent to Sivas as the satellite province. A lease contract is needed for the registration there but they could not find a house.

In big cities, officers in PDMMs write a city name on a post-it note and send applicants to other cities. People who can no longer register or whose registration has been canceled try to apply for a humanitarian residence permit. It is not possible to make an appointment online for residence applications. There is always a large group waiting in line for hours. There are Syrians who have been in Türkiye for over 10 years and have not been registered in any city. In one case, a sick child registered in Muğla was referred to a hospital in İstanbul, but he had to be registered in Istanbul to continue his treatment. An application was made to the juvenile court for an interim measure, but the judge did not take any action for 3-4 months, then asked for a pedagogical evaluation before rejecting the case because the child applicant was registered in Muğla.

Inconsistent practices among PDMMs are one of the biggest challenges in terms of registration and undermine access to registration in Türkiye. 29,256 persons registered for international protection in 2021 down slightly from 31,334 in 2020, so some registrations did take place. Some groups may have been affected more than others. The negative attitude of the authorities in the PDMM usually is triggered when they think the individual fled to Türkiye for economic reasons or medical services. In addition, PDMM practices change frequently. Sometimes even lawyers have difficulties accessing the PDMM buildings.

Because the system is so complex, there are rumours of corruption and bribery, including in İstanbul and Samsun.202 Another stakeholder reported that registration had become ‘exceptional’ for nearly all groups. Regardless of the applicant’s vulnerabilities, the only way to access registration was by getting help or support from a known NGO or UNHCR.203

As the majority of those arriving in 2021 could not access registration, this meant they could not benefit from basic services. People in precarious situations isolate themselves and do not leave their houses in order not to encounter the police and be deported. IDs are taken away from people who have a deportation decision or are summoned to leave the country. After filing a lawsuit, their IDs are handed back, but their foreign identity numbers remain deactivated, meaning they also cannot access basic services like health and education. There are also problems if individuals go to other provinces without getting permission from PDMM and if they violate the signature obligations. Therefore, in addition to the difficulties in accessing registration, there are also problems in fulfilling reporting commitments.204

The EU launched a new project with Türkiye under the Instrument for Pre-Accession Assistance (IPA II) in 2021 to support the asylum-seeking processes. One component of the project is dedicated to strengthening RSD processes (including interviews, decisions, etc.), as well as to strengthen quality assurance processes within PMM. The project will support the PMM quality assurance board to ensure uniformity of treatment for applications in 81 cities.205

In early 2022, the previously unconfirmed ‘satellite city’ policy was publicly confirmed with the announcement of the ‘deconcentration policy.’206 Neighborhoods with a 25% refugee density had already been completely closed to registration for the last two years, including Fatih and Esenyurt in İstanbul. From May 2022, it is against the law for any region or area in Türkiye to have a population of foreign nationals that is more than one-quarter of the total population. This includes both people who have made Türkiye their permanent home and those who are merely visiting the country. This rule has been given the name the 25 percent limit or the 25 percent rule. 781 neighbourhoods in different provinces are now closed to foreign nationals seeking address registrations for temporary protection, international protection, and residence permits, as well as changes to their city of residence if they are foreign nationals with residence permits or are under temporary or international protection, with the exception of newborns and instances of nuclear family reunification. Because of this, non-Turkish national will be able to select any of these 781 neighborhoods in Türkiye as their registered address for official matters, nor will they be able to ask the authorities to change their address to any of these places. Adana, Ankara, İstanbul, İzmir, Muğla, and Antalya are some of the cities that fall into this category, along with a great number of others.207

The policy aims to transfer refugees from provinces with a high refugee density to areas with a lower density. From a legal perspective, it restricts freedom of both residence and travel which may not be a proportional response to concerns of public order particularly as those it effects are likely to remain under temporary protection status indefinitely. Transferring people to a city where they do not know anyone may also be unreasonable. It can have particularly devastating effects on vulnerable and marginalized groups such as LGBTI+. In addition, some of the regulations limiting fundamental rights and freedoms, especially for Syrian nationals, are foreseen in the Temporary Protection Regulation, not by law.208

3.2. Applications from detention and at the border

Where an application for international protection is presented to law enforcement agencies on the territory or at border gates, the PDMM shall be notified “at once” and shall process the application. Applications for international protection indicated by persons in detention shall also be notified to the PDMM “at once”. In addition to Removal Centres for pre-removal detention on territory, there is one facility in the transit zone of Ankara Esenboğa Airport, which serve to detain persons intercepted in transit or during an attempt to enter Türkiye (see Place of Detention).

Persons whose international protection application is received whilst in detention are released from the Removal Centre or police station and are issued an Administrative Surveillance Decision Form (İdari Gözetim Kararı Sonlandırma Tebliğ Formu), also known as “T6”, requesting them to regularly report to a designated PDMM. This may or may not be the PDMM of their province of residence (see Alternatives to Detention). The “T6” forms became more common in 2018. In 2019 in Yalova and Karabük, there was a trend in forcing non-Syrians to get a T6 form to be appointed to a specific city. In İstanbul, removal centres granted a travel permit with the T6 form in 2019 so there is no risk of detention or deportation whilst travelling to the referral city.

Despite the legal safeguards provided by the LFIP to secure access to the asylum procedure, people in Removal Centres continue to encounter severe difficulties in having their applications for international protection registered by the PDMM. In Van, an Iranian asylum seeker in the removal centre in 2019 received an interview date for 1.5 years later. The situation was no easier in 2020 with COVID-19. Stakeholders were not aware of any application for international protection from a removal centre or at the border that was accepted in 2020.

People in the removal centre in the Central Anatolia region were not provided information about applying for international protection unless they could access an NGO. NGOs advised clients to submit two petitions to the removal centre management, one to request a legal aid lawyer and the other to apply for international protection. These petitions were not forwarded to bar associations and legal aid centres, especially in Kayseri, although they were in Erzurum. There was a person in Kayseri whose petition to request a legal aid lawyer was disregarded 5 times before being successful on his 6th attempt.

It can also be difficult to apply for international protection from a removal centre in the Marmara region. Legal notifications are not made to legal aid lawyers in writing so lawyers have to call the removal centre as often as they can. Cases are time sensitive, especially in accelerated procedures, yet in 2020 it was not possible to call removal centres every day due to the pandemic. Malatya removal centre was also problematic for applications for protection.

Access to the procedure from detention also concerns persons readmitted by Türkiye. Whereas Article 64 RFIP entrusts the Ministry of Interior with the establishment of a separate framework of procedures for persons readmitted by Türkiye pursuant to readmission agreements, there has not been any such instrument regulating the access of readmitted persons to the international protection procedure to date.

In the context of the implementation of the EU-Türkiye statement between 4 April 2016 and 31 January 2020, Türkiye readmitted a total of 2,054 persons from Greece, of whom 738 originated from Pakistan, 373 from Syria, 204 from Algeria, 140 from Afghanistan, 127 from Iraq and 104 from Bangladesh. PMM has established a specific code, “V89” entitled “Greece – return”, but stakeholders have not referred to this being used in practice. 139 people were readmitted from Greece in 2020. Readmission operations were stopped as of 16 March 2020 and Türkiye was still not accepting readmissions as of April 2022 due to public health concerns and the COVID-19 pandemic. See the AIDA Country Report: Greece 2021.

Reports on the post-return human rights situation of Syrians document serious human rights violations such as arbitrary detention and deportation without access to legal aid and international protection (see also Legal Assistance for Review of Detention).

C. Procedures

1. Regular procedure

1.1. General (scope, time limits)

Applications for international protection shall be examined and decided upon by PMM. “Migration experts” from the Department of International Protection are in charge of processing applications at Headquarters and the PDMM.

A decision shall be issued within 6 months from registration. However, this is not a binding time limit, as the law states that in case an application cannot be decided within 6 months the applicant will be notified. In practice, severe delays are observed in the completion of the international protection procedure, against the backdrop of capacity shortages at the PDMM. Applicants may wait for years for a decision to be taken on their application.

225 Article 78 LFIP.
226 Article 78(1) LFIP.
227 Information provided by a lawyer of the İstanbul Bar Association, February 2019.
There are no statistics on the number of decisions taken by PMM in 2017-2021. The latest available statistics referred to 30,380 decisions taken in 2016, of which 23,886 were positive and 6,494 were negative.\footnote{DGMM, Annual Migration Report 2016, available in Turkish at: https://bit.ly/2TQdqU4, 74-75.} In İzmir in 2019, there were concerns that there was a quota for the number of positive decisions in a year after an applicant was told their application had been rejected for that reason. In İzmir PDMM international protection applications from those who have been recognised as refugees by UNHCR were generally not rejected in 2020,\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder in İzmir, February 2020.} although there had been a judgment from Bolu 1st Administrative Court where an Iranian recognized as a refugee by UNHCR had had his application for international protection rejected.\footnote{1st Administrative Court of Bolu, Case 2019/428, Decision 2019/700.} In İzmir in 2021 cases against the rejection of the application for international protection were generally rejected, regardless of the applicant’s nationality.\footnote{Information from a stakeholder, May 2021.} In 2021 in the Central Anatolia region PDMMs started to issue automated rejection decisions with no grounds. Most of the applicants had already been granted UNHCR refugee status but their applications were also rejected. There was no clear stance on this issue by UNHCR.

IP applications of people holding refugee status from UNHCR and living in TR for 10 years and 12 years were kept on shelves but in 2021 we observed that DGMM rejected those applications in mass. We believe that PDMM’s staff does not have the capacity to deal with international protection applications. For the last 1-2 years, international protection applications have been taken off the shelves and negative decisions have been made.

Overall, practice on the examination and the decision-making at first instance is not uniform across provinces. The quality of interviews, the assessment of evidence, the lack of identification of vulnerable groups, the lack of training of migration experts as well as the lack of available interpreters have been reported as particular concerns. Moreover, in certain cases Administrative Courts have also confirmed quality gaps at first instance. In 2020, there were concerns that negative decisions were issued without giving valid justifications.\footnote{Information from a stakeholder, March 2021.} Copies of the interview form are not usually shared, however, the PDMM office in Central Anatolia, Kayseri does give a copy of the interview form to the applicant. They have prepared new international protection guidelines and a new interview template. They state the reason for the rejection by checking the relevant box on the form. If they believe the applicant makes a false statement in the interview, they check that box but do not elaborate further on the applicable reasons.\footnote{Information from a stakeholder, March 2021.}

1.2. Prioritised examination and fast-track processing

Persons with special needs shall be “given priority with respect to all rights and proceedings” pertaining to the adjudication of international protection applications.\footnote{Article 67 LFIP.} In practice, despite the severe obstacles to Registration, persons with special needs such as women in advanced stages of pregnancy, persons with acute health needs, or unaccompanied children have benefitted from prioritisation in the registration of international protection applications at the PDMM.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, February 2019.} Detailed figures on the number of persons concerned by said prioritisation are not available, however.
1.3. Personal interview

Indicators: Regular Procedure: Personal Interview

1. Is a personal interview of the asylum seeker in most cases conducted in practice in the regular procedure?
   ☑ Yes ☐ No
   - If so, are interpreters available in practice, for interviews?
     ☑ Yes ☐ No

2. In the regular procedure, is the interview conducted by the authority responsible for taking the decision?
   ☑ Yes ☐ No

3. Are interviews conducted through video conferencing?
   - Frequently ☐ Rarely ☑ Never

4. Can the asylum seeker request the interviewer and the interpreter to be of a specific gender?
   ☐ Yes ☑ No
   - If so, is this applied in practice, for interviews?
     ☐ Yes ☑ No

Under the regular procedure, the competent PDMM is required to carry out a personal interview with applicants within 30 days from registration, to be conducted by personnel trained in fields such as refugee law, human rights and country of origin information. Applicants are notified of the assigned place and date of their personal interview at the end of their Registration interview. If the interview cannot be held on the assigned date, a new interview date must be issued. The postponed interview date must be no earlier than 10 days after the previous appointment date. Additional interviews may be held with the applicant if deemed necessary. In practice, however, applicants face significant delays, often up to several months, before a first interview.

The applicant may be accompanied in the interview by: (a) family members; (b) his or her lawyer as an observer; (c) an interpreter; (ç) a psychologist, pedagogue, child expert or social worker; and (d) the legal representative where the applicant is a child.

Audio or video records of the interviews may be taken, though in current practice no such audio or video records are used.

Generally, practice is not uniform across provinces and the quality of the procedure depends on the case officer handling the application. There are two pilot decision centres located in İstanbul and Ankara. According to civil society and lawyers, however, the quality of interviews remains low in most PDMM. Overall, in 2019 stakeholders reported that refugee status determination (RSD) interviews were often not carried out under proper conditions, vulnerabilities were often not considered and Afghans’ applications for international protection seemed to be rejected by default. For instance, in Karabük police officers reportedly undertook RSD interviews and issued many rejections especially against Afghans. There had been no positive RSD decisions by early 2020 from the Gaziantep region. Afghans in particular received an automated rejection in Elazığ, Malatya and Adıyaman. In İzmir there was also an alleged increase in rejections of Afghan applications in 2019. In some cases, PMM notified new interview dates to those who had already been recognised as refugees by UNHCR - especially for Afghans registered in Denizli and Çanakkale. The number of rejections was high in these two cities in general. In Van the quality of RSD interviews decreased dramatically after the takeover by PMM. Problems continued in 2020 with additional issues accessing interpreters because of the pandemic – this is both because less people including interpreters were working generally, but also because there were problems with access to PDMM offices and detention centres for all stakeholders including interpreters.

Interviews do not depend on credible country of origin information (COI) or there are discriminatory practices against specific groups such as Kurdish people coming from Iraq. It is unclear whether the vulnerabilities of specific groups are considered. There seems to be a general tendency to find a way to reject applications and the legal grounds of rejected decisions are quite superficial.\(^{245}\)

In 2020, interviews were mostly not carried out from March to June in the context of COVID-19.

In 2020 the Constitutional Court ruled that a deportation decision of a Karachay Turk from the Russian Federation was based on an insufficient Country of Origin research as it did not take into consideration the non-refoulement principle and thus violated the prohibition of ill-treatment principle. The court awarded 3,000 TL (approx. 300 EUR at time of writing) as non-pecuniary damages.\(^{246}\)

In 2021, all stakeholders reported the biggest obstacle was accessing the procedure at all (see Registration of the asylum application).

Interpretation

Applicants shall be provided with interpretation services, if they so request, for the purpose of personal interviews carried out at application, registration and personal interview stages.\(^{247}\)

Regarding the quality of interpretation during personal interviews, the personal interview shall be postponed to a later date where the interview official identifies that the applicant and the interpreter have difficulties understanding each other.\(^{248}\) The interviewer shall inform the interpreter of the scope of the interview and the rules to be complied with.\(^{249}\)

In 2019, the lack of adequate numbers of interpreters at the PDMM remained a major difficulty. At times PDMMs have not accepted interpreters provided by civil society organisations if they are not interpreters under oath.\(^{250}\) In small cities, notaries are not willing to go to removal centres but removal centre administrations still request interpreters under oath.\(^{251}\) In smaller provinces, individuals from within the registered asylum seeker communities are brought in as interpreters. Applicants generally report concerns regarding such community interpreters’ observance of the confidentiality of the information they share and the quality of interpretation. There have also been concerns of people unofficially employed as interpreters by the authorities.

In most provinces, there are shortages or a lack of interpreters in specific rare languages spoken by applicants. Moreover, the number of female interpreters remains very low.\(^{252}\) Lack of sensitivity to and censorship of applicant's statements have also been reported in claims relating to sexual orientation or gender identity. Lawyers have expressed concerns about the quality of interpretation in removal centres including in important interviews on return. Problems persisted in 2020-2021.

In 2021, an applicant appealed against the negative decision on their international protection application issued by Aydin PDMM. It was claimed that they were not informed about the purpose and potential outcomes of the personal interview during which there were no interpreter present. The court dismissed the case ruling that applicant’s fear of persecution is not well grounded and their protection application was substantially economic.

Report

The interviewing official shall use a standard template called “International Protection Interview Form” to record the applicant’s statements during the personal interview. This form is a template consisting of a predefined set of questions that must be presented to the applicant covering basic biographic information, profile indicators, reasons for flight and fear of return, among other.

The interview official is required to read out the contents of the International Protection Interview Form to the applicant at the end of the interview and ask the applicant whether there are any aspects of the transcript that he or she wants to correct and whether there is any additional information he or she would like to present.

An interview report shall then be drafted at the end of the interview, and the applicant shall sign it and receive a copy. In practice, applicants are not given a copy of the interview report.

1.4. Appeal

Decisions must be communicated in writing. Notifications of negative decisions should lay down the objective reasons and legal grounds of the decision. Where an applicant is not represented by a lawyer, he or she shall also be informed about the legal consequences of the decision and applicable appeal mechanisms. Furthermore, the notification of all decisions within the scope of the LFIP shall give due consideration to the fact that the “persons concerned are foreign nationals” and a separate directive shall be issued by DGMM to provide specifics on modalities of written notifications. In practice, the decisions are in Turkish but translated by the PDMM into the language of applicants.

261 Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2018.
The LFIP provides two separate remedies against negative decisions issued in the regular procedure, one optional administrative appeal remedy and one judicial appeal remedy. When faced with a negative status decision by DGMM under the regular procedure, applicants may:

1. File an administrative appeal with the International Protection Evaluation Commissions (IPEC) within 10 days, and file an onward judicial appeal with the competent Administrative Court only if the initial administrative appeal is unsuccessful; or
2. Directly file a judicial appeal with the competent Administrative Court within 30 days.

In practice, the latter remedy is applied. Both types of appeals have automatic suspensive effect. Under the LFIP, applicants shall generally be allowed to remain in Türkiye until the full exhaustion of remedies provided by LFIP against negative decisions, subject to the derogation discussed in Removal and Refoulement.

There was a pilot project in 2020 to conduct e-Hearings but this did not involve the peace courts or administrative courts.

Court cases were delayed in March and April 2020 due to COVID 19 and legal statutory time limits were suspended from March to June 2020. In 2021, there were also delays. In İzmir, trial periods were extended in administrative law cases. Whereas previously a decision had been taken in 7-8 months, in 2021/ early 2022 one stakeholder had files pending for more than one year, without a hearing date.

Unregistered refugees still had difficulties entering public institutions due to the HES code application in 2021. They could not enter the courthouse and had to wait outside for their lawyers. In 20201 legal aid offices carried out assignment processes smoothly, with no exceptions or discrimination including against applicants having YTS (foreign terrorist fighter) codes. In criminal courts, the compulsory defense mechanism does not function as well. When the person is deprived of this right, the court should remind them of their right to have a defense lawyer. Some foreign citizens cases have been settled without the assistance of a lawyer at all.

The presiding judges of the Ankara 1st Administrative Court have changed, and the new judges no longer accept the assignment letters of legal aid lawyers - they require a power of attorney instead. This new application started in October 2021. They said that the legal aid assignment letter was only internal correspondence so the acceptance of the assignment letter was illegal.

1.4.1. Administrative appeal before IPEC

Negative decisions in the regular procedure may be appealed at the IPEC within 10 days of the written notification of the decision.

IPEC are envisioned as a specialised administrative appeal body and serve under the coordination of the DGMM Headquarters. One or more IPEC may be created under the auspices of either the DGMM Headquarters and/or PDMM.

Each Committee will be chaired by a DGMM representative, and will feature a second DGMM official as well as representatives of the Ministry of Justice and Ministry of Foreign Affairs. UNHCR may be invited to assign a representative in observer status.\footnote{Article 145 RFIP.} DGMM personnel assigned to the IPEC will be appointed for a period of 2 years whereas the Ministry of Justice and Ministry of Foreign Affairs representatives will be appointed for one-year term. IPEC are envisioned to serve as full-time specialised asylum tribunals as members will not be assigned any additional duties.\footnote{Article 146 and 147 RFIP.}

IPEC are competent to evaluate and decide appeals against the following decisions:\footnote{Article 149 RFIP.}

\begin{itemize}
  \item Negative status decisions issued in the regular procedure;
  \item Other negative decisions on applicants and international protection status holders, not pertaining to international protection status matters as such;
  \item Cessation or Withdrawal of status decisions.
\end{itemize}

On the other hand, decisions on administrative detention, inadmissibility decisions and decisions in the accelerated procedure are outside the competence of IPEC.

IPEC review the initial DGMM decision on both facts and law.\footnote{Article 100(1) RFIP.} The Commission may request the full case file from DGMM if deemed necessary. IPEC are authorised to interview applicants if they deem necessary or instruct the competent PDMM to hold an additional interview with the applicant.

Whereas the LFIP does not lay down a time limit for the finalisation of appeals filed with IPEC, Article 100(3) RFIP provides that the Commission shall decide on the appeal application and notify the applicant within 15 days of receiving the application, which may be extended by 5 more days.

IPEC do not have the authority to directly overturn DGMM decisions. The Commission may either reject the appeal and thereby endorse the initial DGMM decision, or it may request DGMM to reconsider its initial decision in terms of facts and law.\footnote{Article 100(2) RFIP.} Therefore, decisions by IPEC cannot be considered as binding on DGMM. If DGMM chooses to stick to its initial negative decision, the applicant will have to file a consequent judicial appeal with the competent Administrative Court.

In the past, IPEC did not seem to examine appeals against negative decisions. In one known case of a lawyer having submitted an appeal to IPEC, the lawyer has not received any information for several months.\footnote{Information provided by a lawyer of the İzmir Bar Association, March 2019.} It seems from lawyers and experts in the field that the IPEC is not an effective administrative appeal mechanism and applicants prefer directly filing a judicial appeal before the Administrative Court.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2018.}

\subsection*{1.4.2. Judicial appeal at the Administrative Court}

Negative decisions in the regular procedure may also be directly appealed at the competent Administrative Courts within 30 days of the written notification of the decision.\footnote{Article 80(1)(ç) LFIP.} There is no requirement for applicants to first exhaust the IPEC step before they file a judicial appeal against a negative decision. However, if they choose to file an administrative appeal with IPEC first, depending on the outcome of the IPEC appeal, they can appeal a negative IPEC decision onward at the Administrative Court.
Under Turkish law, Administrative Court challenges have to be filed in the area where the act or decision in question was taken.\(^{279}\)

While the LFIP has not created specialised asylum and immigration courts, Türkiye’s High Council of Judges and Prosecutors shall determine which Administrative Court chamber in any given local jurisdiction shall be responsible for appeals brought on administrative acts and decisions within the scope of the LFIP.\(^{280}\) In 2015, the Council passed a decision to designate the 1st Chamber of each Administrative Court as responsible for appeals against decisions within the scope of LFIP. That said, these competent chambers continue to deal with all types of caseloads and do not exclusively serve as asylum and immigration appeal bodies. There have been concerns in the past about the quality of decisions and the high turnover of judges in magistrates’ courts meaning they do not always have time to become knowledgeable on this type of case.\(^{281}\)

There are no time limits imposed on Administrative Courts to decide on appeals against negative decisions in the regular procedure. Administrative Court applications are normally adjudicated in a written procedure. In theory, an applicant can request a hearing, which may or may not be granted by the competent court.

Administrative Courts are mandated to review the PDMM decision both on facts and law. If the application is successful, the judgment annuls the PDMM decision, but does not overturn it as such. According to administrative law, the first instance authority is obligated to either revise the challenged act or decision or appeal the Administrative Court decision to Council of State (Danıştay) within 30 days.\(^{282}\)

Case-law of the Administrative Courts confirm that there are persisting gaps in the quality of first instance decisions. The Administrative Courts of Ankara and İstanbul are regarded as the most expert courts in refugee law issues. Both courts quite diligently examine whether the negative decisions on international protection application are in line with the non-refoulement principle and have annulled decisions based on an incorrect assessment on the part of the DGMM. For instance, in a case of Christian Iranian applicant,\(^{283}\) the Administrative Court of Ankara rejected the argument of the PMM and ruled that, according to Article 93 LFIP, the PMM should have collected information and evaluated the claim based on objective and subjective evidence such as the current condition of Christians in Iran based on UNHCR and international NGOs’ reports, as well as the personal story of the applicant. The court also noted that the DGMM should have assessed in each case whether the applicant should be protected either as a refugee, conditional refugee, or under subsidiary protection.

However, in 2021 one stakeholder noted a more ‘statist’ approach, beginning to dominate the administrative court in Ankara. This has led to a less favourable attitude to granting ‘privileges’ to foreign citizens and is probably linked to rising xenophobia in the country. Courts of other provinces consult the Ankara Administrative Court regarding refugee cases, so this negative attitude could spread throughout Türkiye.\(^{284}\)

Decisions in İzmir started to become inconsistent in 2021 and the quality of decisions was poor compared to previous years.

\(^{279}\) In Türkiye, not all provinces have Administrative Courts in location. Smaller provinces which do not have an Administrative Court in location are attended by courts operating under the auspices of the nearest Administrative Court. The Administrative Court of each province is divided into several chambers which are designated with numbers.

\(^{280}\) Article 101 LFIP.

\(^{283}\) 1st Administrative Court of Ankara, Decision No 2015/849, 22 April 2015.

\(^{284}\) Information from a stakeholder, May 2022.
In 2021 Manisa PDMM rejected a Baha’i family’s application claiming that Baha’is are not oppressed in Iran. This case is pending before the Ankara Administrative Court, but first instance courts have rejected similar cases in other provinces. In early 2022, the Ordu Administrative Court rejected the appeal of a person who converted his religion. It can be appealed, but Ordu is linked to the Samsun Regional Administrative Court, and Samsun RAC generally gives out negative decisions. It is not possible to file a complaint to the Constitutional Court or the ECtHR until a deportation decision is issued. In practice, while waiting for this deportation decision, the foreign identity number of the applicant gets deactivated. This means that people cannot access basic services such as health and education. When you appeal against the rejection of the international protection application, it gets activated again. But, it gets deactivated once you receive a final rejection decision about the international protection application. In addition, if a deportation decision is issued, the applicant’s foreign identity number does not get reactivated. This is one way that foreign citizens feel pressure to apply for voluntary return and leave Türkiye. Putting barriers to access fundamental rights and services is used as a tool of oppression.

1.4.3. Onward appeal before the Regional Administrative Court and the Council of State

Applicants have the possibility of filing an onward appeal with the Regional Administrative Court and then the Council of State within 30 days. There is no time limit for the Regional Administrative Court and the Council of State to decide on the application. The Council of State decision on the onward appeal will constitute the final decision on the application since it cannot be further appealed.

It is difficult to give an exact number of refused and accepted decisions by the Regional Administrative Court and the Council of State. However, the following cases provide examples from case law:
- In a case rejected by the Administrative Court of Ankara, the Council State approved the court’s decision on the international protection application of an Afghan family who had stated in their personal interview that their reason of entering Türkiye was “to access better healthcare for their two disabled daughters” which is not a legal basis for international protection.
- In another case concerning an Iranian applicant who did not appear before the PDMM of the assigned satellite city, the Council of State approved the rejection decision of the Administrative Court of Konya which had ruled that the applicant had not presented any evidence or statement on his delay in discharging his administrative duty. The applicant had claimed that “he was under depression during this time” in his appeal before the Council of State.

All applicants for and beneficiaries of international protection have a right to be represented by an attorney in relation to “all acts and decisions within the scope of the International Protection section of the LFIP”, under the condition that they pay for the lawyer’s fees themselves.\(^{290}\)

In principle, a notarised power of attorney is required for a lawyer to represent the asylum seeker,\(^ {291}\) unless the applicant benefits from the Legal Aid Service, in which case the appointment letter is deemed sufficient to represent the applicant. That said, legal aid lawyers have reported being unable to enter the premises of PDMM without a power of attorney - particularly younger lawyers.\(^ {292}\) In 2019 in Sivas and Kırıkkale, there were judgments where the court ruled against charging lawyers representing refugee applicants without a power of attorney 100 TL (around 15 EUR).\(^ {293}\)

As per the Union of Notaries Circular 2016/3 of 2 March 2016, the International Protection Applicant Identification Card is included in the list of documents accepted by public notaries. Still, the power of attorney requirement entails additional financial costs, which vary depending on location, and poses substantial obstacles to applicants in detention.

1.5.1. Legal assistance at first instance

Lawyers and legal representatives can accompany applicants during the personal interview.\(^ {294}\) Furthermore, lawyers and legal representatives are guaranteed access to all documents in the file and may obtain copies, with the exception of documents pertaining to national security, protection of public order and prevention of crime.\(^ {295}\) International protection applicants and status holders are also free to seek counselling services provided by NGOs.\(^ {296}\)

These safeguards, however, are inscribed as “freedoms” as opposed to “entitlements” that would create a positive obligation on the state to secure the actual supply and provision of legal counselling, assistance and representation services. In some cases, not necessarily linked to the international protection procedure, DGMM has prohibited lawyers from providing oral counselling to clients in the absence of a power of attorney.

The actual supply of free of charge and quality legal assistance to asylum seekers in Türkiye remains limited mainly due to practical obstacles. That said, EU funding under the Facility for Refugees in Türkiye was directed to UNHCR and the Union of Turkish Bar Associations (UTBA) for a €5million project launched in January 2018 for the provision legal aid to asylum seekers and refugees in 18 provinces.\textsuperscript{297} This led to improvements in the field, as more bar associations have become involved in the area of international and temporary protection. The bar associations of the 18 provinces covered by the legal aid project (Ankara, İzmir, İstanbul, Gaziantep, Şanlıurfa, Antakya, Kayseri, Adana, Denizli, Aydın, Bursa, Çanakkale, Kilis, Mersin, Trabzon, Edirne, Van, Erzurum) have set up separate lists of lawyers specially trained in refugee law to deal inter alia with international protection procedures. Only specially trained lawyers are eligible for taking on a case,\textsuperscript{298} although several stakeholders in 2021 noted that training sessions were run for a very high number of lawyers at once. This had caused some concerns about the quality of the training and the impact of lawyers less well-trained working on cases.\textsuperscript{299}

Cases can concern deportation, international or temporary protection procedures, and civil law disputes. Labour and criminal proceedings are excluded.\textsuperscript{300} As most deportation decisions are based on LFIP 54, bd-k, for public security, public health, and links to terrorist organizations, most deportation assignments do not fall within this project's scope.

In 2020, three provinces were added to the UTBA project: Eskişehir, Sakarya and Çankırı. A new legal clinic will be opened in Kilis in 2021. According to UNHCR, 3,800 refugees and asylum seekers received advice through legal clinics in 2020.\textsuperscript{301}

Overall, the project has been seen as extremely beneficial.\textsuperscript{302} Benefits have included an increase in refugees' access to justice and information, as evidenced by information materials on display in removal centres targeted by the project but not in others, which are not project cities.\textsuperscript{303} Some concerns have been expressed that the lawyers are not assigned quickly enough in cases that are time-sensitive such as deportation cases. In addition, legal aid budgets are determined according to the number of lawyers and citizens in the province but non-citizens such as applicants for international protection are not considered when the budget is planned.\textsuperscript{304} There have also been concerns expressed whether people issued with a security code are able to access legal aid under the scheme although the situation on that point is not clear.\textsuperscript{305}

Requests for legal aid can be issued from an asylum seeker, a third party or a Removal Centre. Civil society organisations are the main source of referrals for legal aid with direct applications from refugees and migrants but even this group remains low. This has provided the impetus for the legal aid scheme to extend to persons seeking international protection, and in some cases, for bar associations to take additional steps in contributing to refugee protection in Türkiye.\textsuperscript{306} In practice, however, not all bar associations accept referrals from NGOs or third parties.\textsuperscript{307} Bar associations allocate cases through an automated system and decide whether they are eligible for legal aid under the project, otherwise it is channelled into their general Legal Aid Scheme (Adli Yardım) discussed below.\textsuperscript{308} In addition, not all the cases referred by NGOs are eligible for legal aid.\textsuperscript{309} One practical issue concerns asylum seekers who have been issued a security code e.g. “G87” or “G89”, as they are not covered by the aforementioned legal aid project funding and it is up to bar associations to cover costs with additional funding, if they can.\textsuperscript{310} Financially it was seen as very beneficial as lawyers receive payment within one month although one stakeholder thought a lot of documentation was required.\textsuperscript{311}

The project was seen as particularly effective in provinces where refugees are concentrated but cannot afford to pay for legal fees and court costs out of their pockets. While the bar associations in the metropolitan areas can provide this service through their legal aid budgets, unfortunately, the bar associations in small cities have not been able to offer well-functioning legal aid to refugees. Thanks to the UTBA project, they can now.

The Union of Bar Associations in Türkiye has also launched a telephone interpretation service for court staff and lawyers providing legal aid to Syrian and non-Syrian applicants in two languages. However, this service cannot be used in Removal Centres as lawyers are not allowed to carry phones in detention facilities,\textsuperscript{312} apart from İzmir, Antakya, Van, Gaziantep and Şanlıurfa, where a fixed line is provided to lawyers.\textsuperscript{313}

Beyond the involvement of bar associations, there are a number of NGOs providing modest legal information and assistance services but they do not have the resources and operational capacity to establish a significant level of field presence throughout the country. Considering the size of the asylum-seeking population and Türkiye’s geographical dispersal policy (see Freedom of Movement), asylum seekers in most locations do not have access to specialised legal counselling and assistance services by NGOs at first instance. NGOs providing legal assistance and representation to asylum seekers include SGDD-ASAM, Support to Life, International Refugee Rights Association (Uluslararası Mülteci Hakları Derneği), Refugee Rights Türkiye (Mülteci Hakları Merkezi), Mülteci-Der, IKGV and Red Umbrella Sexual Health and Human Rights Association among others. In the absence of any dedicated state funds to fund legal assistance services by NGOs to asylum seekers, the limited amount of project-based external funding available to NGO providers, insufficient prioritisation of direct legal service activities in donor programmes and stringent bureaucratic requirements of project-based funding make it very difficult for specialised NGO legal service providers to emerge and prosper. Access to NGOs was further restricted during COVID-19 due to the suspension of activities and the impossibility to provide in-person services (see Access to NGOs and UNHCR).

NGOs have a vital role to help the functioning of the process more generally. The Bar does not have the sufficient knowledge to identify the needs of refugees, but NGOs do – and they do this on behalf of the Bar Associations. NGOs identify these needs with the help of their translators, protection experts, social workers, and legal advisors and transmit this knowledge to bar associations. In addition, after the Bar Association appoints a lawyer, NGOs and their in-house lawyers follow up on the case and provide information to the appointed legal aid lawyer throughout the trial process.

Complaints or requests are referred to legal clinics. If the request is not urgent, it takes around ten days for an appointment with the legal aid lawyer through legal aid offices because there is also an approval procedure from UNHCR for each appointment.

1.5.2. Legal assistance in judicial appeals

Persons who do not have the financial means to pay a lawyer are to be referred to the state-funded Legal Aid Scheme (Adli Yardım) for judicial appeals in the international protection procedure. The LFIP simply makes reference to the existing Legal Aid Scheme which in theory should be accessible to all economically disadvantaged persons in Türkiye, including foreign nationals.

The Legal Aid Scheme is implemented by the bar associations in each province subject to “means” and “merits” criteria, at the discretion of each bar association board. The assessment of “means” varies across bar associations, with Mersin and Kahramanmaraş requiring a certificate attesting the individual’s financial need (fakirlik belgesi) while others like Gaziantep and Şanlıurfa do not require such a document.

One practical impediment to more active involvement by bar associations is the overall scarcity of legal aid funding made available to bar associations from the state budget. While technically all types of “lawyer services” fall within the scope of legal aid as per Türkiye’s Law on Attorneys, in practice the Legal Aid Scheme in Türkiye provides free legal representation to beneficiaries in relation with judicial proceedings as distinct from legal counselling and consultancy services short of court proceedings. This is indeed a principle reaffirmed by Article 81(2) LFIP, which provides that international protection applicants may seek state-funded legal aid in connection with judicial appeals pertaining to any acts and decisions within the international protection procedure.

The costs associated with bringing a case before an Administrative Court in Türkiye include notary fees for the power of attorney, sanctioned translations of identity documents, court application and other judicial fees and postal fees. Since the Legal Aid Scheme only covers a modest attorney fee, applicants are required to cover these costs from their own resources. Although it is possible to request a waiver of these costs from the court, judges have wide discretion on whether to grant such exemptions and in some cases decline the request without providing any substantial reason.

The level of financial compensation afforded to lawyers within the state-funded Legal Aid Scheme is modest and is typically aimed to attract young lawyers at the early stages of their professional careers. The payments to legal aid lawyers are made on the basis of the type of legal action undertaken as opposed to hours spent on the case. As a result, there are insufficient incentives for legal aid lawyers to dedicate generous amounts of time and effort into asylum cases. That said, the aforementioned legal aid project implemented by UNHCR and the Union of Bar Associations provides targeted funding to 18 bar associations for international and temporary protection-related cases.

In an interesting case about legal aid, the Constitutional Court ruled in 2020 that a first instance court decision to not provide legal aid to a Russian Federation citizen of Chechen ethnicity violated the applicant’s right to an effective remedy. The Constitutional Court granted him the right to retrial.

detention in a removal centre and the deportation decision against him, his legal aid application was rejected by the Administrative Court. Although he was at serious risk of torture in case of his deportation to Russia, the appeal was not deemed to have been filed because legal fees were not paid. S.B. appealed before the Constitutional Court for the violation of “right to life”, “prohibition of torture”, “right to due process”, and “right to an effective remedy”. The Court ruled that there was a violation of the right to an effective remedy and suspended S.B.’s deportation until the appeal had been heard, although his compensation claim was eventually rejected.\textsuperscript{320}

2. Dublin

The Dublin III Regulation does not apply in Türkiye.

3. Admissibility procedure

3.1. General (scope, criteria, time limits)

According to Article 72(1) LFIP, there are 4 grounds on which an application may be considered inadmissible:

(a) A Subsequent Application where “the applicant submitted the same claim without presenting any new elements”;

(b) An application submitted by a person, who was previously processed as a family member and signed a waiver to give up on his or her right to make a personal application, where the person submits a personal application: (i) either after the rejection of the original application, without presenting any additional elements; or (ii) or at any stage during the processing of the original application, without presenting any justifiable reason;

(c) An application by a person who arrived in Türkiye from a First Country of Asylum;

(c) An application by a person who arrived in Türkiye from a Safe Third Country.

An inadmissibility decision can be taken “at any stage in the procedure” where the inadmissibility criteria are identified.\textsuperscript{321} However, the examination of inadmissibility criteria under Article 72 LFIP must be carried out by the PDMM during the Registration stage.\textsuperscript{322}

Depending on the outcome of the inadmissibility assessment by the PDMM,

- If an applicant is considered to fall into criteria listed in (a) or (b) above, the PDMM will issue the inadmissibility decision and notify the DGMM Headquarters within 24 hours, however, there is no time limit for the finalisation of the inadmissibility assessment by the PDMM;
- If an applicant is considered to fall into criteria listed in (c) or (ç) above, the PDMM will refer the file to the DGMM Headquarters, which will finalise the inadmissibility determination and may or may not issue an inadmissibility decision. There is no time limit for the referrals to the DGMM Headquarters and the finalisation of the inadmissibility determination.

Inadmissibility decisions must be communicated to the applicant in writing.\textsuperscript{323} The 1\textsuperscript{st} Administrative Court of Isparta ruled on a case in 2020 whereby the applicant appealed against the inadmissibility decision issued by Burdur PDMM regarding his international protection application. The decision referring to article 72 (a) of LFIP was based on applicant's pending application to Canada. The Administrative Court cancelled the

2. Are interviews conducted through video conferencing?

Article 74(1) RFIP requires the PDMM to conduct an interview with the applicant prior to taking an inadmissibility decision.

1. Does the law provide for an appeal against an inadmissibility decision?

   - No

   - If yes, is it
     - Judicial
     - Administrative

   - If yes, is it suspensive
     - Yes
     - No

Inadmissibility decisions can only be appealed before the competent Administrative Court.325 Such decisions must be appealed within 15 days of the written notification of the decision, as opposed to 30 days in the Regular Procedure: Appeal.326 The application to the Administrative Court carries automatic suspensive effect.

The 15-day time limit for appealing inadmissibility decisions was contested before the Constitutional Court as unconstitutional, on the basis that it was disproportionate in view of applicants’ inability to obtain legal assistance in these cases (Admissibility Procedure: Legal Assistance). The Court found Article 80(1)(ç) LFIP to be compatible with the Turkish Constitution, holding that the rules on inadmissibility are not complex to such an extent as to prohibit applicants from challenging a negative decision in person within the 15-day deadline.327

In 2020 there seemed to be a trend whereby international protection applicants who were taken to removal centres after the issuance of a deportation decision against them had an inadmissibility decision issued about their international protection applications whilst they were in detention. It seemed that while an applicant was being held in a removal centre in one city, a decision about their international protection application was issued by a PDMM in a different city. The decisions seemed mostly negative.328

3.4 Legal assistance

Indicators: Admissibility Procedure: Legal Assistance

- Same as regular procedure

1. Do asylum seekers have access to free legal assistance at first instance in practice?
   - Yes
   - With difficulty
   - No

   - Does free legal assistance cover:
   - Representation in interview
   - Legal advice

2. Do asylum seekers have access to free legal assistance on appeal against an inadmissibility decision in practice?
   - Yes
   - With difficulty
   - No

   - Does free legal assistance cover:
   - Representation in courts
   - Legal advice

The rules and practice set out in Regular Procedure: Legal Assistance apply. However, applicants whose claims are dismissed as inadmissible face obstacles in accessing legal representation for the purpose of lodging an appeal given that they are not issued an International Protection Application Identification Card on the basis of which power of attorney may be granted. Access to legal assistance is exacerbated by the shorter deadline of 15 days to lodge an appeal against an inadmissibility decision, compared to 30 days in the regular procedure.

4. Border procedure (border and transit zones)

The LFIP does not lay down a specific border procedure as such although the RFIP mentions that PDMM shall be promptly notified of applications made at the border.\(^{329}\)

Applications made after the border crossing are subject to the general rules laid down by the LFIP. However, in relation to applications made before the border crossing, in the transit area of an airport or after the person has been refused entry at the border, the competent PDMM shall be notified by the border authorities and brought in to handle the application. Designated officials from the PDMM “are to determine, as first matter of business”, whether the application should be subject to the Accelerated Procedure.\(^{330}\)

Facilities where persons apprehended without valid documentation are held exist in İstanbul Sabiha Gökçen Airport, Ankara Esenboğa Airport and İzmir Adnan Menderes Airport. The main airport in İstanbul is now İstanbul Airport. The application procedure had improved but became more difficult in 2020-2021 (see Access at the airport).

5. Accelerated procedure

5.1. General (scope, grounds for accelerated procedure, time limits)

Article 79(1) LFIP lays down 7 grounds for referring an application to the accelerated procedure, where the applicant:

(a) Has not raised any issues pertinent to international protection when lodging an application;

(b) Has misled the authorities by presenting false documents or misleading information and documents, or by withholding information or documents that would have a negative impact on the decision;

\(^{329}\) Article 67(1) RFIP.
\(^{330}\) Ibid.
(c) Has destroyed or disposed of his or her identity or travel document in bad faith in an attempt to prevent determination of his or her identity or nationality;

d) Has applied for international protection solely for the purpose of preventing or postponing the execution of a removal decision;

(e) Poses a danger to public order or security, or has previously been deported from Türkiye on these grounds;

(f) Files a Subsequent Application after his previous application was considered implicitly withdrawn.

The examination of accelerated procedure criteria under Article 79 LFIP must be carried out by the PDMM during the Registration stage.\textsuperscript{331}

In the handling of applications processed under the accelerated procedure the personal interview shall take place within 3 days of the application, and the decision shall be issued within 5 days of the personal interview.\textsuperscript{332} Where this time limit cannot be complied with, the applicant may be taken off the accelerated procedure and referred to the regular procedure.\textsuperscript{333}

As discussed in \textit{Detention of Asylum Seekers}, Article 68 LFIP allows for the administrative detention of international protection applicants during the processing of their claim for up to 30 days. Technically, an applicant subject to the accelerated procedure may or may not be detained depending on the competent PDMM’s interpretation of the applicant’s circumstances against the detention grounds.

The accelerated procedure is applied in practice, for example in the case of persons detained in Removal Centres, although statistics are not publicly available.\textsuperscript{334} According to NGOs and lawyers in the field, applications subject to accelerated procedures generally obey the time limits set out in the law. However, decisions have been taken without respecting the 8-day time limit.\textsuperscript{335} In Izmir, in one case of an accelerated procedure, the applicant received the decision in 2019 after 5 years.\textsuperscript{336} The procedures are also different from one PDMM to another. For instance, Adana PDMM follows an accelerated procedure for people in the removal centre in Adana. However, Ankara Akyurt removal centre follows the regular procedure.\textsuperscript{337}

Lawyers have expressed concerns that applicants are not informed of their right to access legal assistance.\textsuperscript{338}

As regards the application of the accelerated procedure in the Marmara region, the 15-day period starts running from the date of the written notification to the applicants. However, legal aid lawyers are not informed of the notification and, legally, applicants are not notified either. They are often notified ‘verbally’. This unlawful notification practice at removal centres has been appealed, but in practice most appeals are usually rejected due to the fact that the time limit is not respected.\textsuperscript{339}

In 2020 in \textit{İstanbul} accelerated procedures and rejection decisions were issued to international protection applicants at the airport.\textsuperscript{340} Rejection decisions were also granted through accelerated procedures by the PDMM where applications had been pending for a long time; reaching up to 6 months or 1 year in certain

In İzmir in 2021, an application of a person held in the transit zone was rejected through an accelerated procedure. The necessary conditions for the accelerated evaluation were not met, but objections to this were not examined by the court.

5.2. Personal interview

Indicators: Accelerated Procedure: Personal Interview

- Same as regular procedure

1. Is a personal interview of the asylum seeker in most cases conducted in practice in the accelerated procedure?
   - Yes
   - No

   - If so, are questions limited to nationality, identity, travel route?
     - Yes
     - No

   - If so, are interpreters available in practice, for interviews?
     - Yes
     - No

2. Are interviews conducted through video conferencing?
   - Frequently
   - Rarely
   - Never

Article 80(2) RFIP provides that the accelerated procedure “shall not prevent the application to be assessed in detail”. However, the assessment is not thorough and detailed in practice. Personal interviews of international protection applicants in Removal Centres are conducted by the Removal Centre officers and generally take 5-10 minutes. Similar observations have been reported for interviews at the airport: cases of interviewers likely to ‘manipulate’ the applicant’s statements and try to conclude economic needs as the reason for their entry into Türkiye have been reported.

5.3. Appeal

Indicators: Accelerated Procedure: Appeal

- Same as regular procedure

1. Does the law provide for an appeal against the decision in the accelerated procedure?
   - Yes
   - No

   - If yes, is it
     - Judicial
     - Administrative

   - If yes, is it suspensive
     - Yes
     - No

There are several significant differences between appeals in the regular procedure and appeals in the accelerated procedure. Negative decisions under the accelerated procedure must be directly appealed at the competent Administrative Court. The application to the administrative court carries automatic suspensive effect.

Unlike in the Regular Procedure: Appeal, the court must decide on the appeal within 15 days in appeals originating from the accelerated procedure. The decision by the Administrative Court is final. It cannot be appealed before a higher court.

Administrative Courts have examined cases in the accelerated procedure, in some cases annulling the first instance decision. For instance, in its ruling on an Iraqi woman who made her international protection application after 3 years after her entry into Türkiye, the Administrative Court of Ankara assessed that claims on gender-based violence of the applicant had not been sufficiently assessed and examined by the public authorities, and annulled the negative decision.\(^{344}\) In a judgment from 2018, the Administrative Court annulled a first instance decision taken in the accelerated procedure concerning a man facing religious persecution in Iran.\(^{345}\)

5.4. Legal assistance

Indicators: Accelerated Procedure: Legal Assistance

- Same as regular procedure

1. Do asylum seekers have access to free legal assistance at first instance in practice?
   - Yes
   - With difficulty
   - No
   - Does free legal assistance cover:
     - Representation in interview
     - Legal advice

2. Do asylum seekers have access to free legal assistance on appeal against a negative decision in practice?
   - Yes
   - With difficulty
   - No
   - Does free legal assistance cover:
     - Representation in courts
     - Legal advice

The same rules as in the Regular Procedure: Legal Assistance apply. For an overview of difficulties encountered by applicants subject to accelerated procedure in detention when trying to access legal assistance services, see the section Legal Assistance for Review of Detention. In the past applicants in the accelerated procedure were not issued an International Protection Applicant Identification Card and their ability to issue a power of attorney was severely limited. However, after changes to Article 76(2) LFIP in December 2019 they can be now issued an identity document. It is too early to know how this will be applied in practice, particularly given the COVID-19 pandemic. The Administrative Court requires a power of attorney to be presented within 10 days; otherwise, it considers the appeal inadmissible.\(^{346}\)

According to the law, the “persons with special needs” category includes “unaccompanied minors, handicapped persons, elderly, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, victims of torture, rape and other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence.”\(^{347}\)

Neither the LFIP nor the RFIP include LGBTI persons in the list of categories of “persons with special needs”. Difficulties have been reported in practice with regard to the way in which applicants are interviewed about issues pertaining to sexual orientation and gender identity, ranging from inappropriate terminology or offensive questions to verbal abuse during registration interviews.\textsuperscript{348} In one LGBTI case Kastamonu PDMM asked for a medical report to prove that the applicant was a LGBTI person.\textsuperscript{349}

1.1. Screening of vulnerability

RFIP states that it “shall be primarily determined” whether the applicant is a person with special needs.\textsuperscript{350} The PDMM are required to make an assessment during registration whether the applicant belongs in one of the categories of “persons with special needs”, and to make a note in the applicant’s registration form if he or she has been identified as such. An applicant may also be identified as a “person with special needs” later on in the procedure.\textsuperscript{351}

According to the law, DGMM may cooperate with relevant public institutions, international organisations and NGOs for the treatment of persons subjected to torture or serious violence.\textsuperscript{352}

No official mechanism for the identification of vulnerabilities in the asylum procedure has been established to date. Under the previous Registration system, the joint registration interview conducted by UNHCR / SGDD-ASAM enabled the detection of specific needs of the applicant, which were then taken into consideration \textit{inter alia} in the assignment of a “satellite city” in close coordination with the DGMM Headquarters (see \textit{Freedom of Movement}). Following the transition to exclusive registration by DGMM, it is not clear how the PDMM assess special needs in practice.\textsuperscript{353} Nevertheless, UNHCR still refers vulnerable cases to the PDMM to prioritise registration. In 2019, assessments of applicants’ vulnerabilities and their registration were very slow.\textsuperscript{354} Difficulties in access to all procedures were compounded in 2020 due to COVID-19. There was complete lockdown from mid-March and from April to June. Those who were not in professions that were allowed to work could only leave their houses during limited hours for exercise. Those with poor health were isolating for most of 2020. Refugees and people seeking international protection were often short of masks and hygiene equipment that was given to them sporadically by NGOs, UNHCR and others.

1.2. Age assessment of unaccompanied children

While the LFIP does not contain any provisions on age assessment, the RFIP provides guidance regarding the role of age assessment in the identification of unaccompanied children applicants. The Regulation states that where the applicant claims to be of minor age, but does not possess any identity documents indicating his or her age, the governorates shall conduct a “comprehensive age determination” consisting of a physical and psychological assessment.\textsuperscript{355} The applicant shall be notified as to the reason of this referral and the age assessment proceedings that will be undertaken.\textsuperscript{356}

If the age assessment exercise indicates without a doubt that the applicant is 18 years of age or older, he or she shall be treated as an adult. If the age assessment fails to establish conclusively whether the applicant is above or below 18 years of age, the applicant’s reported age shall be accepted to be true.

\textsuperscript{356} Article 123(2)(c) RFIP.
While neither the LFIP nor the RFIP make any provisions regarding the methods to be used in age assessment examinations on international protection applicants, according to the guidelines of the State Agency for Forensic Medicine, for the purpose of age assessment examinations, physical examination and radiography data of the person (including of elbows, wrists, hands, shoulders, pelvis and teeth) are listed as primary sources of evaluation. No reference is made to any psycho-social assessment of the person. Also, according to the (then) Ministry of Family and Social Services’ 2015 Directive on unaccompanied children, the PDMM issue a medical report on the physical condition of the children before placing them in Ministry premises.357

In practice, bone tests are applied to assess the age of unaccompanied children referred to the Ministry of Family and Social Services to be taken into care.358 The accuracy of tests on the jawbone can range between +2/-2 years older or younger. If a test result indicates a child is aged 16 give or take two years, then the authorities still tend to interpret the assessment at the upper threshold.359

To stop this practice, previous legal actions from the Ankara Bar Association and SGDD-ASAM have obtained protection orders for children in order to secure their placement in public institutions for children.360 If the bone test determines the child to be younger than 17, the Ministry can also conduct a psychosocial assessment.

When children are caught attempting to illegally leave the country, the ID from their country of origin or the ID they are provided with while in Türkiye is used to determine their age. If the child has no documentation, officials assign the child an age according to the child’s appearance and behavior. If the child is not sure of their age or says they are 17, they get documented as 18. African children are often recorded as 18, even at the age of 16, as they reportedly look more mature. In these cases, they are wrongly taken into administrative detention. In İzmir, there are two first admissions units (ilk kabul birimi) in Bornova and Buca; one for boys and one for girls. Children who are documented as a child are directly transferred to these first admission units. For boys, there is an open-door system - they can leave whenever they want. For girls, a relative needs accompany them out. Unit officers generally try to contact their relatives through their ID. Boys usually leave the institution on the same day. There was a recent case of 7-8 Somalian girls. Authorities in the first admission unit handed the girls to 3 adult men who said that they were relatives without providing documentation. The Somali girls were later found working in the textile sector. The situation of these children is usually not followed. The admission unit has limited capacity and the children themselves do not want to stay in these units due to poor living conditions.361

It can be very difficult to know whether a child is in a removal centre or not. This information is not shared with NGOs due to the KVKK (Personal Data Protection Act). Erzurum removal centre has often claimed that they are not children but adults. The removal centre requests a document from the child’s country of origin proving that the child is not an adult but this process takes more than 1 month. Even when the families provide the documents, the removal centre can reject them due to a missing notary stamp or the lack of a stamp of the Consulate. Erzurum removal centre tends to register all children’s age as 18+.362

2.1. Adequate support during the interview

The LFIP makes a number of special provisions for “persons with special needs” including unaccompanied children. However, with the exception of unaccompanied children, the law falls short of providing comprehensive additional procedural safeguards to vulnerable categories of international protection applicants.

During the personal interview, where persons with special needs are concerned, the applicant’s sensitive condition shall be taken into account. However, no specific guidance is provided either in the LFIP or the RFIP as to whether the applicant’s preference on the gender of the interpreter should be taken into consideration or not. In practice, the confidentiality of interviews is not appropriately ensured in most cases, as interviews take place in open spaces at the different PDMM. This creates obstacles for applicants with sensitive cases such as LGBTI persons. LGBTI refugees have also stated that they were subjected to verbal abuse by some officers and other refugees in PDMM, and that they were mocked due to their sexual orientations and gender identities.

The RFIP instructs that interviews with children shall be conducted by trained personnel, sufficiently informed on the child’s psychological, emotional and physical development. The decision-making official shall give due regard to the possibility that the child may not have been able to fully substantially his or her request for international protection. Furthermore, if a psychologist, a pedagogue or a social worker was arranged to attend the interview, the expert’s written report on the child shall also be taken into consideration.

2.2. Prioritisation and exemption from special procedures

The law requires “priority” to be given to “persons with special needs” in all procedures, rights and benefits extended to international protection applicants. Registration interviews with unaccompanied minors and other persons who are unable to report to the designated registration premises in the province may be carried out in the locations where they are. It is understood from current practice that PDMM provide priority to unaccompanied children in registration process and personal interviews.

Unaccompanied children are exempted from the Accelerated Procedure and they may not be detained during the processing of their application, since Article 66 LFIP unambiguously orders that unaccompanied minor applicants shall be referred to an appropriate accommodation facility under the authority of the Ministry of Family and Social Services.

No such provisions are made in relation to other categories of vulnerable applicants. With the exception of unaccompanied children, other vulnerable groups may be subjected to the accelerated procedure.

Article 69(4) LFIP provides that at the time of registration, the responsible authorities shall request that international protection applicants provide information and documents related to reasons for leaving their country of origin and events that led to the application. This provision can be interpreted as a possibility for the applicant to submit a medical report in support of the application. In addition, there is no provision in the LIFP which bars individuals from presenting documents and information in support of their international protection application at any stage of the determination proceedings.

Current practice does not suggest that applicants in the international protection procedure have relied upon medical reports. However, medical reports are deemed as strong evidence supporting international protection applications and increase the possibility of obtaining a positive decision from the PMM.369

According to Article 66 LFIP, from the moment an unaccompanied child international protection applicant is identified, the best interests of the child principle must be observed and the relevant provisions of Türkiye’s Child Protection Law370 must be implemented. The child applicant must be referred to an appropriate accommodation facility under the authority of the Ministry of Family and Social Services. There is still no information on the number of unaccompanied children in Türkiye and a tendency for them not to be taken into the care of state institutions despite the recent amendment.371

According to the Turkish Civil Code, all children placed under state care must be assigned a guardian.372 Specifically, all children who do not benefit from the custody of parents (velayet) must be provided guardianship (vesayet).373 The assignment of guardians is carried out by Peace Courts of Civil Jurisdiction (Sulh Hukuk Mahkemesi) and guardianship matters are thereafter overseen by Civil Courts of General Jurisdiction (Asliye Hukuk Mahkemesi). A guardian under the Turkish Civil Code should be “an adult competent to fulfil the requirements of the task”, not engaged in an “immoral life style” or have “significant conflict of interest or hostility with the child in question”. Relatives are to be given priority to be appointed as guardians.374 Therefore, as far as the legal requirements, qualified NGO staff, UNHCR staff or Ministry of Family and Social Services staff would qualify to be appointed as guardians for unaccompanied minor asylum seekers.

Guardians are responsible for protecting the personal and material interests of the minors in their responsibility and to represent their interests in legal proceedings. Although not specifically listed in the provisions, asylum procedures would fall within the mandate of the guardians. As a rule, a guardian is appointed for 2 years, and thereafter may be reappointed for additional two terms.

The appointment of guardians to unaccompanied children is generally carried out without difficulty although lawyers in Ankara have witnessed difficulties. In some cases, the responsibility for children has been granted to people with no qualification or who are not their first degree relative. Children have also been forced to beg in the streets and/or to work.

LGBTI and other ex-minors benefit from UNHCR’s fund and receive pocket money of around 200 TL (30 EUR) a month. The cash support covers three types of vulnerable groups: 1) ex-minors 2) trans minors 3) victims of gender-based violence; and it is provided when they leave state premises.

The vast majority of unaccompanied children applying for international protection in Türkiye originate from Afghanistan. Criminal proceedings against police officers in the case of Lütfillah Tacik, an Afghan unaccompanied child with illness who was suspiciously killed in Van, had been pending since 2014. Human rights organisations are closely following up on the case due to the multiple vulnerabilities of the child. The legal involvement and representation of the child’s parent living in a rural area of Afghanistan was not realised to date due to the lack of power of attorney issued in the name of the lawyer. Eight years and 25 hearings later, a ruling was finally given in early 2022. One of the police officers was found not guilty of negligence. The other policeman was sentenced to five months in prison on the ground of superficial injury.

There are also cases of Uyghur children who came to Türkiye with their parents originally but whose parents have disappeared after returning to China to visit.

In 2019-20 there was a case of an unaccompanied child in Harmandalı removal centre. He said he was 17 years old, but he was recorded as older based on formal documents. His ID card was requested from his country of origin and the PDMM corrected his registration papers. His administrative detention ended, and the deportation decision was canceled. He was accepted in a dormitory of the Ministry of Family and Social Services, so the PDMM took positive initiative. The child was not assigned a guardian. When a relative of the child got in touch with the Ministry, the child was released to live with his relative.

In 2021, best interest procedures were undertaken for 661 children by UNHCR and partner NGO’s and UNHCR provided training on best interest procedures after its new guidelines were issued.

While the LFIP does not provide a specific dedicated procedure for the handling of subsequent applications, reference is made to subsequent applications in the legislative guidance concerning admissibility assessment and accelerated processing considerations.

According to Article 72(1)(a) LFIP, a subsequent application where “the applicant submitted the same claim without presenting any new elements” is inadmissible. In such a case, the PDMM shall issue the inadmissibility decision and notify the DGMM Headquarters within 24 hours, however there is no time limit for taking an inadmissibility decision.

At the same time, Article 79(1)(f) LFIP foresees application of the accelerated procedure where the applicant “files a subsequent application after his previous application was considered implicitly withdrawn”. Accordingly, if a subsequent application successfully passes the inadmissibility check, it will be treated under the accelerated procedure.

The PDMM are responsible for the initial admissibility assessment on subsequent applications and the subsequent examination of the claim in accelerated procedure. Whereas the inadmissibility decisions are also finalised by the PDMM, status decisions in accelerated procedure will be referred to the DGMM Headquarters for finalisation based on the personal interview conducted by the PDMM.

While the law does not provide a definition of “subsequent application”, it is indicated that subsequent applicants, who “submit the same claim without presenting any new elements” shall be considered inadmissible. In the absence of any further legislative guidance, it is up to the discretion of the PDMM in charge of registering the application to determine whether or not the applicant “has presented any new elements”. This is very problematic.

The law does not lay down any time limits for lodging a subsequent application or any limitations on how many times a person can lodge a subsequent application.

There is not sufficient information from practice to indicate how subsequent applications are being treated at the moment. In a March 2018 report, the Grand National Assembly reported 15 subsequent applicants in Türkiye.386

</tr>

Safe country concepts come up in the Admissibility Procedure in Türkiye’s international protection procedure. The LFIP provides “first country of asylum” and “safe third country” concepts but no “safe country of origin” concept. Where an applicant is identified to have arrived in Türkiye from either a “first country of asylum” or a “safe third country”, an inadmissibility decision will be issued under Article 72 LFIP.

1. First country of asylum

Article 73 LFIP defines “first country of asylum” as a country (a) “in which the applicant was previously recognised as a refugee and that he or she can still avail himself or herself of that protection” or (b) “or where he or she can still enjoy sufficient and effective protection including protection against refoulement.”

Article 76 RFIP provides additional interpretative guidance as to what can be considered “sufficient and effective protection”. The following conditions must apply for an applicant to be considered to avail themselves of “sufficient and effective protection” in a third country:

(a) There is no risk of well-founded fear of persecution or serious harm for the applicant in the third country concerned;
(b) There is no risk of onward deportation for the applicant from the third country concerned to another country where he or she will be unable to avail themselves of sufficient and effective protection;
(c) The third country concerned is a state party to the 1951 Refugee Convention and 1967 Protocol and undertakes practices in compliance with the provisions of the 1951 Convention;
(ç) The sufficient and effective protection provided by the third country concerned to the applicant shall persist until a durable solution can be found for the applicant.

2. Safe third country

For a country to be considered a “safe third country”, the following conditions must apply:

(a) The lives and freedoms of persons are not in danger on the basis of race, religion, nationality, membership to a particular social group or political opinion;
(b) The principle of non-refoulement of persons to countries, in which they will be subject to torture, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, is implemented;
(c) The applicant has an opportunity to apply for refugee status in the country, and in case he or she is granted refugee status by the country authorities, he or she has the possibility of obtaining protection in compliance with the 1951 Refugee Convention;
(ç) The applicant does not incur any risk of being subjected to serious harm.”

387 Article 73 LFIP; Article 75 RFIP. The wording resembles the EU definition in Article 35 recast Asylum Procedures Directive.
388 Article 74 LFIP. The wording resembles the EU definition in Article 38 recast Asylum Procedures Directive.
For a country to be considered a “safe third country” for an applicant, an individual evaluation must be carried out, and due consideration must be given to "whether the existing links between the applicant and the third country are of a nature that would make the applicant’s return to that country reasonable.”

Article 77(2) RFIP provides additional interpretative guidance as to the interpretation of the “reasonable link” criterion, by requiring at least one of the following conditions to apply:

(a) The applicant has family members already established in the third country concerned;
(b) The applicant has previously lived in the third country concerned for purposes such as work, education, long-term settlement;
(c) The applicant has firm cultural links to the country concerned as demonstrated for example by his or her ability to speak the language of the country at a good level;
(ç) The applicant has previously been in the country concerned for long term stay purposes as opposed to merely for the purpose of transit.

At present, there is no publicly available information as to whether PMM currently subscribes or will in the future subscribe to a categorical ‘list approach’ in making safe country determinations on international protection applicants. However, the LFIP and the RFIP require an individualised assessment as to whether a particular third country can be considered a “safe third country” for a specific applicant.

There are cases in the Turkish courts applying the safe third country concept, although there is no list of safe third countries in Türkiye. This issue is mainly assessed by the administrative courts. The risk when the safe third country concept is applied is that the refugee applicant does not know which country is considered safe by Türkiye and the court does not determine in the ruling which country the applicant can be sent to. This assessment is made by PMM. In İzmir, for example, deportation decisions do not state a safe third country for non-Syrians. In 2019 in Antakya the safe third country concept was applied to non-Syrians, for whom Morocco was deemed to be the safe third country.

In one deportation case examined in Hatay a woman’s application for protection was accepted due to a lack of assessment of any specific safe third country. An Uzbek woman had entered Türkiye irregularly from Syria claiming that she was forced to go to Syria by her husband but then had to leave Idlib with her two children. If sent back there was a risk of persecution. The Court noted that the deportation decision did not which specify a country just a ‘safe third country’. As she could not be returned to Syria, she could not be deported.

In 2020 there was a significant change in deportation decisions regarding Syrians in İzmir with PDMMs issuing deportation decisions to a safe third country. Deportation to the country of origin is only possible if the refugee requests it. As of the end of 2019 deportations were not executed to the country of origin but were considered to third countries. Countries where there was active conflict such as Yemen, Palestine, and Egypt were not considered safe. This practice has caused problems. Syrians can only be deported to a safe third country. However, they were being held at removal centres because there was no safe third country willing to accept them. In addition, in the deportation decisions themselves, the term safe third country is mentioned, but a specific country is not usually specified. In 2020 İzmir Administrative Court cancelled deportation decisions where the third safe country was not shown on the deportation order because the court could not assess the safe third country if it was not indicated.

In İzmir, in an administrative case pending by late 2020 a new practice was observed. PDMM started using a new form for the evaluation of a safe third country where Syrians could be deported. On this form, four countries are determined as safe countries for Syrians: Iran, Sudan, Haiti, and Micronesia. This form was being signed by refugees but as of April 2021, there was no information of Syrians being deported to Iran or another country based on this document. As of the end of 2021 this form was still valid, but the country names had been changed in the form, for example, Russia was added. It is possible that the list includes the countries where Syrians can visit without a visa, rather than being a specific safe third country list.

In 2021 an Afghan applicant appealed against PDMM’s negative decision on his international protection application. The Council of State, citing Article 49 of the law on Administrative Court Procedures, rejected the appeal on the merits and approved the first instance court’s decision that had rejected the applicant’s claim on the grounds of ‘safe third country’.

According to Article 70 LFIP, during registration, applicants must be provided information regarding the international protection procedure, appeal mechanisms and time frames, rights and obligations, including the consequences of failure to fulfil obligations or cooperate with authorities. If requested by the applicant, interpretation shall be provided for the purpose of interactions with the applicants at registration and status determination interview stages.

In 2019 over 280,000 information leaflets and 10,000 posters on legal aid, illustrating national registration and international protection procedures, were produced and distributed in 81 provinces. The materials were jointly developed by PMM, UTBA and UNHCR, and were translated and printed into seven languages: Turkish, English, Arabic, Farsi, Pashto, French and Russian.

The PMM also operates a hotline service called Foreigners Communication Centre (Yabancı İletişim Merkezi, YİMER). It is possible to call or message the centre in Turkish, English, Russian, Pashto, Farsi, German and Arabic at any time of day. According to the YİMER’s website, as of June 2022 the hotline had received nearly 15 million calls since it started in 2015.

In addition, UNHCR has set up a platform (“Help”) which provides information in English, Turkish, Arabic and Farsi. Mainstream NGOs such as SGDD-ASAM, Support to Life, Human Resource Development Foundation (Insan Kaynagini Geliştirme Vakfi, İKGV), YUVA also provide assistance and counselling.

Article 81(3) LFIP states that international protection applicants and status holders are free to seek counselling services provided by NGOs.

The UNHCR Counselling Line provides counselling on registration procedures, referrals and existing support mechanisms, specifically resettlement, financial assistance and assistance for persons with specific needs.\(^{402}\) In September 2020, UNHCR implemented a specific gender-based violence (GBV) line for individuals at risk of, or survivors of, GBV, providing both a recorded message on reporting and supporting mechanisms and available support channels and services as well as GBV counselling through specialised operators.\(^{403}\) In 2021 both these lines continued to operate. In December 2021 alone, 46,700 calls were answered on the UNHCR Counselling Line. Most of the callers were Syrian (50%) followed by Afghan nationals (23%). Most callers enquired about resettlement opportunities followed by financial assistance. Of the total number of calls, almost 7,000 calls came through UNHCR’s dedicated GBV line.\(^{404}\)

UNHCR regularly published up-to-date information posts in Arabic, Farsi, Turkish and English, on the UNHCR Türkiye Information Board on Facebook using posters, announcements, videos and Q&As. COVID-19 related materials, produced by the Turkish Ministry of Health were printed and distributed to UNHCR field offices, partners, PDMM and the Ministry of Health premises across the country. UNHCR also supported PMM with printed materials and videos in multiple languages on COVID-19 mitigation measures and set up a WhatsApp communication tree in March 2020 to facilitate rapid information-sharing between UNHCR and refugees as well as reaching refugees through bulk SMS initiatives.\(^{405}\)

SGDD-ASAM, the largest NGO and implementing partner of UNHCR in Türkiye, has offices in more than 40 provinces in Türkiye and provides counselling and information services.

Other organisations such as Refugee Rights Türkiye and International Refugee Rights Association in Istanbul and Mülteci-Der in Izmir have helplines and can be accessed by phone. Refugee Support Centre (Mülteci Destek Derneği, MUDEM) has presence in various provinces, while IKGV has different offices in Türkiye and provides information and psycho-social support. Support to Life and YUVA are also mainstream organisations that are very active in the field, the former having a presence in eight cities.

\(^{401}\) Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2021.
Faith-based organisations are also very active in assistance to applicants, Türk Diyanet Vakfı, a state-funded faith agency based in Ankara targets mostly educated young Syrians and provides humanitarian aid, financial assistance and language classes. Insani Yardim Vakfı is another faith-based organisation active nearly in every province of Türkiye.

There are also NGOs helping vulnerable groups such as KADAV and Women’s Solidarity Foundation for women in Istanbul and Ankara respectively, Kaos GL based in Ankara assists LGBTI people, as does Red Umbrella Sexual Health and Human Rights Association. Pozitif Yasam based in Istanbul assists people living with HIV, while Red Umbrella Sexual Health and Human Rights Organisation has set up seven service units in five provinces for LGBTI persons, sex workers and people living with HIV in Türkiye.

Moreover, international protection applicants may also access the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) and NGOs carrying out resettlement-related activities, such as the International Catholic Migration Commission (ICMC) in Istanbul.

In 2020, many NGOs stopped working or reduced their services to online services only due to COVID-19. People applied to them for psychosocial support and humanitarian aid but many only accepted documents electronically. People who are illiterate or who did not have internet access found it difficult to receive assistance. Since offices were closed, it was also difficult to identify and reach unaccompanied children. This affected relationships and trust as NGOs were an unknown caller on the phone and people did not always call back. This improved in 2021 although services still had some disruptions.

1. Syria

Refugees arriving directly from Syria are subject to a group-based, prima facie-type Temporary Protection regime in Türkiye. The temporary protection regime currently in place covers Syrian nationals and stateless Palestinians originating from Syria. Those coming through a third country, however, are excluded from the temporary protection regime. Although they should be allowed to make an international protection application under the LFIP, in practice they are not allowed to apply and are only granted a short-term visa and then a short-term residence permit. This includes Syrian nationals who may arrive through another country even if their family members in Türkiye already benefit from temporary protection. Recent worrying practices have been reported regarding the issuance of deportation orders in certain provinces such as Izmir, as described at the end of the Safe third country section.

406 Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2021.
407 Information provided by stakeholders, March 2019.
2. Iraq

Iraqis are generally granted short-term residence permits once they are in Türkiye. Even where they apply for international protection, they are usually encouraged to opt for a short-term residence permit.\(^{408}\)

Previously, DGMM referred Iraqi Turkmen to Türkmeneli Derneği in Ankara with a view to confirming their origin. These persons usually obtain international protection, as do Uyghurs from China.\(^{409}\) In 2020, one stakeholder noted that international protection applications which had not been examined for many years were suddenly evaluated and most of the decisions were negative. This predominantly concerned Iraqi applicants in Samsun, Çorum and Ankara. The deportation decisions were subsequently appealed and several were successful. One of these families held refugee status from UNHCR.\(^{410}\)

3. Afghanistan

The barriers to access to the procedure following the takeover of registration of applicants for international protection by PMM in September 2018 (see Registration) have had particularly adverse effects on Afghan nationals. Many PDMM are reluctant to register their asylum applications.\(^{411}\)

An expert opinion commissioned by PRO ASYL in 2020 concluded that Afghans seeking protection in Türkiye had not received adequate protection for many years. The main problems identified were as follows:

- Systematic gaps in access to the protection system that undermine the legal framework. A lack of an identity card automatically excludes many Afghans from access to basic services such as education and healthcare, freedom of travel and increases their risk of deportation and detention.
- The fact there are very low numbers of applications for international protection and status holders indicates important gaps in practice. Even when Afghan applicants manage to register and get an ID card, they encounter severe problems. In 2020, there were long waiting periods for a RSD appointment, an inadequate assessment of RSD applications and automatic rejections of applications with no access to social support.
- Deportations, voluntary returns and detentions continued. There is a lack of interpreters, communication and privacy between client and lawyer in removal centres, and a lack of legal documents translated into Dari or Pashtun languages,
- Publicly available quantitative data on Afghan refugees’ protection and reception conditions is low which limits the monitoring efforts of international and national NGOs. The low number of NGOs specifically working on and for Afghan refugees reflects the fact that funds and projects in Türkiye are mostly Syrian-centred.\(^ {412}\)

In 2020, in at least one case the judge assessed Afghanistan to be a safe country and the applicant’s appeal to suspend the deportation was not granted.\(^ {413}\)

This situation for Afghan refugees in Türkiye remained extremely difficult in 2021. The migration flow from Afghanistan to Türkiye was one of the biggest issues of the year, particularly after the Taliban took control in August. The media talked of ‘millions’ of Afghans waiting to cross the borders into Türkiye.\textsuperscript{414} There was a tremendous public outcry against irregular crossings at the Iranian border and a public perception that Afghan single men “do not need international protection”.\textsuperscript{415}

Stakeholders working in the field report Afghan migration to Türkiye was not as sizeable as depicted in the media. Nevertheless, there were considerably more arrivals than the official number.\textsuperscript{416}

Against this backdrop, registration for Afghans was described as ‘almost impossible’ by one stakeholder. Another stakeholder reported that registration could only be registered in the eastern provinces.\textsuperscript{417} Afghans themselves may have less awareness of procedures than other refugees in Türkiye in several ways. Afghans are less aware of the modern state’s institutions, and maintaining bureaucratic relations is difficult. Especially in the context of young men who come alone (including unaccompanied minors), it can be very difficult to identify them and legalize their stay in Türkiye. There are relatively large numbers of unaccompanied Afghan children who have no document or ID with them. Ten Afghan children can be staying together in the same house, working informally. Since they are not registered, they also have no access\textsuperscript{418} to education. People from Afghanistan may specifically avoid contact with public institutions, which is an additional reason registration rates are low. As Afghans are unregistered, it is difficult for lawyers to get power of attorney. Then, Turkish courts look for documents to decide on cases, but this is almost impossible for Afghans, whose country is less institutionalized in terms of certification. Since August 2021 no Afghan embassy has been able to issue passports. It appears they do not have the necessary materials to issue a passport. They can only extend the validity of the passport. Some individuals have received travel documents similar to laissez-passer, but the international validity of those documents is unclear.

By 14 August 2021, the Turkish government stated that they would suspend deportations to Afghanistan due to a lack of country-of-origin information.\textsuperscript{419} However, this was not uniformly implemented. Van PDMM requested the deportation of 227 Afghans to Afghanistan in January 2022, for example.

Case law on Afghanistan was not consistent despite the announcement that deportations would be suspended. One Afghan applicant appealed against PDMM’s negative decision on his international protection application and in October 2021 the 1st Administrative Court of Elazığ annulled the rejection decision stating that there was a risk of persecution for the applicant.\textsuperscript{420} Again in October 2021, an Afghan applicant appealed against their deportation decision and further claimed that he had not received any response from PDMM on his international protection application. The First Instance Court in İstanbul ruled that the deportation decision was based on insufficient country of origin research and cancelled the deportation decision.\textsuperscript{421} In November 2021, however, an Afghan applicant appealed against the negative decision on their international protection application issued by Aydın PDMM. Age assessment had found the applicant to be 17. They fled Afghanistan when 2-3 years old, lost their parents in 2017 while trying to reach Greece and have been living unaccompanied since then. The Court ruled that applicant’s case was substantially economic and there were no risk of well-grounded persecution or serious harm in case of return to Afghanistan.\textsuperscript{422}

IOM’s assisted voluntary returns to Afghanistan were stopped after August 2021. However, PMM founded its own voluntary returns mechanism in 2021 (with the assistance of ICMPD and financed by the national budget), so if an Afghan wants to return to Afghanistan voluntarily this can happen through PMM’s voluntary return mechanism but not through IOM. This mechanism is less transparent; and the number of returnees is unclear. These returns were stopped for a couple of months following the fall of Kabul, but as of early 2022 the state is again sending back Afghans to Afghanistan under ‘voluntary return.’\textsuperscript{423} See section on Access to the territory for more information.

4. Other nationalities

In 2019 PMM granted long term residency and humanitarian residence permits to applicants on the grounds of a new humanitarian circular.\textsuperscript{424} The humanitarian residence permit is mainly granted to Egyptians, Chechens, Daghestanis and Tajiks. The authorities assess each application on a case-by-case basis depending on the likelihood of persecution in the country of origin. These groups are generally not deported to their country of origin, even if a deportation decision is issued against them.\textsuperscript{425}

In 2020 there were reports of systemic discrimination against Iranians in İstanbul, who are stigmatized as thieves.\textsuperscript{426} Asylum seekers of African origin also faced discrimination in registration. Prior to September 2018, African applicants, especially Somali families, were referred to Isparta and Burdur where communities are settled. This has not been the case since the takeover of registration by PMM.\textsuperscript{427}

In 2021, there were reports that Iranians who had lodged their applicants years ago were called for an interview, and their applications were quickly rejected. One stakeholder suspected an internal letter from PMM aimed at applications by Iranians, or an instruction or request from the Iranian state. This practice causes difficulties even for Iranian citizens who had entered Türkiye legally, including those having short-term residence permits or owning property in Türkiye. A stakeholder likened this to a ‘systematic repatriation policy.’\textsuperscript{428}

In 2019, PMM issued a new strategy, the Cohesion Strategy and National Action Plan, according to which six thematic areas are to be addressed: social cohesion, information, education, health, labour market and social support. The authorities started work with SGDD-ASAM, MUDEM and community-based organisations on these issues in 2019. Most initiatives were suspended in 2020 due to COVID-19 and there was little information on what was concretely achieved. A new project was (re)launched in December 2020 to promote inclusive migration management funded by the European Union (EU) and managed jointly by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and the PMM. It seeks to build social cohesion and inclusion as migrants and refugees integrate into Turkish society and includes objectives for employment, health, education, social policies, orientation, and social aid.

In general, however, the Plan has not been visible or well-known. In 2021 the strategy was still in force and was used to plan cohesion activities. However, perhaps because it is a challenging period for Türkiye economically, cohesion attempts are less open. One concrete example given of the implementation of the plan was collaboration with mukhtars (neighbourhood leaders) to strengthen integration at the local level. Another component was to provide migration counselling. 16 migration counselling centres were founded. As the five-year plan is due to end in 2023, the continuation is being planned.

PMM has started a training program called Social Cohesion and Life Training (SUYE). It is an 8-hour training covering Türkiye's cultural structure, traditions and customs, rights and obligations, and information on social life. It targets refugees and migrants aged between 18 and 65. It is not mandatory yet, but there are plans to make it mandatory in the future. There are also plans to increase it to 120 hours of training but currently, it is eight hours long with one hour dedicated to each subject. The training is given in public education centres (halk eğitim merkezi). Social cohesion counselling is not included in this project, just training. One provider for the course reports that foreign nationals participating in the training will be given a certificate by the ‘Provincial Immigration Administration that will make it easier for foreign nationals to apply for residence and citizenship.

Overall, social cohesion and targeted reception activities are difficult because refugees still face severe problems with their legal status. The economic and social difficulties experienced by refugees/asylum-seekers living in Türkiye in 2021 also deepened with the measures taken within the scope of the COVID-19 outbreak and the economic crisis. While the loss of jobs and income, working in precarious and bad conditions, and problems in accessing the right to health and education increased, hate speech and racist attacks against refugees/asylum-seekers intensified. In 2021, hate speech and restrictions towards refugees were even reflected by politicians. The most striking examples of this are the decisions taken by the Bolu and İstanbul Fatih Municipalities. The municipalities in question were prohibited from renting a house to foreign citizens, including those with a residence permit, and it was announced that there would be a 10-fold increase in the water bill and solid waste tax fees for foreign nationals. An administrative case was filed to annul the regulation in Bolu which was pending at time of writing.\textsuperscript{438} In Kocaeli, the Chair of Kocaeli Chamber of Small Shop Owners said that signboards in Arabic would not be allowed.\textsuperscript{439} In Van support provided by the local population is very limited. People offering help to refugees are also intimidated by public authorities. If you get caught taking a group of refugees walking on the road into your car, you will be prosecuted for smuggling, for example.\textsuperscript{440}

In terms of hate crimes, a 2007 finally came to a close in 2021. In 2007 a young Nigerian man, Festus Okey, was shot whilst in police custody in İstanbul and died later in hospital. Key evidence went missing. A police officer was found guilty in 2011 of involuntary manslaughter but did not serve any time in prison. The case was appealed but more years were spent identifying the victim than investigating the death itself. The case became a symbol of access to justice for migrants in Türkiye.\textsuperscript{441} The case was finally solved in March 2021 when a police officer was sentenced to 16 years, 8 months in prison.\textsuperscript{442} The Constitutional Court stated that the right to life of the applicant was violated by the public officers but rejected any racist motivation in the homicide. The Court awarded 80,000 TL (approx. 8,000 EUR) as non-pecuniary damages.\textsuperscript{443}

In 2020, 18-year-old Syrian textile worker called Ali el Hemdan was stopped by the police at ID control in Adana. Hemdan did not show his ID and kept walking in the same direction. Although Hemdan obeyed the police warning and turned around, the police shot him.\textsuperscript{444} His killer, a police officer was sentenced to 25 years in prison in December 2021.\textsuperscript{445}

Racism and discrimination are pervasive in Türkiye and continued in 2021 when there were reports of gangs in İstanbul, kidnapping refugees and asking for ransom.\textsuperscript{446} Syrians and Afghans are the subject of violence. Hate speech on social media is widespread and remains unsanctioned. The incident in Ankara's Altındağ in 2021 is a real-life manifestation of online negativity. In Altındağ, a Syrian and a Turkish citizen got into a fight. During the fight, two locals were stabbed which led to one of them dying. A mob then attacked buildings and vehicles which they believed were owned by Syrian refugees until the police stopped the attack.\textsuperscript{447}

According to the findings of the Human Rights Foundation of Türkiye Documentation Center, in the first 11 months of 2021:

- Six refugees/asylum seekers/immigrants lost their lives and 15 people were injured in a total of five incidents (a fire in İzmir Harmandalı Removal Center, boats sinking in Muğla, three different incidents in Van).
- In seven separate incidents, five people were injured as a result of racist and hateful attacks
- As a result of the security forces' fire, two people lost their lives and 12 people, including four children, were injured.
- 12 people were subjected to torture and other ill-treatment.

A. Access and forms of reception conditions

1. Criteria and restrictions to access reception conditions

</tr>

International protection applicants are entitled to reception conditions from the moment they make a request for international protection and continue to be eligible until a final negative decision is issued.

Under Articles 65 and 69, the LFIP differentiates between the act of “requesting international protection” (uluslararası koruma talebinde bulunan) which can be expressed to any state authorities and the “registration of an application for international protection” (uluslararası koruma başvurusunun kaydı) by DGMM. Therefore, persons must be considered as international protection applicants from the time they approach state authorities and express a request to international protection. The actual registration of an applicant by DGMM may come later.

That said, holding a Foreigners Identification Number (Yabancı kimlik numarası, YKN) is an essential prerequisite for all foreign nationals in procedures and proceedings regarding access to basic rights and services. International protection applicants are not assigned an YKN until they are issued an International Protection Applicant Identification Card after they have travelled to their assigned “satellite city” and have registered their application with the competent PDMM. Given the severe obstacles to and corollary delays in accessing the international protection procedure (see Registration), the time lag between an asylum seeker’s intention to apply for international protection and the issuance of an YKN can be particularly long. This leaves asylum seekers without access to some basic rights.

1.1. Restrictions on reception conditions by type of procedure

With regard to (a) information, (b) provisions for family unity, (c) and provisions for vulnerable persons, both regular procedure applicants and accelerated procedure applicants are subject to the same level of rights and benefits.

With regard to: (a) documentation; (b) freedom of movement and accommodation; (c) “material reception conditions” i.e. housing, social assistance and benefits, financial allowance; (d) healthcare; (e) vocational training; (f) schooling and education for minors; (g) and employment, there are differences in the level and modalities of reception conditions committed to applicants processed in the regular procedure and those processed in the accelerated procedure.

Furthermore, applicants who are detained during the processing of their application and processed under the accelerated procedure – including those detained at border premises – are subject to specific reception modalities. Applicants in whose case an inadmissibility decision has been taken – whether their application was being processed under the regular procedure or the accelerated procedure – will continue to be subject to the same reception regime as before, until the inadmissibility decision becomes final.

1.2. Means assessment

The LFIP contains a “means” test for some of the reception rights and benefits but not for others. With regards to access to primary and secondary education and access to labour market, there is no means criterion. Concerning health care, social assistance and benefits and financial allowance, applicants are subject to a means criterion. The PDMM shall conduct this assessment on the basis of the following considerations:

a. whether the applicants have the means to pay for their shelter;
b. level of monthly income;
c. number of dependant family members;
d. any real estate owned in Türkiye or country of origin;
e. whether they receive financial assistance from family members in Türkiye or country of origin;
f. whether they receive financial assistance from any official bodies in Türkiye or NGOs;
g. any other considerations deemed appropriate.

Where it is determined that an applicant has unduly benefited from services, assistance and other benefits, they shall be obliged to refund costs in part or in their entirety.

Furthermore, for applicants who fail to comply with the obligations listed in Article 89 LFIP or to whom a negative status decision was issued, the DGMM “may” reduce rights and benefits, with the exception of education rights for children and basic health care.

2. Forms and levels of material reception conditions

<thead>

While the LFIP does not employ the term of “reception conditions” as such, Articles 88 and 89 LFIP commit a set of rights, entitlements and benefits for international protection applicants, which thematically and substantially fall within the scope of the EU Reception Conditions Directive.

Articles 88 and 89 LFIP govern the level of provision and access that shall be granted to international protection applicants (and status holders) in the areas of education, health care, social assistance and services, access to labour market, financial allowance. Türkiye does not commit the provision of shelter to international protection on applicants, but authorises DGMM to extend, on discretionary basis, state-funded accommodation to international protection applicants under the auspices of Reception and

Accommodation Centres. At present, there is only one Reception and Accommodation Centre in operation in Yozgat.\textsuperscript{453}

Rights and benefits granted to international protection applicants and status holders may not exceed the level of rights and benefits afforded to citizens.\textsuperscript{454}

2.1. Financial allowance

International protection applicants who are identified to be “in need”, may be allocated a financial allowance by DGMM.\textsuperscript{455} DGMM shall establish the criteria and modalities for this financial allowance, and the Ministry of Finance’s input will be sought in determining the amounts. Applicants whose applications are identified to be inadmissible and those processed in accelerated procedure are excluded from financial allowance.

It must be underlined that this is not a right but rather a benefit that “may be” allocated to “needy” applicant by PMM on discretionary basis. PMM should put in place implementation guidelines, which may include guidance as to the specific criteria and procedure by which an applicant would be identified as “needy” for the purposes of financial allowance. In this regard, applicants are required to keep the competent PDMM informed of their up-to-date employment status, income, any real estate or other valuables acquired.\textsuperscript{456} This indicates that such information may be a factor in the assessment of “neediness” for the purpose of financial allowance. However, there is currently no implementation of Article 89(5) LFIP, and therefore the possibility of financial allowance to international protection applicants by the state remains only theoretical to date.

2.2. Social assistance and benefits

International protection applicants identified “to be in need” can seek access to “social assistance and benefits”.\textsuperscript{457} The LFIP merely refers international protection applicants to existing state-funded “social assistance and benefits” dispensed by the provincial governorates as per Türkiye’s Law on Social Assistance and Solidarity. The Governorates dispense social assistance and benefits under this scheme by means of the Social Solidarity and Assistance Foundations; government agencies structured within the provincial governorates.

According to the Law on Social Assistance and Solidarity, the Governorates dispense both in kind assistance such as coal and wood for heating purposes, food and hygiene items and financial assistance to “poor and needy residents” in the province, including foreign nationals. As such, it will be up to the provincial Social Solidarity and Assistance Foundation to determine whether they qualify for the “poor and needy” threshold.

As of 2018, if the person in need is an adult, social assistance varied between 410-760 TL / €82-152 and if the applicant goes into university the amount of assistance rose to 928 TL / €186. There was also another quarterly financial assistance from the governorates that varied between 80-100 TL / €15-20.\textsuperscript{458}

\textsuperscript{458} Information provided by Ministry of Family and Social Services, February 2018. There was no updated information in 2021.
The Social Solidarity and Assistance Foundation also provides disabled home care assistance to families who have a disabled family member who is unable to cater for his or her daily needs without the care and assistance of another family member. This is a regular financial assistance provided to the caregiver.

There are also social assistance benefits granted by the Ministry of Family and Social Services. The social workers of the Ministry of Family and Social Services' social service units take the final decision in practice. Their evaluation is based on criteria such as the presence of a working family member, provision of social assistance from other bodies, the presence of an emergency or numbers of children in the household. There are biannual or yearly assessment periods upon which social workers might stop this assistance if they deem that the financial situation of the family has changed. In addition, the Ministry of Family and Social Services has an assistance programme to increase the number of refugees speaking Turkish, in coordination with UNHCR.

Municipalities may also provide assistance to applicants for and beneficiaries of international protection. The types of assistance provided by the municipalities differ as they depend on the resources of each municipality. Assistance packages may include coal, food parcels, clothing and other kinds of non-food items. The eligibility criteria to receive assistance may also differ between municipalities.459

The Turkish Red Crescent (Türk Kızılay) is an important actor in this field and is active in each city of Türkiye as a public interest corporation. In most cases, their social assistance is not financial but in kind: distribution of wheelchairs to disabled persons, distribution of food, clothes or soup in winter for people in need. They have also a special fund for people with special and emergency needs. With the help of this fund, they can provide medical help such as buying a prosthesis or hearing instruments for children.460

Beyond social assistance from the state, the EU has funded cash assistance programmes such as the Emergency Social Safety Net (ESSN) and the Conditional Cash Transfer for Education (CCTE). These are described in Temporary Protection: Social Welfare as they are mainly, though not exclusively, addressed to Syrian temporary protection holders.

The ESSN scheme is the single largest humanitarian project in the history of the EU and as of early 2022, was assisting around 1.8 million people. It is designed to help the most vulnerable refugees pay for the things they need most. Currently, the European Commission funds the programme until early 2023.461 Refugee families currently receive 155 Turkish Lira (around €10.5) monthly per family member, enabling them to decide for themselves how to cover essential needs like rent, transport, bills, food and medicine. The programme offers additional quarterly top-ups based on family size.462

There were problems accessing the scheme in 2020 in Central Anatolia due to the pandemic. Interruptions in data updating processes, also meant that protection holders could not submit an ESSN applications.463

The EU has contributed €104 million to bi-monthly cash transfers to vulnerable refugee families whose children attend school regularly under the ‘Conditional Cash Transfers for Education’ (CCTE). The CCTE is the EU's largest-ever humanitarian programme for education in emergencies. As of mid-2022 it is assisting around 795,000 children.464 The EU has funded around 20,000 Syrian refugee children and young people to enrol in accelerated learning programmes helping them make up for lost years of schooling, where they also got basic literacy and numeracy classes, and Turkish language courses. Since 2017, the EU has also provided transportation to an average of 6,000 children per month to help them attend their formal and non-formal education activities. More than 62,000 refugee children have been referred to education programmes and through the implementation of the Support for School Enrolment (SSE) programme, over 37,000 refugee children have been enrolled in formal and non-formal education opportunities. Children and families have also been provided with transportation, translation, and further support to ensure children's enrolment in educational opportunities. The EU also provided tablets and laptops to refugee children during COVID-19 to help them access education during lockdowns.

In 2020, refugees' material conditions considerably worsened due to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. ASAM published a sectoral analysis report after conducting 960 interviews with their counselees on the phone. 63% of participants had difficulties in accessing staple food products and 53% struggled to meet basic hygiene needs. Many of them also confronted challenges with monthly expenses such as rent, utilities and bills. In 2020, UNHCR worked with PMM to provide a one-off payment of 1,000 Turkish Lira (approximately 100 Euros at the time of writing) to refugees hit hardest by the pandemic. Vulnerability criteria were applied although it is not clear what these were. Around 79,400 households received the payment. UNHCR worked with partners to provide PPE kits to households and to temporary accommodation centres in southeast Türkiye. UNHCR also supported 12 community initiatives where Turkish citizens and people seeking international protection came together to make soap and masks to be distributed to refugees and host communities.

In 2021, the economic situation in Türkiye was extremely difficult for everyone; inflation was a particularly serious problem and reached an official rate of 70 per cent by April 2022. This not only affected refugees in terms of the spending power of the allowance received, but also the general situation in the country and anti-refugee sentiment.

For applicants who "fail to comply with the obligations listed in Article 90(1)" or "about whom a negative status decision was issued", the DGMM has the discretion to reduce rights and benefits, with the exception of education rights for minors and basic health care.

Article 90(1) LFIP lists the obligations of international protection applicants as follows:
(a) Report changes in their employment status to the competent DGMM Directorate within 30 days;
(b) Report changes in their income, real estate and valuables in their belonging within 30 days;
(c) Report changes in their residence, identity data and civil status within 20 days;
(g) Refund in part or in full costs incurred where is identified after the fact that he or she has benefited from services, assistance and other benefits although he or she actually did not fulfil the criteria;
(d) Comply with any other requests by the DGMM within the framework of various procedural obligations listed in the LFIP for applicants.

Failure to report to the assigned “satellite city” (see Freedom of Movement) may also lead to restrictions on rights and benefits, with the exception of education and health care.\textsuperscript{473} However, if the application is considered withdrawn ("cancelled"), General Health Insurance (\textit{Genel Sağlık Sigortası}, GSS) is also deactivated.

There were changes to the LFIP in December 2019. Article 89(3)(a) LFIP now provides that access to health care under Türkiye’s General Health Insurance (\textit{Genel Sağlık Sigortası}, GSS) is provided to applicants for international protection one year after the registration of their application, with the exception of persons with special needs. The right to health care ceases upon the issuance of a negative decision.\textsuperscript{474}

The PDMM are responsible and authorised for making the assessment regarding an applicant’s eligibility for GSS coverage. It must be deduced that the decision to request an applicant to refund part or all health care expenses incurred for him or her shall be made in accordance with the same financial means criteria.

According to Article 90(2) LFIP, the decision to reduce or withdraw rights and benefits must be based on a “personalised assessment” by the competent PDMM. The applicant must be notified in writing. Where he or she is not being represented by a lawyer or legal representative, he or she must be explained the legal consequences of the decision as well as the available appeal mechanisms.

Applicants can either file an administrative appeal against such a decision to reduce or withdraw reception rights with IPEC within 10 days of the written notification, or they can directly file a judicial appeal with the competent Administrative Court within 30 days.\textsuperscript{475}

4.1. The “satellite city” system

Each applicant is assigned to a province, where he or she shall register with the PDMM, secure private accommodation by their own means and stay there as long as they are subject to international protection, including after obtaining status. This dispersal scheme is based on Article 71 LFIP, according to which the PMM rarely refers an applicant to a Reception and Accommodation Centre but generally to take up private residence in an assigned province.

The RFIP elaborates the dispersal policy. It defines the concept of “satellite cities” as provinces designated by PMM where applicants for international protection are required to reside.\textsuperscript{476} While new applicants for international protection can initiate their application in a province not listed in the list and may remain there until they are assigned and referred to a satellite city.\textsuperscript{477}

According to the last available list, 62 provinces in Türkiye are designated by PMM as “satellite cities” for the referral of international protection applicants.\(^{478}\)

| Çankırı         | Karabük          | Ordu             |                 |

In practice, however, not all provinces are available to applicants. It is up to the individual PDMM to decide on the ‘opening’ or ‘closing’ of a “satellite city” and on referrals thereto depending on their capacity. When a PDMM is ‘closed’, it usually processes existing applications to issue International Protection Application Identification Cards and Temporary Protection Identification Cards. The ‘closure’ or ‘opening’ of a PDMM is not officially or publicly notified.

The regulation of the “satellite city” system is not based on publicly available criteria, nor is there an official decision taken in respect of each applicant. In general, metropoles and border cities do not usually figure among satellite cities.

Since there is only one fully operational Reception and Accommodation Centres with a capacity of 100 places, currently almost all international protection applicants are in self-financed private accommodation in their assigned provinces.

Since PMM took over the registration process there is no official list of open and closed cities for registration of Syrians and non-Syrians but stakeholders can receive information upon request from the PDMM. The situation also changes according to capacity.

The situation in 2020 was complicated by COVID-19. It was often not clear if PDMMs were accepting applications or for how long and physical access was difficult for both lawyers and international protection applicants. This also delayed the registration process (see Registration of the asylum application). In 2021 this changed in some PDMMs. For example, security guards entered their own HES code to allow people to enter the buildings. However, this was not uniform practice and in some PDMMs restrictions on entry without a HES code still applied.

Since May 2022, it is against the law for any region or area in Türkiye to have a population of foreign nationals that is more than one-quarter of the total population. This includes both people who have made Türkiye their permanent home and those who are merely visiting the country. This rule has been given the name the 25 percent limit or the 25 percent rule. 781 neighbourhoods in different provinces are now closed to foreign nationals seeking address registrations for temporary protection, international protection, and residence permits, as well as changes to their city of residence if they are foreign nationals with residence permits or are under temporary or international protection, with the exception of newborns and instances of nuclear family reunification. Because of this, no non-Turkish national will be able to select any of these 781 neighborhoods in Türkiye as their registered address for official matters, nor will they be able to ask the authorities to change their address to any of these places. Adana, Ankara, İstanbul, İzmir, Muğla, and Antalya are some of the cities that fall into this category, along with a great number of others.\(^\text{479}\)

After changes to the LFIP in December 2019, the law now foresees an administrative fine for those who provide accommodation to unregistered foreigners even unknowingly. In many provinces registration for Temporary Protection and International Protection is not taking place, foreigner citizens cannot complete registration even if they want to.\(^\text{480}\)

4.2. Travelling outside the “satellite city” and sanctions

The PDMM has the authority to impose an obligation on applicants to reside in a specific address, as well as reporting duties.\(^\text{481}\) In practice, applicants are not subject to strict reporting requirements, but their effective residence in the address declared to the PDMM is monitored if they do not appear before the PDMM for prolonged periods. In this case, the PDMM might conduct unannounced checks.

Any travel outside the assigned province is subject to written permission by the PDMM and may be permitted for a maximum of 30 days, which may be extended only once by a maximum of 30 more days.\(^\text{482}\)

As of November 2019, travel permits could be obtained through the online system (E-Devlet) through refugees’ e-accounts. Refugees are expected to get a password from National Postal Services. Some people still have language barriers and have difficulties in accessing the online system.\(^\text{483}\) In 2020 during lockdown due to the COVID-19 pandemic, travel permits were not issued and many refugees and people seeking international protection were not able to travel to health services they were referred to, especially in urgent cases.\(^\text{484}\) In 2021, undocumented foreigners could not travel within the country, especially in Iğdır, Van, and Ağrı (border cities). This meant they could not buy a bus ticket even if they were appointed to another city or stayed in a hotel.\(^\text{485}\)

Failure to stay in an assigned province has very serious consequences for the applicant. International protection applicants who do not report to their assigned province in time or are not present in their registered address upon three consecutive checks by the authorities are considered to have implicitly withdrawn their international protection application.\(^\text{486}\) In practice, if the person is not found at his or her declared address, the PMM may issue a “V71” code declaring that the applicant is in an “unknown location” (Semt-i meçhul) following a residence check.

Furthermore, applicants’ access to reception rights and benefits provided by the LFIP are strictly conditional upon their continued residence in their assigned province. The International Protection Applicant Identification Card is considered valid documentation only within the bounds of the province where the document was issued. They may also be subject to Reduction or Withdrawal of Reception Conditions if they fail to stay in their assigned satellite city.

In practice, however, applicants may be subject to even more severe – and arbitrary – sanctions such as administrative detention in a Removal Centre, with a view to their transfer to their assigned province (see Grounds for Detention). It seems, however, that the rigour of sanctions for non-compliance with the obligation to remain in the assigned province varies depending on the nationality, sexual orientation or gender identity or civil status of the applicant (e.g. single woman) or simply due to the working relationship of the applicant with the PDMM staff. Afghan applicants, for example, often face stricter treatment than other groups. Even where released from Removal Centres after being detained for non-compliance with the obligation to reside in their assigned province, asylum seekers are often required to regularly report to the Removal Centre or to a PDMM in a different province from the one where they reside. In 2019 the number of T6 forms issued increased because new detention centres opened. Ankara PDMM reportedly does not register people with T6 forms or those who illegally enter Türkiye.

It is possible for applicants to request that PMM assign them to another province on grounds of family, health or other reasons. Requests for a change in assigned province for other reasons may be granted by the PMM Headquarters on an exceptional basis. Where an applicant is unhappy about his or her province of residence assignment and his or her request for reassignment is denied, he or she can appeal this denial by filing an administrative appeal with the IPEC within 10 days or filing a judicial appeal with the competent Administrative Court within 30 days.

One of the most prominent shortcomings of Türkiye’s legal framework for asylum is the failure to commit to providing state-funded accommodation to asylum applicants. Article 95(1) LFIP clearly establishes that as a rule, international protection applicants and status holders shall secure their own accommodation by their own means. Neither the LFIP nor the RFIP indicate any plans to offer international protection applicants financial assistance to cover housing expenses.

The PMM is authorised to set up Reception and Accommodation Centres to be used to address “accommodation, nutrition, health care, social and other needs” of international protection applicants and status holders.\textsuperscript{491} The Reception and Accommodation Centres referred to in Article 95 LFIP should not be confused with the “temporary accommodation centres”, the large-scale camps in the south of Türkiye that accommodate refugees from Syria subject to the temporary protection regime (see \textit{Temporary Protection: Housing}).

As of June 2022, there was only one remaining Reception and Accommodation Centre in operation in the province of \textbf{Yozgat}\textsuperscript{492} with a modest capacity of 100 places. The centre is envisioned as a short-stay facility, where persons apprehended and wishing to apply for international protection may be hosted for a couple of days before being directed to register their application. In practice, these centres are mainly available to applicants with special needs such as victims of gender-based violence, torture or physical violence, single women, elderly and disabled people.

In previous years, there was an expectation that six new Reception and Accommodation Centres would become operational with a cumulative accommodation capacity of 2,250 beds. These centres were built within the framework of an EU twinning project and 80\% of the construction budget was financed by the European Commission. The locations chosen for the centres were \textit{İzmir, Kırklareli, Gaziantep, Erzurum, Kayseri} and \textit{Van}.\textsuperscript{493} However, following the EU-Türkiye Action Plan on Migration of 29 November 2015 and the EU-Türkiye statement of 18 March 2016, all six centres were re-purposed to serve as Removal Centres (see \textit{Place of Detention}). This transformation also shows that the asylum procedure in Türkiye has been reorientated towards return.\textsuperscript{494}

In emergencies involving urgent cases, NGOs may be able to arrange accommodation in hotels for individual applicants with special needs within the remit of their capacities.

As elaborated in the section on \textit{Types of Accommodation}, the only Reception and Accommodation Centre is in \textbf{Yozgat} and has a modest capacity of 100 places. Little is known by civil society about the conditions in the centre.

While the current capacity of Reception and Accommodation Centre is extremely limited as compared to the size of the population seeking international protection in Türkiye, Article 95 LFIP and the Regulation on the Establishment of Reception and Accommodation Centres and Removal Centres ("Removal Centres

\textsuperscript{491} Article 95(2) LFIP.
\textsuperscript{494} Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.
Regulation”), dated 22 April 2014 lay down the parameters for the operation and organisational structure of these facilities and Removal Centres.

“Persons with special needs” shall have priority access to free accommodation and other reception services provided in these facilities. ⁴⁹⁵

Reception services provided in the reception and accommodation centres may also be extended to international protection applicants and status holders residing outside the centres, ⁴⁹⁶ although in practice because of the dispersal policy, only applicants registered and residing in the same province as the centre would be able to access any such services.

However, Article 4 of the Removal Centres Regulation provides that a list of 9 general principles must be observed in all functioning and provision in the Centres, including prioritisation of persons with special needs, best interest of the child, confidentiality of personal data, due notification of residents and detainees on the nature and consequences of all proceedings they undergo, respect for right to religious affiliations and worship and non-discrimination.

Currently, almost all international protection applicants pay for private accommodation in their assigned provinces out of their own resources. Access to housing remains deeply challenging due to a range of factors, including high rental prices and onerous advance payment requirements from owners. Rent prices are very high, resulting in two or three families living together in one place to be able to afford rent. Deposits are not paid back when the tenancy contract comes to an end. As a result, a large number of applicants, likely temporary protection beneficiaries (see Temporary Protection: Housing) remain exposed to destitution and homelessness, or accommodation in substandard makeshift camps.

Another obstacle affecting applicants’ accommodation stems from marginalisation from local communities or other refugee populations, whereby people are forced to live in districts far from the city centre, hospitals, education centres and public buildings. Although the types of challenges vary depending on the province and the profile of the applicant, the most common problem is finding a suitable place to live in highly conservative Central and Eastern Anatolian cities. For instance, for applicants of African origin this issue demands more efforts due to prevalent racism. In other provinces such as Hatay, Afghan asylum seekers live in an isolated community far away from the centre of Antakya, due to discrimination from both local and Syrian populations. In Ankara, however, they generally reside in the Altındağ neighbourhood together with Syrian refugees. In İstanbul, an increasing number of Afghans have settled in Küçüksu and Yenimahalle ⁴⁹⁷ and Zeytinburnu. ⁴⁹⁸ In Adana and Mersin, they mostly live in rural areas under precarious conditions with together with Syrians. ⁴⁹⁹

Asylum seekers may apply for a work permit after 6 months following the lodging date of their international protection application. 500

The principles and procedures governing the employment of applicants or international protection beneficiaries shall be determined by the Ministry of Family, Labour and Social Services in consultation with the Ministry of Interior. 501 On that basis, the Regulation on Work Permit of Applicants for International Protection and those Granted International Protection adopted on 26 April 2016 confirms that applicants may apply to the Ministry of Family, Labour and Social Services for a work permit through an electronic system (E-Devlet) after 6 months from the lodging of their asylum application. 502

Applicants must hold a valid identification document in order to apply, 503 meaning that those applicants who do not hold an International Protection Identification Card – due to Admissibility grounds or the applicability of the Accelerated Procedure – are not permitted to apply for a work permit. In any event, it would be difficult for these categories of applicants to obtain a right to access the labour market given the general 6-month waiting period to apply for a work permit.

An exemption from the obligation to obtain a work permit is foreseen for the sectors of agriculture and livestock works. In these cases, however, the applicant must apply for an exemption before the relevant Provincial Directorate of Family, Labour and Social Services. 504 The Ministry of Family and Social Services may introduce province limitations or quotas in these sectors. 505 More generally, the Regulation entitles the Ministry to impose sectoral and geographical limitations to applicants’ right to employment, without providing further detail as to the applicable grounds for such restrictions. 506 In addition, applicants cannot be paid less than the minimum wage. 507

In the Cohesion Strategy and National Action Plan (2018-2023) priorities for the labour market, include:
- Providing reliable and standardised information on labour market;
- Research on professional qualifications of migrants and access to the labour market;
- Protection of right to work as well as information on rights and working conditions.

The action plan includes:
- A website with information on conditions for access to the labour market depending on status;
- Awareness raising on rights and working conditions;
- Strengthening recognition of migrants’ qualifications.

As mentioned above, most initiatives were suspended in 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic and implementation in 2021 is unclear.

In an interesting case, İstanbul Magistrate Court examined the situation of a person who had a deportation decision who was found to be working without a work permit. An administrative fine of 249 TL had been charged. In its judgment the Court noted that the person had to survive and to do that had to work. Although there had been a violation of a specific law from the constitutional perspective there was no violation as the person had to survive. The fine was cancelled.

In 2020 a total of 123,574 work permits were issued including 62,368 to immigrants from Syria, 4,015 to citizens of Iran, 1,794 to citizens of Iraq and 1,921 to citizens of Afghanistan. Figures are not yet available for 2021. Applicants for international protection continue to face widespread undeclared employment and labour exploitation in Türkiye, similar to temporary protection beneficiaries (see Temporary Protection: Access to the Labour Market).

The Regulation also foresees the possibility for applicants to have access to vocational training schemes organised by the Turkish Job Agency (İŞKUR). In practice, Public Education Centres under provincial Governorates and İŞKUR offer vocational courses to asylum seekers in many localities.

A new project was launched in early 2020 by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) on creating accelerators for entrepreneur refugees in Türkiye. According to research, in the nine years since the Syrian crisis, over 10,000 companies have been established in Türkiye by Syrians that have created around 100,000 jobs and Syrian businesspeople have invested over 1,5 billion TRY in Türkiye.

In 2020, the Leather, Textiles, and Footwear Workers Association released a report documenting the abuse of refugees’ rights who work in the İzmir leather, textile, and footwear industries. Out of 100 surveyed employees the most predominant problem was underpayment due to informal employment practices. 60% of the participants stated that they were paid below the minimum wage and Turkish workers get paid 200-250 Turkish lira more per month. 65% of the refugees stated that they worked 11-12 hours every day without getting paid overtime. A textile worker also added that employers threaten to fire them when they complain about long working hours. 77% of the refugees said they worked longer hours compared to Turkish citizens. Lastly, refugees working in these industries were likely to be exposed to ill-treatment, discrimination, and hate speech. One Syrian leatherworker explained that refugees are subject to degrading treatment by employers which makes the existing biases towards Turkish workers even worse.\textsuperscript{517}

COVID-19 had a huge impact on work opportunities in Türkiye, including for refugees and asylum seekers. Due to the type of work typically undertaken by refugees, their poor economic situation and a lack of access to public services such as healthcare, the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic affected refugees to a greater extent, deepening already existing income inequality.\textsuperscript{518} Since Türkiye’s economy depends a great deal on temporary workers, refugees’ declining labour force participation during the pandemic had a negative impact on the economy. 64% of migrant households in Türkiye experienced a sharp decrease in their monthly household income during the pandemic, in 56 % of these households debts increased and their access to food and hygiene decreased. \textsuperscript{519} Research conducted by NGO ASAM with 1,162 temporary protection status holders showed that after the COVID-19, breakout unemployment rates among refugees went up substantially from 18% to 89%.\textsuperscript{520} In İstanbul interviews were conducted during the COVID-19 period, and it was found that more Syrians and Afghans work in the textile sector than Turks. The salaries of workers without a work permit were higher than those of formal workers; therefore, people tended not to get a work permit. On the other hand, obtaining work permits for qualified personnel is quite long and tiring and applications mostly get rejected. \textsuperscript{521}

According to a report from 2021, it is not possible for asylum seekers, who are in “irregular” migratory situation because their legal stay has expired or because they have already entered illegally, to work in a formal job. Refugees who have to meet their basic food and other needs to live are employed in various jobs without any rights or guarantees. Since they accept salaries far below the minimum wage, they have to work more. Practices such as long working hours, low wages, the possibility to be dismissed at any time, humiliation, insults and failure to get payment are common. Children are also employed as apprentices in industrial sites for very low wages, almost in condition of enslavement.\textsuperscript{522}

International protection applicants and their family members shall have access to elementary and secondary education services in Türkiye.\textsuperscript{523}

Türkiye has been a party to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child since 1995. The right to education is also recognised by Article 42 of the Turkish Constitution, which provides that “no one shall be deprived of the right of learning and education”. Türkiye’s Law on Primary Education and Training provides that primary education is compulsory for all girls and boys between the ages of 6-13 and must be available free of charge in public schools.\textsuperscript{524} Currently the 8-year compulsory primary education is divided into two stages of four years each. Parents or guardians are responsible for registering school-age children to schools in time. Furthermore, the Basic Law on National Education also explicitly guarantees non-discrimination in extension of education services to children, “regardless of language, race, gender, religion”.

In order for a parent to be able to register his or her child to a public school, the family must already have International Protection Applicant Identification Cards, which also list the Foreigners Identification Number (YKN) assigned by the General Directorate of Population Affairs to each family member. This YKN registry is a prerequisite for school authorities to be able to process the child’s registration. However, the Ministry of National Education instructs public schools to facilitate the child’s access to school even where the family has not yet completed their international protection registration process at the PDMM. Children need to attend school in the “satellite city” to which the family has been assigned (see Freedom of Movement).

Since the language of education is Turkish, language barriers present a practical obstacle for asylum seeker children. There is no nationwide provision of preparatory or catch-up classes for asylum-seeking children who start their education in Türkiye or who did not attend school for some time due to various reasons. In practice, unaccompanied children who are accommodated in state shelters are offered Turkish language classes provided in the shelters before they are enrolled in schools. For other asylum-seeking children, while in theory they have access to Turkish classes provided by public education centres or the municipalities in their assigned province, in practice such language classes attuned for them are not universally available around Türkiye. Nor does the Turkish educational system offer adaptation or catch-up classes to foreign children whose previous education was based on a different curriculum. However, community centres operated by Türk Kızılay across the country also offer Turkish language classes and other services to applicants (see Content of Temporary Protection).

Where the child has previous educational experiences prior to arrival to Türkiye, he or she will undergo an equivalence assessment by Provincial Education Directorate to determine what grade would be appropriate for him or her to enrol. Particularly in cases where the family does not have any documents demonstrating the child’s previous schooling, the equivalence determination may prove complicated.

Finally, although public schools are free, auxiliary costs such as notebooks, stationary and school uniforms present a financial burden on parents, who are already finding it very difficult to make ends meet in their assigned provinces.

Regarding asylum-seeking children with special needs, the Ministry of National Education instructs that where a foreign student is identified to be in need of special education, necessary measure shall be taken in accordance with the Regulation on Special Education Services, which governs the provision of education services to children with physical and mental disabilities.

As part of the new Cohesion Strategy and National Plan, which foresees key issues to be addressed by PMM, education is listed as one of the six focus areas.

Priorities for education include:
- Research why some migrant children miss school or stop attending;
- Improving the continuity of schooling including in formal education;
- Supporting access to higher education;
- Creating more informal programmes of education in line with the needs of migrants.

525 Law No 1738 Basic Law on National Education.
Plans include:
- A review of the legislative base;
- Increase in capacity of formal education institutions;
- Information activities;
- Training for teachers including on psychological needs of children who may have undergone trauma;
- GEM transition to schools;
- Resources and assistance in libraries;
- Language skills and other courses to fill gaps;
- Post-school study and peer education including with Turkish classmates;
- Awareness raising with families of migrant children;
- Promoting access to pre-school education;
- Assistance for those with breaks in education;
- More higher education opportunities;
- Intercultural programmes at universities;
- Turkish language curriculum for different ages and levels of education;
- Non-formal education opportunities including in libraries, community and municipal centres etc;
- Mobile libraries in temporary accommodation centres;
- Vocational courses.

In 2019, social cohesion classes were initiated at schools. Foreign and Turkish students began to attend classes to better understand their cultures. The Temporary Education Centres (GEM) were all closed in 2020. As mentioned above, most social cohesion initiatives were suspended in 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic, particularly in the field of education as most students (Turkish included) studied at home for most of the year.

The Turkish government has provided EBA TV (known as Education Information Network TV) offering educational services to those who are unable to go to school. Education is provided for students in twenty-minute videos on three channels by TRT (known as Turkish Radio Television). Research showed that the restrictions due to the virus affected the learning processes of forced migrant children as there were problems accessing the internet or devices such as televisions, tablets, and computers. Other research by the NGO ASAM with refugees and beneficiaries of temporary protection showed that 47% of participants were not able to benefit from distance education applications. The main reason was a lack of suitable devices or hardware, such as a TV, mobile phone, computer or internet access. In Konya, only 20-25% of children could access EBA. The main problems were a lack of smartphones, tablets and laptops. A higher risk of child labour and early child marriages was also reported. Families complained their children were losing their language skills. Expectations for children to contribute to domestic labour or the household budget increased in families who lost work and income after the pandemic, paving the way for an increase in child labour rates among refugee children.

In research conducted in the Konak, Buca, Karabağlar and Bornova distincts in İzmir, with 100 refugees (61 boys, 39 girls), almost half of the children who continued their education before the pandemic could not continue distance education during the pandemic. The school attendance rate decreased from 63% to 35%. A lack of technical equipment, lack of information, and language barriers were the main reasons for not continuing distance education.\textsuperscript{532} 43 out of a hundred refugee families said their child was working during the pandemic, almost doubling.\textsuperscript{533} The reasons given for the children working include: long-term unemployment in the family; it being easier for a child to find a job; employers giving lower weekly wages to child workers; being cut off from education; the idea that children are not affected by the epidemic.\textsuperscript{534} The majority of them work long hours. All of the children who worked 11-12 hours per day worked in textile and shoe factories or in restaurants and kiosks. This data reveals that refugee child labour, which increased during the pandemic process, may become permanent and the return to school rates may remain low.\textsuperscript{535}

Those who are registered can at least benefit from the right to education to a certain extent. Children of asylum seekers who have received deportation decisions, whose international protection applications have been rejected, and whose foreign identity numbers have been deactivated cannot access education. For instance, a deportation decision was issued for an Afghan family in Van, and then was overruled. Despite the court ruling, the child could not be enrolled in school. An application was made to the juvenile court for a preemptive measure, but the child could not start the school year until the end of the first semester. Even when the court decision was submitted, its implementation took time because institutions resist applying them. The preventive measures should generally be issued and implemented promptly, but this does not always happen.\textsuperscript{536}

There have been issues enrolling the children of Iraqi families in primary school in Ankara. PDMMs suspend the provision of some basic services when international protection applications are rejected. According to the law, the right to education and basic health services should be excluded from this suspension. Practices differ significantly from one province to another, however, and in some provinces like Ankara, even people’s identity documents get confiscated. There is no problem for children who have been enrolled for a long time - they are not usually expelled from school if the family's application is rejected. However, children cannot technically register again after the family’s application is denied. When a foreigner's ID number is entered into the electronic system, it indicates that they are not registered. In one case in Ankara, the court decision was not implemented for at least two months. The girl could not go to school until the second semester started. Children who cannot access the help of a lawyer experience significantly more difficulties. In this case, the child's family was scared when the school administration was forced to implement the court decision because they thought that PMM would have a hostile attitude towards them afterwards.\textsuperscript{537}

In İzmir it seemed more difficult. Five children from different age groups and education levels in İzmir applied to the courts to have access to education but did not get a favourable decision from the court.\textsuperscript{538}

In İstanbul, open education is provided for children over the age of 15, regardless of their parents' residence.

Families living in Türkiye and whose children attend school frequently mention school-related problems. Some children are exposed to physical violence at school and are discriminated against by the teacher. There are schools where separate classes are created for migrant children. Families also face discrimination and pressure from their neighbours.\textsuperscript{539}

In total in the 2020-2021 academic year, 47,482 Syrian students (29,400 Male, 18,082 Female) were enrolled in Turkish Higher Education Institutions.\textsuperscript{540} UNHCR worked with the Presidency for Turks Abroad and Related Communities (\textit{Yurtdışı Türkler ve Akraba Topluluklar Başkanlığı}, YTB) to provide university scholarships for refugee students as well as institutional capacity support. For the academic year 2020-2021, UNHCR contributed to the tertiary education of 70 students through higher education scholarship programmes.\textsuperscript{541} UNHCR also supported 475 university students through semester cash grants, as they could not benefit from the fee waiver that existed for Syrian nationals until recently.\textsuperscript{542} In 2021, UNHCR contributed to the tertiary education of 102 students of other nationalities for DAFI (Albert Einstein German Academic Refugee Initiative) and higher education scholarships. In addition, UNHCR supported 1,323 students of nationalities other than Syrian through semester cash grants in 2021. UNHCR also supported 27 higher education advisors who act as academic advisors to scholarship students and who provided over 12,000 counselling sessions to both refugee and Turkish students in need.\textsuperscript{543} Meanwhile, UNHCR continued to advocate for the waiver of higher education fees for international protection students.

A new regulation was introduced in 2022 whereby foreign students have to pay a contribution fee for higher education, including Syrian students and blue cardholders.\textsuperscript{544} Turkish universities will organize specific exams for foreign students with specific courses to help refugees prepare for admission tests.\textsuperscript{545}

Türkiye’s General Health Insurance (\textit{Genel Sağlık Sigortası}, GSS) scheme makes it compulsory for all residents of Türkiye to have some form of medical insurance coverage, whether public or private. For persons whose income earnings are below a certain threshold and are therefore unable to make premium payments to cover their own medical insurance, the scheme extends free of charge health care coverage.\textsuperscript{546}

A means assessment for the purpose of health care coverage decisions on applicants is foreseen in the law (see Criteria and Restrictions to Access Reception Conditions) and is carried out by PMM. The law also states that where PMM at a later stage identifies that an applicant is partially or fully able to pay their own health insurance premiums, he or she may be asked to pay back in part of in full the premium amount paid for by PMM to the general health insurance scheme.

\footnotesubscript{546}{\textsuperscript{546}} Law No 5510 on Social Security and General Health Insurance lays down the scope and modalities of Türkiye’s general health insurance scheme.
\end{footnotesize}
Article 89(3) LFIP provides that “international protection applicants and status holders who are not covered by any medical insurance scheme and do not have the financial means to afford medical services” shall be considered to be covered under Türkiye’s GSS scheme and as such have the right to access free of charge health care services provided by public health care service providers. For such persons, the health insurance premium payments shall be paid by PMM.

Article 89(3) LFIP designates that PMM shall make the premium payments on behalf of international protection applicants and status holders. Previously the Ministry of Family and Social Services made the payments in the framework of an arrangement between the two agencies. The assessment of means took the form of an “income test” which classified the beneficiary according to the level of income. Persons in the “G0” class have health care premiums covered entirely, while individuals in categories “G1”, “G2” and “G3” proportionally cover some of their health care costs.\(^{547}\) However, the assessment criteria changed in 2019 after changes to the LFIP. According to the new law, the General Health Insurance Scheme is no longer applicable for international protection applicants one year after their registration, apart from those with special needs or ones approved by the Directorate General.

Assessment criteria are, therefore, no longer applied to non-Syrians apart from vulnerable groups. For vulnerable cases the PMM requires evidence such as health and medical reports issued by state hospitals showing the vulnerable person’s health condition. These medical reports are difficult to obtain for those who do not have health care coverage.\(^{548}\)

In addition, international protection status holders often do not know that vulnerable groups are exempted from the one-year limitation. Exceptions are not enforced to a large extent. There is also an appointment problem for all citizens in Türkiye, that includes foreign citizens.\(^{549}\)

In 2020 some applicants with special needs had difficulties accessing healthcare. After the LFIP amendment in December 2019, an applicant for international protection with special needs had her health insurance terminated after one year even though the law states that people with special needs should continue to have access. For patients who were HIV-positive or with chronic illnesses it was necessary to submit a medical certificate to prove a specific disease, but it is very expensive to get them without health insurance. Documents can sometimes be provided with the financial support of NGOs.\(^{550}\) In Van there was no free access to medical care except in emergency cases during COVID-19 in 2020.\(^{551}\) In Central Anatolia people did not disclose their HIV+ status during the initial application for health insurance because if they do their applications for health insurance are not accepted. However, if they report their HIV status after being registered, their insurance will be activated. There are different practices in different cities against LGBTI people but in Kaysere, for instance, all LGBTI people received a rejection for their application for health insurance so far. There was a HIV-positive applicant in Konya who received a deportation decision and whose health insurance was not activated by PDMM. His lawyer challenged the deactivation decision of the health insurance. The administrative court in Kaysere ruled that the deactivation was unlawful and that the insurance should be re-activated. However, the PDMM did not activate the insurance. Sex workers do not inform PDMM about their vulnerabilities and needs because PDMMs often try to deport them.\(^{552}\)

In İstanbul in 2021, the right to health of non-Syrians is often only accessible in emergencies. Usually, the patient and those who need treatment in the family of the person with international protection status have an identity card during the court application process. But, once the case gets rejected, the health service is terminated, and people get victimized by this application. So, these people access health services in the private sector.\textsuperscript{553}

When a person applies for international protection in İzmir, they are expected to prove that they have a medical need in order to benefit from health services. While the pandemic continued, health insurance was necessary even just to be vaccinated. It should automatically get activated according to regulations, but it does not. In addition, if the person gets a diagnosis before coming to Türkiye, they are not provided with health services according to the law. This is a nationwide practice. After one year, international protection applicants cannot benefit from health services. This caused the disruption of hormone therapy for trans people. They fear their third-country placements will be revoked if they win their cases in Türkiye. The exception for vulnerable groups applies to some pregnant women. There was a child patient with spinal muscular atrophy (SMA). After a long debate in Türkiye it was decided social security should cover this medicine but in this case it was not covered.\textsuperscript{554}

In Central Anatolia, in 2021, the one-year requirement for access to health services has also negatively affected foreign citizens. There is no uniform application among PDMMs. Some require a disability report proving that the applicant has 50\% disability to consider them as vulnerable whilst others require 40\% or 60\%. Some PDMMs accept disability reports, others do not. Counselees cannot access health services if their international protection case is rejected. In this case, foreign citizens are recommended to open a new administrative lawsuit against PMM. There are two positive decisions from Kayseri administrative court ruling that the applicant’s insurance should be reactivated until the legal process ends (for about six months). In another decision, the judge accepted the interim judgment and cancelled the administrative application, but in these two cases, the applicants had severe health conditions (like cancer). Another problem is the insurance debts of foreign citizens with grave health conditions who cannot access health services due to high debts.\textsuperscript{555}

1. Scope of health care coverage

Under the Turkish health system, differentiation is made between primary, secondary and tertiary public health care institutions:

- Health stations, health centres, maternal and infant care and family planning centres and tuberculosis dispensaries that exist in each district in each province are classified as primary healthcare institutions;
- State hospitals are classified as secondary health care institutions;
- Research and training hospitals and university hospitals are classified as tertiary health care institutions.

Persons covered under the GSS scheme are entitled to spontaneously access initial diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation services at primary health care institutions. These providers also undertake screening and immunisation for communicable diseases, specialised services for infants, children and teenagers as well as maternal and reproductive health services. The EU-funded SİHAT project supported and developed primary health care services between 2016 and 2019 in 28 provinces with a dense Syrian population to increase access to health services.

GSS beneficiaries are also entitled to spontaneously approach public hospitals and research and training hospitals in their province. Their access to medical attention and treatment in university hospitals, however, is on the basis of a referral from a state hospital. In some cases, state hospitals may also refer a beneficiary to a private hospital, where the appropriate treatment is not available in any of the public health care providers in the province. In such a case, the private hospital is compensated by the GSS and the beneficiary is not charged.

\textsuperscript{555} Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.

In principle, referrals to university hospitals and private hospitals are only made for emergency and intensive care services as well as burn injuries and cancer treatment. That said, in situations of medical emergency, persons concerned may also spontaneously approach university hospitals and private hospitals without a referral.

GSS beneficiaries’ access to secondary and tertiary healthcare services is conditional upon whether the health issue in question falls within the scope of the 2013 Health Implementation Directive (Sağlık Uygulama Tebliği, SUT).556

For treatment of health issues which do not fall within the scope of the SUT or for treatment expenses related to health issues covered by the SUT which exceed the maximum financial compensation amounts allowed by the SUT, beneficiaries may be required to make an additional payment.

According to SUT, persons covered by the general health insurance scheme are expected to contribute 20% of the total amount of the prescribed medication costs and a small additional cost depending on the number of items.

If persons have a chronic disease such as diabetes, hypertension, or asthma that requires taking medicine regularly, in this case, they can approach a state hospital and ask them to issue a medication report. By submitting the medication report to the pharmacy, they can be exempted from the contribution fee.

People can also approach public health centres (toplum sağlığı merkezi) in their satellite city to benefit from primary health services free of charge.

According to Article 67(2) LFIP, applicants who are identified as “victims of torture, rape and other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence” shall be provided appropriate treatment with a view to supporting them to heal after past experiences. However, as to the actual implementation of this commitment, guidance merely mentions that PMM authorities may cooperate with relevant public institutions, international organisations and NGOs for this purpose.557 That said, the free health care coverage of international protection applicants would also extend to any mental health treatment needs of applicants arising from past acts of persecution. In any case, free health care coverage under the general health insurance scheme also extends to mental health services provided by public health care institutions. Provincial Directorates of Family and Social Policies also offer psychological assistance, although interpreters are not available in all of them.

A number of NGOs also offer a range of psychosocial services in different locations around Türkiye although capacity is limited. SGDD-ASAM, IKGV, Support to Life and Türk Kızılay are some of the NGOs providing psychosocial support in different cities across Türkiye. Türk Kızılay Community Centre in Şanlıurfa collaborates with UNICEF, PMM and the Ministry of Health on empowering the mental health of refugees. Mental health centres will be established in Şanlıurfa and Ankara (pilot cities) then extended to 18 cities.558

As of April 2021 there were twelve community centers in Bursa, İzmir, Adana, Ankara, Kayseri, Konya, Gaziantep, Kahramanmaraş, Mersin, Şanlıurfa and two in İstanbul. The teams consist of psychiatrists, clinical psychologists, child development specialists, psychiatric nurses and translators.559

According to the Cohesion Strategy and National Action Plan (2018-2023) the following were priorities for improvements in the area of health:

558 Information provided by Türk Kızılay Community Centre Urfa, February 2020.
- Health assessments for immigrants upon arrival
- Vaccinations
- Access to primary care
- Increasing capacity for access to secondary and tertiary care
- Coordination
- Sensitizing health sector staff to needs of immigrants

The Action Plan includes:
- Ensuring better coordination of services;
- Health assessments upon arrival and vaccination programmes;
- Migrant health centres where there are high concentrations of people with temporary protection;
- Development of health services in return centres;
- Mobile health services for disadvantaged groups such as the elderly and disabled as well as for agricultural workers;
- Access to reproductive health;
- Migrant health centres able to provide oral/dental health services;
- Increasing access to community health centres;
- Central health appointment system in other languages than Turkish;
- Information tools in different languages;
- Bilingual patient orientation staff in hospitals where high concentration of migrants.

Many initiatives were suspended in 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic however, information materials were provided in different languages on the pandemic and different measures for individuals to take. As discussed previously, social cohesion activities were not openly promoted during 2021, perhaps due to sensitivities about the economy.

2. Practical constraints on access to health care

To benefit from GSS, applicants must already be registered with the PDMM and issued an International Protection Applicant Identification Card, which also lists the YKN assigned by the General Directorate of Population Affairs to each applicant. This YKN designation is a prerequisite for hospitals and other medical service providers to be able to intake and process an asylum seeker. The current obstacles to Registration thus have repercussions on asylum seekers’ access to health care.

The language barrier remains the predominant problem encountered by asylum seekers in seeking to access to health care services. Hospitals in Türkiye give appointments to patients over the telephone. Since hospital appointment call centres do not serve prospective patients in any language other than Turkish, foreign nationals need the assistance of a Turkish speaker already at appointment stage. There is no nationwide system for the provision of interpretation assistance to international protection applicants and beneficiaries, although the EU-funded SIHHAT project includes interpreters for Syrian temporary protection beneficiaries (see Temporary Protection: Health Care). NGOs in some locations also offer limited services to accompany particularly vulnerable asylum seekers to hospitals. In some provinces such as Hatay, doctors only accept interpreters under oath, while in others like Ankara hospitals have their own interpreters.

Where an international protection applicant has a medical issue, for which no treatment is available in his or her assigned province of residence, he or she may request to be assigned to another province to be able to undergo treatment (see Freedom of Movement). Article 110(5) RFIP allows applicants to request to be assigned to another province for health reasons.

561 Information provided by Bosphorus Migration Studies, January 2019.
Article 90(2) LFIP states that for applicants who fail to comply with the obligations listed in Article 90(1) or about whom a negative status decision was issued, the DGMM may proceed to a Reduction of rights and benefits, with the exception of education rights for minors and basic health care. In practice, however, PDMM have proceeded with the de-activation of the GSS for persons whose application for international protection is considered withdrawn (“cancelled”) due to non-compliance with the obligation to stay in the assigned “satellite city” or rejected, even without the decision having become final. Lawyers have challenged these cases but unsuccessfully so far.562

In addition, in provinces such as Afyon and Kırıkkale, where individuals are able to re-activate their GSS, they cannot benefit from health care before paying outstanding premium debts for the period during which their GSS was de-activated.563

After legal amendments, the health insurance of Afghans was deactivated immediately in Adıyaman and Gaziantep. In Van the health insurance of both Iranians and Afghans was deactivated right after the law entered into force.564

Obstacles in accessing healthcare continued in 2020 during the COVID-19 pandemic, although Presidential Decision number 2399 from 13 April 2020 guaranteed that everyone, regardless of whether they have social security or insurance, could access personal protective materials, diagnostic tests and medicine free of charge. There have been some problems due to the lack of a written regulation about how to register unregistered/undocumented immigrants who do not benefit from general health insurance in the system and it is unclear at time of writing if hospitalization is covered.565

In a report published by the NGO ASAM, which involved 1,162 refugees and temporary protection holders, 15% of all participants stated that they felt the need to go to a hospital during COVID-19 but could not access health services for a variety of reasons. 25% thought that healthcare centres were closed, showing that a significant portion of refugees were not adequately informed about COVID-19 measures.566

In the southeast region, if the health insurance of a person with special needs is deactivated and PMM recognises the need then they temporarily re-activate the health insurance of the applicant for a month and request a health report. The health report is then used to determine whether the insurance should be extended or not. Private hospitals in the south-east region receive a contribution fee from Syrian patients. If patients cannot pay for the contribution fee they have to sign a bill. In case of non-payment, their insurance is deactivated. As opposed to Turkish citizens, applicants for international protection have to pay a contribution fee for cancer treatment, eye treatment, child medical care and hepatitis.567

In 2021 refugees in Van who were not registered could not use the health services. They can only receive treatment when they apply to health care units in an emergency or mandatory situation. However, when they apply to any public institution including hospitals, that public institution is obliged to report it to the relevant law enforcement authorities. For this reason, although most of the refugees have health problems, they do not go to hospitals due to deportation concerns, and their right to access healthcare services, which is a basic human right, is violated.568 Another option for unregistered refugees is to pay for treatment in private hospitals. Private hospitals are also required to report unregistered migrants to law enforcement.

However, since it is a paid service, it is known that this obligation is sometimes ignored. Refugees who have applied for asylum and whose application is in the evaluation process are legally entitled to free access to medical services for one year, but the RSD procedure may take years. In this way, health care is no longer a right, but is converted into a “service” that is provided for a fee.

People without identity cards struggled to access COVID-19 health services and could not be vaccinated. Even where an appointment was made by a lawyer for one individual, they did not attend due to fears of deportation. Access to vaccines was not free of charge for migrants who paid 400 TL in some cases (there was no application fee for Turkish citizens).

A system of verification of addresses has been ongoing in the southeastern region since the end of 2021, first for temporary protection holders, then international protection holders. Administrative fines are being issued. In general, the PDMM notifies those who are not living in their declared addresses that first their GSS will be deactivated then their ID will be cancelled. This was the case in Isparta, and there are no online appointments to reactivate the IDs. Individuals have been told that all appointments were taken for 2022 meaning that they would have to live undocumented. It is estimated that in Izmir at least one quarter of all migrants’ IDs will be deactivated if they do not return to their cities of registration. In Afyon, the PDMM said that they would not accept any disability report to reactivate the GSS of international protection holders except for those who are pregnant because there had been an increase in counterfeited health reports. After the COVID-19 lockdowns, refugees have tended not to go to PDMMs for the duty to sign, especially Somalis which has led to a reported increase in cases of ID deactivation. In the Aegean region, it is impossible to hand a written petition to PDMM which makes it difficult for lawyers to open administrative lawsuits in relation to access to health. There is also a problem with health insurance debts. In Denizli, international protection holders go to emergency services and get the service but then the PDMM imposes a fee on their name. As the fees often cannot be paid by international protection holders this creates a huge debt in time.

E. Special reception needs of vulnerable groups

The “persons with special needs” category includes “unaccompanied minors, handicapped persons, elderly, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, victims of torture, rape and other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence”.

In addition to the measures set out in Identification, the LFIP makes a number of special provisions regarding the reception services to be extended to “persons with special needs” including unaccompanied children. However, the additional reception measures prescribed by the law are far from sufficient.

1. Reception of unaccompanied children

When it comes to unaccompanied children, Article 66 LFIP orders that the principle of “best interests of the child” shall be observed in all decisions concerning unaccompanied minor applicants. According to the new

Article 66(B) LFIP, all children younger than 18 shall be placed in children’s shelters or other premises under the authority of the Ministry of Family and Social Services.\textsuperscript{575}

There are different procedures applied for separated children. In Kilis and Mersin, if one of the parents is alive the courts cancel the custody of children first and then appoint a guardian. In Gaziantep, the courts directly appoint a guardian.\textsuperscript{576} In Antakya, there is a protocol between the PDDM and the Ministry of Family and Social Policies with regard to the registration of separated children and constitution of their legal relationships with their families. In Antakya in 2019, there were concerns over the custody of unaccompanied and separated children and legal assessments of new guardians not being conducted carefully.\textsuperscript{577}

Unaccompanied male children may face difficulties in accessing protection. If the child does not have an identity card, the Child Support Centres (ÇODEM) will help to obtain one. If the child goes directly to a PDMM, he will not obtain an ID card as he must receive a guardianship decision from a court first. However, when children go to court for the appointment of a guardian, judges say that they cannot appoint a guardian because the child is not registered and, therefore, legally does not exist. This creates a vicious circle where children remain in a prolonged state of limbo and further hinders their access to the international protection procedure. Children staying in dormitories get a foreign identification number, not an ID card to access basic services such as education. When they leave the dormitory and reach the age of 18, they can apply for an ID. This is common practice, especially in Çanakkale.

Syrian children in Kilis State Hospital and Adana Balcali Hospital come from camps in the buffer zone due to poor medical infrastructure in the camps. They come alone in an ambulance, with no adult companion to take care of them then return to their camps in an ambulance again. A guardian is not appointed. Their legal representative (their parents’) consent is not received and they can undergo operations without consent.\textsuperscript{578}

There is no clarity in Child Protection Law and its regulation. The law concerning exit procedures for refugee children staying in dormitories is unclear. Children’s settlement is also problematic, and it is traumatizing because they are placed in dormitories by the juvenile police. Police officers often do not know what to do and how to treat children. Practices change from district to district. A more authoritarian attitude is observed in some police units like Fatih. In the Bebek police department, the attitude of the police is more sensitive.\textsuperscript{579} In Türkiye, protection measures are taken when a child is placed in an orphanage, but a guardian is not appointed directly, which is problematic. Since the child does not have a legal representative, permission to leave cannot be obtained, even if all the other steps of family reunification are completed. PMM requires a legal representative for the child to leave the orphanage, but it is unclear who will handle the child’s exit process as no guardian has been appointed. In some institutions, this problem is solved by assigning an internal officer for the signature. However, in the orphanages in İstanbul, civil servants do not want to take on this responsibility and even when all other bureaucratic issues related to family reunification have been resolved.\textsuperscript{580}

Undocumented foreign citizens cannot travel within the country, especially in Iğdır, Van, and Ağrı (border cities). They cannot buy a bus ticket even if they have been appointed to another city or are staying in a hotel. When they are caught they are sent to removal centres and then pushed backed towards the Iranian border. In Van, those who have a vulnerability are sent to other cities in Türkiye instead, particularly, unaccompanied children. They are often sent with unrelated adults so that the authorities do not need to deal with the administrative burden of unaccompanied children. In Ankara, Van, and Erzurum, a stakeholder noted that unaccompanied children whose age was around 15-16 had been determined as 18 on paper and other unaccompanied children whose age was below 12-13 were determined as the relative of these older children and were released from child-care facilities. These applications were found just to avoid the administrative burden of unaccompanied children. There were also cases where the wrong name was written for the unaccompanied children and the legal aid was provided based on this wrong name. When the lawyer arrives at the child-care facility, the lawyer cannot see the children as the name written on the lawyer’s appointment letter is different from the child’s real name. Age determination tests are still based on bone tests and psychological tests are not applied at all.581

2. Reception of survivors of torture or violence

According to Article 67(2) LFIP, applicants who are identified as “victims of torture, rape and other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence” shall be provided appropriate treatment with a view to helping them heal from past experiences. However, as to the actual implementation of this commitment, guidance merely mentions that DGMM authorities may cooperate with relevant public institutions, international organisations and NGOs for this purpose (see Health Care). It is also important to note that registration is a pre-condition to access shelters. When unregistered women, or any other unregistered applicant for that matter, go to a police station to lodge a complaint, they can be sent to removal centres and may face deportation. A good example of practice reported in Istanbul in 2020 concerned a Syrian woman and two Afghan women, who were not international protection applicants, who had been living in Istanbul without registration for a long time. The judge immediately issued an order to PDDM to issue an identity card for the concerned women so as to grant them access to a women’s shelter.582

Gender-based violence against refugee women persists as a risk. In early 2019, an Uzbek woman was raped by a police officer in İstanbul and, as criminal proceedings were pending before the 8th Criminal Court of İstanbul, it was reported by lawyers that the woman was deported due to a violation of visa obligations and was no longer reachable in Uzbekistan to give a power of attorney.583 Research from 2020 on healthcare for refugees included two women who reported cases of physical and sexual violence. In one case, a Syrian woman said she was sexually assaulted by a hospital janitor at a public hospital in Gaziantep. In the second case, an Afghan woman said that she was beaten by doctors at a public hospital.584

In some cases, the history of gender-based violence of female applicants might be used against them by public authorities that possess their private data through personal interviews. Also, according to incidents reported from Eskişehir and Denizli, interpreters who are not generally under oath might leak this type of information within small networks in the satellite cities. It is widely known by NGOs working with women that there are rape and sexual harassment incidents committed by public officers or third parties against single women and victims of gender-based violence.

Victims of gender-based violence are referred to Centres for the Elimination and Monitoring of Violence (Şiddet Önleme ve İzleme Merkezi, ŞÖNİM) which in turn refer them to women’s shelters (kadın konuk evi), mostly run by the Ministry of Family and Social Services, municipalities or NGOs.585 In 2019 there were reports of 145 shelters with a capacity of 3,482 places.586

There are now four dedicated facilities for victims of human trafficking: one operated by DGMM for women in Kırıkkale with 12 places, and another shelter for women operated by the municipality of Ankara with 30 places. There is also a shelter for men in Kırıkkale with 40 places and a family shelter with 40 places in Aydın. However, conditions in those centres vary.

Some NGOs, municipalities provide places for short stays in case of emergency (see also Temporary Protection: Vulnerable Groups).

In most cases, the criteria for renewal of residence permits and financial support, long waiting times, and lack of interpreters can leave women and children unregistered. Refugees and returnee women and girls have a right to documentation, including identity papers and travel documents issued in their own names, but this is often not the case in practice since the PMM requires women to produce a certificate proving their status as married/divorced or widowed. Another gender-insensitive approach is that divorced or widowed women must prove that they are divorced or widowed to receive the Türk Kızılay/Red Crescent card. As they cannot obtain their documents from Syria, they cannot benefit from Red Crescent assistance. There have also been reports of a lack of gender sensitivity in PMM interviews.

Access to justice can be particularly challenging for women due to language barriers. They receive notifications from the courts in Turkish, not in Arabic. Syrian women’s cases can be rejected due to a lack of translators in the courts. Women can also be afraid of the justice system and of losing their status and rights. The COVID-19 pandemic exacerbated the vulnerability of refugee women and girls. During the pandemic, many refugee families lost their livelihoods. The cancellation of social support and social cohesion programs caused the further social isolation of refugee women and exposed them to domestic violence. Women refugees from vulnerable groups such as sex workers face even more acute challenges to accessing health services. They cannot get access to information on sexual health and to health care facilities, HIV testing centres and counselling centres.

Syrian refugees’ mass migration to the provinces next to the Syrian border has resulted in an increased number of child brides and polygamy in Türkiye. To overcome threats posed by prostitution and sexual assault, early marriages and becoming a co-wife (Kuma in Turkish) are considered a means of social protection for refugee women. The rates of early and/or forced marriages, sexual violence, polygamy, unwanted pregnancies, unsafe deliveries, and maternal mortality among Syrian refugees are significantly higher than among Turkish women. As the status of the second wife is not recognised in Turkish Civil Law, in the case of abuse and violence they have difficulties in accessing their legal rights.

In south-eastern Anatolia, the need for women’s shelters is very high. Due to capacity problems, some shelters give priority to women with an assault report or a criminal investigation, which is very difficult for refugee/asylum-seeking women. As a rule, women placed in shelters can stay in the facility for up to six months. If they are lucky enough to find a place in a women’s shelter, they return to the house where they experienced violence at the end of six months. Protection and prevention mechanisms in cases of SGBV/GBV against refugee women in Türkiye do not work effectively.

Asylum-seeking women may be exposed to discrimination on the grounds of gender, especially in terms of benefiting from services. Single refugee women face difficulties in finding a rental house and taking part in social life. At the same time, refugee women may be discriminated against in accessing services and benefiting equally. Some refugee women stated that because they came from the Islamic Republic of

3. Reception of LGBTI persons

LGBTI persons are not mentioned as a category of “persons with special needs” in the LFIP. Nevertheless, their particular situation was taken into consideration in the process of assignment of a “satellite city” in the past.\footnote{596} Prior to the termination of the “joint registration” system in September 2018, UNHCR / SGDD-ASAM mainly referred LGBTI persons to specific provinces, where communities were known to be more open and sensitive to this population.

Due to capacity shortages in these provinces in 2018, applicants were directed to more conservative provinces, where they faced greater risks of discrimination.\footnote{597} However, in 2019 LGBTI refugees were still being referred to Eskişehir, Denizli and Yalova from Ankara at least. LGBTI ex-minors are also referred to these cities.\footnote{598}

There are no shelters for LGBTI + people. In one case reported in 2020, unregistered trans women refugees in İstanbul could not access shelters, so they were accommodated by a political party representative for two days.\footnote{599} In many provinces, LGBTI applicants face additional challenges to reception, particularly due to the lack of state-provided accommodation and the requirement to secure their own accommodation. For persons who do not fit in the predominant gender roles, housing may become more difficult to find but also precarious, as many fear the risk of being evicted by landlords if their orientation or identity is discovered.\footnote{600} In the past SGDD-ASAM, referred transgender applicants to the Transgender House (Trans evi) in İstanbul for short stays where the applicant had specific needs,\footnote{601} however it is no longer open as the project ended in 2019. Now NGOs can sometimes find temporary housing, but only in very vulnerable cases.

LGBTI+ refugees are given the opportunity to be resettled in a third country and asked to leave. However, they are being sent from their satellite cities to provinces where the LGBTI+ refugees are not usually sent, and where it could be more difficult for them to stay.\footnote{602}

In 2021 LGBTI, particularly transgender people living in Eskişehir and İstanbul, were involuntarily referred to small Anatolian cities where a trans person cannot live freely and they are subject to harassment. The ‘deconcentration’ policy of the Ministry of Internal Affairs means that they are referred from İstanbul to smaller cities like Ordu, Trabzon, and Çorum. They were notified that they have to go to the new cities otherwise their IDs would be deactivated.\footnote{603}

In addition, transgender persons who start or are undergoing gender reassignment process may face obstacles in securing treatment due to hospitals’ limited familiarity with this field, as well as restricted financial capacity to afford hormones which are not covered by social security.\footnote{604} In general, they consult the nearest research and training public hospitals with medical councils responsible for deciding on medico-legal processes. The very first ruling on the legal recognition of an Iranian trans woman’s application dated 2016 was published on 25 January 2018 and allowed her to proceed to gender reassignment.\textsuperscript{606} In another positive decision, the 7\textsuperscript{th} Civil Court of İzmir approved the gender reassignment process of an Iranian refugee.\textsuperscript{607} More recently, however, lawyers have witnessed court decisions refusing gender reassignment procedures to transgender refugees in İzmir and Yalova.

In 2021, refugees and especially LGBTI+s refugees continue to experience problems accessing health services, including:

- Language barriers, lack of translators;
- Bureaucracy, complex healthcare system and hospital layouts;
- Behaviour of healthcare professionals, LGBTI+ phobia, discrimination, and racism;
- Insufficient education about LGBTI+ issues, ignorance of healthcare professionals in the institutions where services are provided;
- Irregularities in the follow-up of pregnancies, child vaccinations and chronically ill patients;
- Problems in accessing treatment;
- High fees demanded of refugee women before and after childbirth;
- Requiring a pre-intervention fee, not starting the treatment, delaying the treatment;
- Difficulties in making an appointment during the pandemic process;
- HIV phobia and stigmatization experienced by refugees living with HIV;
- Refusals from family health centres (non-admission of unregistered patients in primary care).\textsuperscript{608}

Refugees living in Türkiye have the right to gender/sex-reassignment surgery, just like every citizen living in the Republic of Türkiye but must be legally resident under Temporary Protection or International Protection. In the absence of these, the person can start the process with a passport, and if there is no proof of legal stay in Türkiye, the person can start the process with a passport and an official document proving that they are staying in Türkiye legally. In addition to this, the person must be 18 years old and unmarried, either single or divorced.\textsuperscript{609} Refugees experience several barriers to accessing this type of service. There is a language barrier if a lawsuit needs to be filed for access. In the absence of an interpreter, the process takes longer and difficulties arise. Secondly, as the process goes forward, the person is transferred to training and research hospitals in big cities. There are travel and accommodation expenses due to traveling to and from these big cities, and these expenses are not covered. During the psychiatric observation period that lasts for six months to two years, there are language barriers and translator difficulties. When hormone therapy starts, unfortunately, the medications costs are not met. The person can be exposed to ill-treatment due to the inexperience of courthouse staff, and unfortunately, the court decision is not positive in many courthouses. Unfortunately, surgeries are very costly. It is close to 15,000 TL in public hospitals, and between 40,000 and 60,000 TL in private hospitals. The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees provides monthly financial assistance of 750 TL for transgender and intersex refugees.\textsuperscript{610}

LGBTI refugees can access psychological support from contracted psychiatrists and clinics through UNHCR, state hospitals or NGOs in satellite cities. Since hospitals do not have interpreters, this group usually access psychological support from SGDD-ASAM and Human Resource Development Foundation (HRDF) offices in satellite cities. LGBTI refugees have stated that they find it difficult to express themselves easily in sessions due to the fact that they access psychological support through interpreters, and experts sometimes do not have adequate awareness of gender, sexual orientation and gender identity and prejudices.

4. Reception of persons living with HIV

People living with HIV are not explicitly identified as a group having special needs in the LFIP. Few NGOs deal with the needs of this group such as Positive Life in Istanbul and SGDD-ASAM in Ankara. Unfortunately, information on their situation is not well known. The limited training and familiarity of health care institutions with their situation creates obstacles to effective access to health care.

F. Information for asylum seekers and access to reception centres

1. Provision of information on reception

Following the changes in the Registration system in 2018, when a PDMM is unable to register their application, applicants for international protection are generally informed of the province (“satellite city”) where they have to report to the PDMM in order to register their application and where they will be required to reside. This is not consistently done across provinces, however.

In addition, the Help platform established by UNHCR provides information on rights such as education, employment and health care in English, Turkish, Arabic and Farsi (see Information for asylum seekers and access to NGOs and UNHCR).

2. Access to reception centres by third parties

As stated in Types of Accommodation, the only Reception and Accommodation Centre currently in operation to shelter international protection applicants is in the province of Yozgat with a modest capacity of 100 places. Since Reception and Accommodation Centres are defined as open centres, neither Article 95 LFIP nor the Removal Centres Regulation make any specific provisions concerning residents’ access to family members, legal advisors and UNHCR. In relation to NGOs’ access to Reception and Accommodation Centres specifically, according to Article 95(8), NGOs’ “visits” to these facilities will be subject to the permission of PMM (see Information for asylum seekers and access to NGOs and UNHCR).

Finally, Article 92(3) LFIP guarantees UNHCR’s access to all international protection applicants. This access provision must be interpreted to extend to applicants accommodated in Reception and Accommodation Centres.

G. Differential treatment of specific nationalities in reception

Given the dual system operated by Türkiye, which distinguishes international protection from temporary protection, different reception arrangements are laid down for applicants for international protection and persons under temporary protection. While a small fraction of the population of temporary protection beneficiaries from Syria subject continue to be sheltered in Temporary Accommodation Centres, the vast majority have to secure their own accommodation, similar to applicants for international protection. That said, Syrians’ access to essential rights is generally described as more straightforward than that of non-Syrian applicants for international protection.

The economic status of Syrians who come with a visa is generally higher, while those arriving irregularly are often not sufficiently informed regarding access to reception. Apart from a brief period over the summer, Syrians had no difficulties in accessing passports in 2021. Documents obtained from consulates are costly for Syrians, however, with the cost of a passport between 300 and 500 dollars.\textsuperscript{613}

The economic crisis in Türkiye started to trigger negative attitudes towards refugees in general, and towards Afghans in particular. Afghan single women and women with children had difficulties accessing basic rights. At the same time, due to poor nutrition, some diseases such as diabetes become prevalent among Afghans.\textsuperscript{614}

Detention of Asylum Seekers

Statistics on pre-removal detention of asylum seekers and other migrants are not available. There are no statistics available on the number of persons applying from detention across the country either.

While most international protection applicants are not systematically detained, categories of international protection applicants most commonly detained include:

- Persons who make an international protection application in border premises;
- Persons who apply for international protection after being intercepted for irregular presence and being placed in a Removal Centre, including persons readmitted to Türkiye from another country;
- Persons who have made an application for international protection and are apprehended without documentation or outside their assigned province (“satellite city”) without authorisation;
- Persons issued a security restriction code, for example on suspicion of being foreign terrorist fighters (Yabancı Terörist Savaşçı, YTS).

While Removal Centres (Geri Giderme Merkezi, GGM) are essentially defined as facilities dedicated for administrative detention for the purpose of removal, in practice they are also used to detain international protection applicants (see Place of Detention). According to PMM, as of June 2022, there were 30 active Removal Centres in Türkiye (including two temporary removal centres). The EU provides support for migration management under its pre-accession assistance to Türkiye. This includes the construction of fourteen removal centres (of which eight are completed), and the refurbishment and maintenance of eleven additional centres. This support amounts to a total of EUR 84 million provided under the Instrument for Pre-accession Assistance.

The LFIP provides that international protection applications of detained applicants other than requiring that applications of detained applicants shall be finalised “as quickly as possible”, and that they fall within the scope of the Accelerated Procedure.

There is little information available on detention during COVID-19. This being said, persons were released from removal centres in early 2020 because flights were cancelled as a result of travel restrictions and to ensure that there was social distancing measures/that detention centres were not too crowded. Released persons were subsequently subject to reporting duties, which is an alternative to detention that has been increasingly used throughout the year as described in Alternatives to detention.

The LFIP provides for two types of administrative detention:

- Administrative detention of international protection applicants during the processing of their applications;\(^{620}\) and
- Administrative detention for the purpose of removal.\(^{621}\)

1.1. Detention of international protection applicants

The decision to detain an applicant for international protection is issued by the governorate of the “satellite city” in which the applicant resides. That said, administrative detention of international protection applicants must be an exceptional measure.\(^{622}\) Persons “may not be detained for the sole reason of having submitted an international protection application.”\(^{623}\)

Article 68(2) LFIP identifies 4 grounds that may justify detention of international protection applicants:

- (a) In case there is serious doubt as to the truthfulness of identity and nationality information submitted by the applicant for the purpose of verification of identity and nationality;
- (b) At border gates, for the purpose of preventing irregular entry;
- (c) Where it would not be possible to identify the main elements of the applicant’s international protection claim unless administrative detention is applied;
- (c) Where the applicant poses a serious danger to public order or public security.

In practice, there is no substantial information on detention being ordered under Article 68 LFIP for the purpose of the international protection procedure. Most detained asylum seekers are deprived of their liberty on the basis of pre-removal detention.

1.2. Pre-removal detention

According to Article 57(2) LFIP, detention for the purpose of removal may be ordered to persons issued a removal decision who:

- Present a risk of absconding;
- Have breached the rules of entry into and exit from Türkiye;
- Have used false or forged documents;
- Have not left Türkiye after the period of voluntary departure, without a reasonable excuse;
- Pose a threat to public order, public security or public health.

\(^{620}\) Article 68 LFIP.
\(^{621}\) Article 57 LFIP.
\(^{622}\) Article 68(2) LFIP; Article 96(1) RFIP.
\(^{623}\) Article 68(1) LFIP.
The law further provides that detention shall immediately cease where it is no longer necessary.\textsuperscript{624} Judgments from Magistrates’ Courts of Antalya and Hatay in 2018 held that there is no basis to detain under Article 57 LFIP if removal cannot be carried out due to interim measures from the Constitutional Court and the Administrative Court.\textsuperscript{625} Conversely, the Magistrates’ Court of Van has reached the opposite conclusion in similar cases.\textsuperscript{626}

The RFIP provides that where a person makes an application for international application while detained in a Removal Centre, he or she will remain in detention without being subject to a separate detention order for the purposes of the international protection procedure.\textsuperscript{627} This not only runs contrary to the LFIP, which provides that applicants for international protection are protected from deportation, but also raises the risk that grounds for detention under Article 68 LFIP will not be adequately assessed with a view to maintaining or releasing an applicant from pre-removal detention. In practice, asylum seekers remain subject to pre-removal detention orders, although some persons are released after their application for international protection has been registered.\textsuperscript{628} Even this can nevertheless entail a prolonged period of pre-removal detention due to the significant obstacles to the Registration of applications from Removal Centres. There is limited information on how the new provision on alternatives to detention from December 2019 has been implemented but practice in 2020 and 2021 indicated an increased use of reporting duties and being placed at a residential address. See section on Alternatives to detention.

1.3. Detention without legal basis

Beyond detention in the international protection procedure and pre-removal detention, a number of migrants and asylum seekers are arbitrarily detained without legal basis. Firstly, persons who are apprehended outside their designated province (“satellite city”) may be detained in order to be transferred back. According to HRW, the combination of the registration ban in certain provinces and the travel ban forces Syrians either to stay illegally in one province or to travel illegally to other provinces, thus risking detention and deportation.\textsuperscript{629} While it appears that detention is imposed on applicants who violate residence restrictions with varying rigour, often depending on different factors such as the nationality of the individual, since 2018\textsuperscript{630} the authorities have intensified checks on persons travelling outside their designated province, resulting in an increasing number of applicants for international protection detained in Removal Centres (see Freedom of Movement). Administrative detention based on a lack of travel permission was common in 2019.\textsuperscript{631} In 2020 travel restrictions still applied and there were new restrictions due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Intercity travel was banned for several weeks from April 2020. There was no information given by stakeholders on how this affected detention practices.

In addition, persons arriving at international airports and refused entry into Türkiye are also held under a regime of detention known as “inadmissible persons” (kabul edilemez), even though this occurs de facto. Türkiye does not consider holding people in transit zones as a form of detention, on the basis that “at any time inadmissible passengers can leave holding areas to travel to a country where they would like to go. In practice, it is widely reported that applicants for international protection are held in facilities at the airport. It was reported that people arriving irregularly ‘inadmissible passengers’ were not held for long in the new airport in Istanbul in 2019. In 2020 due to COVID-19 restrictions people held in detention were released to allow for social distancing measures in detention and asked to report regularly or stay at a particular address. This changed again in 2021, and more people were held in detention, including at Istanbul airport. (See Access to the territory).

In conformity with the law, the duration of assessment of the applications in the accelerated procedure does not exceed 2-3 days. However, even though this is not formally regarded as a form of detention, as stated in the judgment of the Constitutional Court in B.T., any detention beyond 48 hours prior to transfer to a Removal Centre is unlawful and constitutes a violation of the right to liberty.

In 2019 the LFIP was amended regarding ‘inadmissible passengers’ to say that ‘Foreigners covered under this article shall stay at the designated areas at border gates until the process in relation to them is finalised.’ NGOs were concerned that this would create problems and violations of procedural safeguards, and about the period of detention, conditions and access to appeal.

2. Alternatives to detention

Article 68(3) LFIP requires an individualised assessment of the necessity to detain, and the consideration of less coercive alternatives before detention in the international protection procedure. It instructs authorities “to consider whether free residence in an assigned province and regular reporting duty as per Article 71 LFIP will not constitute a sufficient measure”. The residence and reporting obligations set out in Article 71 LFIP involve residence in a designated Reception and Accommodation Centre, a specific location or a province, and reporting to the authorities at designated intervals.

The applicant was an Uzbek national who tried to exit Türkiye and enter Greece with a counterfeit passport. B.T. was detained in Sabiha Gökçen Airport in Istanbul for 6 days before being transferred to Kumkapı Removal Centre. There, he applied for international protection and after 44 days he was released and assigned to Sinop. 638 Article 71(1) LFIP.
The LFIP states that the competent authority may end detention at a later time following the detention order and put in place less coercive alternative measures.\(^{639}\) This is echoed by the RFIP, which provides that an applicant who is released from administrative detention may be required “to fulfil other obligations besides mandatory residence and notification obligation.”\(^{640}\) Both provisions are problematic as they refer to such obligations after detention is lifted rather than before it is ordered.

Since 2019, it has been observed that applicants who were released after the expiry of the maximum duration of pre-removal detention were issued an Administrative Surveillance Decision (“T6”) and were obliged to regularly report to the PDMM (see Registration). This was a concerning practice, as the imposition of reporting obligations to the PDMM is as an additional restriction when detention may no longer be applied, rather than an alternative to detention. Applicants are often ordered to report to PDMM in the Removal Centre from which they are released, or in provinces located far from their assigned “satellite cities” within tight deadlines, without necessarily possessing the means to get there. NGOs are aware of cases where clients have been obliged to discharge their reporting duties in a distant city, two, three or even five days a week, thereby entailing disproportionate transportation and accommodation costs for applicants.\(^{641}\) For instance, Aydın Removal Centre obliged a non-Syrian registered in Afyon to give his signature every week in Aydın.\(^{642}\) In addition, people were not properly informed of this obligation upon release from the Removal Centre.\(^{643}\)

Lawyers have appealed cases of reporting obligations after detention is terminated, but with varied outcomes. One case before the Administrative Court of Gaziantep concerned a Yemeni national subject to an administrative decision on reporting obligation five days per week in a city other than his assigned city. The Court annulled the decision on the ground that “the application of this duty will cause irreversible damages for the applicant residing in İstanbul in terms of his family unity and financial burden.”\(^{644}\)

New amendments to the law in December 2019 included Article 57(A) LFIP which lays down alternatives to pre-removal. The measures are:

a) Residence at a specific address
b) Notification
c) Family-based repatriation
d) Working on a voluntary basis in public benefit services
e) Guarantee
f) Electronic monitoring

These measures shall not be applied for more than 24-months and non-compliance shall be a ground for imposing pre-removal detention. Article 57(8) LFIP inserts that a person’s electronic tagging device may be examined by the authorities to establish the person’s identity.

In 2019, concerns were expressed about return counselling given reported pressure on detained refugees to voluntarily return.\(^{645}\) In İstanbul lawyers requested return counselling as an alternative to detention for a woman from Kyrgyzstan, however, the request was rejected by the court. The woman was issued a T6 form with an obligation to report in a specific city.\(^{646}\)

Two alternatives to detention started to be used more frequently in 2020, i.e. signing in/reporting duties and being placed at a residential address. There was no regulation or guidance on how to implement alternative measures to detention and in practice, lawyers were mainly aware of their clients being asked to undertake reporting duties.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2021.} People in removal centres in İzmir, Muğla and Aydın were released with a signature obligation and a T6 form. Due to their obligation to sign in, they could not stay in the three provinces but had to go to another city where registrations were open during COVID-19. This meant that they had to travel at their own costs between their city of registration and city of ‘signature’.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2021.} In Adana, a person was issued a decision on ‘not leaving the domicile’ as an alternative to detention.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder in Gaziantep, February 2020.} COVID-19, however, meant that people were released from removal centres in early 2020 because flights were cancelled and in several cities, reporting duties were required. For example, in Van people were released from removal centres, including to reduce the numbers detained there and obliged to give their signature. People were also released from the airport, due to COVID-19. In İstanbul, reporting duties seemed linked to security measures under criminal law.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, February 2019.}

There was a consultation project on alternatives to detention between DGMM and IOM that started in early 2020. The project “Supporting Directorate General of Migration Management (DGMM) to Develop Alternatives to Immigration Detention (ATDs) System in Türkiye” is funded by the Embassy of the Kingdom of the Netherlands and will support PMM in establishing and implementing an effective ATD program in Türkiye. It finished in early 2021. Under the project legal analysis, cost analysis and feasibility analysis were conducted and guidelines for the implementation of ATD measures were prepared.\footnote{See IOM, Türkiye’s First Standalone Project on Alternatives to Immigration Detention was Finalized, 12 May 2021. Available at: https://bit.ly/3ocw1pk.} A new EU project started in March 2021,\footnote{See DGMM, “İdari Gözetime Alternatifler” Konulu İstişare Toplantısı Gerçekleştirildi”, (Consultation Meeting on “Alternatives to Administrative Detention” was Held), 9 March 2021, available in Turkish at: https://bit.ly/326TlL6.} focused on the enhancement of removal centres, capacity building (better process management in handling of complaints or disciplinary investigations, coordination with other ministries), alternatives to administrative detention (capacity support in the framework of international standards – two alternatives, giving signature and being placed in a residential place are already actively implemented by removal centers) and access to basic services (implementation of right based healthcare standards like the Mandela standards, access to legal aid, access to protection).

3. Detention of vulnerable applicants

2. Are asylum seeking children in families detained in practice?
   - [x] Frequently

   - [ ] Never

Unaccompanied children international protection applicants should be categorically excluded from detention, since they must be placed in appropriate accommodation facilities under the authority of the Ministry of Family and Social Services.\footnote{Article 66(1)(b) LFIP.} In practice, however, unaccompanied children often declare being over the age of 18 to avoid separation from their group.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, February 2019.} Unaccompanied minors are still kept in removal centres in border cities especially in Van. In Gaziantep, families are generally kept together although there have been some cases where unaccompanied children were deported alone.

According to the law, children at risk and children convicted of an offence should be transferred to Child Support Centres (Çocuk Destek Merkezleri, ÇÖDEM). However, concerns remain regarding the number of children – usually beggars or street vendors – arbitrarily detained in police stations.

Children with their families are generally detained. Cases of children, as well as elderly people being issued YTS codes continue to be witnessed in different provinces. In İstanbul in 2021 cases were often YTS files. In Istanbul PMM reportedly refers to most cases as YTS (even those who are not YTS, ie there is no criminal case). There are generally positive decisions in appeal cases filed against the evaluation of people as YTS in Istanbul. One person with a YTS code (foreign terrorist worrier) in İzmir had a wife who came to Türkiye from Syria. She was apprehended at the border. When it was understood that her husband had a YTS code, she was pushed back to the Syrian border.

In 2019 in Antakya children held in removal centres with their families could access health services but not education. There was one case of a family from Iraq with four children held in the removal centre whose appeal against deportation was rejected by Yozgat 1st Administrative Court and they were transferred to Hatay removal centre. They did not sign the voluntary return form. The children could not access to education from the removal centre. One of the children needed access to health care due to her disability but she could not access it.

In İzmir in 2019, the practice towards vulnerable groups was not sensitive at all in the removal centre. Generally young men are held in the removal centre but there can also be exceptional cases. For instance, children with their mother, pregnant women have been held in removal centre and there was a case of a victim of human trafficking held in the removal centre and then deported. The Gendarmerie and the Coast Guard can record children as being older than 18 without conducting a comprehensive age determination. Some refugees who appear to be over 18 in official documents are often children under 18 years old. In Antakya, two people from Morocco, victims of human trafficking were deported to Morocco.

LGBTI persons are at particular risk of detention when apprehended outside their assigned province. Moreover, sex workers and (potential) victims of trafficking are also a category of persons detained in Removal Centres for reasons of public order and public health under Article 57 LFIP, though not necessarily engaging with the international protection procedure. Women from countries such as Russia, Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan are often held in Removal Centres of Edirne, İzmir (Harmandali) and Aydın.

In one judgment, the 2nd Magistrates’ Court Aydın upheld a detention order on grounds of “public security” issued to eight foreign women who were informally working in a night club. LGBTI people are generally not held in removal centres in Gaziantep.

Persons with health conditions are also detained in Removal Centres. In a case of an elderly asylum seeker who had suffered a heart attack, the ECtHR rejected a request for interim measures under Rule 39 of the Rules of the Court to ensure release from detention on the ground that there was no risk of violation of right to life.669 In a different case, the Constitutional Court refused to grant interim measures on the basis that the individual could access health care in the Removal Centre and that detention was not per se life-threatening.670 There have been reports of a disabled person being held at the Harmandalı Removal Centre, despite the fact there was a court ruling that the person could not travel alone and be deported.671 A woman from Angola was giving birth but was still sent to the detention centre in Siliivri, Istanbul due to non-payment of a fee.672 Some people were kept in removal centres despite having cancer or being chronically ill, as well as persons undergoing intensive care treatment.673

In 2020 in Istanbul vulnerable groups such as LGBT+ people and sex workers faced more discrimination. Police organised raids during the COVID-19 pandemic at midnight and those arrested were held at police stations. The PDMM issued deportation decisions based on LFIP 54/1 on the grounds of public order and public health. Access to a lawyer was also very difficult for these people. The number of lawyers working in these fields and have experience in immigration law is very limited. The number of lawyers working in the field dropped further due to COVID-19 restrictions in 2020. Applicants for international protection held in detention thus faced problems in exercising their right to defense. 674

In 2020, there was a case of sexual assault against a woman in a removal centre in Van. Despite the attack, she was kept in the same removal centre and had to see the perpetrators every day. Her international protection application was not processed and a deportation decision was issued. After lawyers intervened she was transferred to a shelter in another city. In Van removal centre, lawyers could not hold a face-to-face meeting with her and had difficulties in getting power of attorney. They had to lodge an official complaint against the removal centre administration. Now, two security guards are in prison.675 They were sentenced to 15 years in prison. The Regional Court approved the first instance ruling, however, the Chief Public Prosecutor’s Office at the Court of Cassation requested the acquittal of one of the defendants. We await the final judgment of the Court of Cassation.676 persons under a YTS-related code. In one case, however, the 2nd Magistrates’ Court of Edirne quashed a detention order on the basis that detention for over 6 months exceeded reasonable time limits.

In current practice, since the law allows for persons who register an international protection application to remain in pre-removal detention without a separate detention order under Article 68 LFIP (see Grounds for Detention), lawyers and other experts are aware of several cases where the persons concerned were never communicated Article 68 detention orders and held in detention for more than 30 days while their asylum application was processed by the PDMM, in clear violation of the law.

Persons facing removal have to be transferred to a Removal Centre within 48 hours of the issuance of the detention order. As the Constitutional Court clarified in its B.T. judgment in 2017, this means that a person can only be detained in a police station for a maximum of 48 hours before being transferred to a Removal Centre. In provinces such as İstanbul and Hatay, detention exceeding the 48-hour deadline is a general practice, however. There is a pre-removal centre at Pendik in İstanbul where the detention period can often be longer than 48 hours, sometimes as much as 20 or even 25 days.

C. Detention conditions

1. Place of detention

The LFIP clearly differentiates between administrative detention for the purpose of removal and detention in the international protection procedure, which are governed by Articles 57 and 68 respectively. In practice, however, applicants for international protection are detained in Removal Centres.

1.1. Removal Centres

As of March 2021, there were 26 removal centres with a total detention capacity of 16,008 places. İstanbul (Harmandalı), Kirkkareli, Gaziantep, Erzurum, Kayseri and Van (Kurubaş) were initially established as Reception and Accommodation Centres for applicants for international protection under EU funding, prior to being re-purposed as Removal Centres (see Types of Accommodation). Adana removal centre was supposed to close with a new one opening in Şanlıurfa. Akyurt removal centre opened in Ankara in 2019 and became operational in 2020. The facilities located in Iğdır and Malatya are listed as temporary Removal Centres. The Osmaniye Düzüçi removal centre was closed in 2020 but the camp is still open. People detained in this removal centre were transferred to Gaziantep removal centre. In 2020 one of the removal centres listed in Van was also removed from the list. The total detention capacity in removal centres thus decreased from 20,000 in 2019 to 16,108 places as of March 2021. As of June 2022, there were 30

The EU works in close collaboration with PMM on detention as part of the Instrument for Pre-Accession Assistance.689 As previously mentioned, from March 2021 onwards, a new project started with the support of the EU to enhance removal centre capacity building and promote alternatives to administrative detention as well as access to basic services.690

According to lawyers, it seems that some Removal Centres accommodate different categories of persons. For example, in Hatay and Gaziantep Syrians who have not signed a voluntary return form are generally detained. Previously there was one removal centre in Van but a reception centre was built in the Kurubas area with a capacity of 750 people and it was turned into a removal centre. The latter was for Iranians and the former was for all other groups but the latter was closed down and now it is a sort of administrative branch of the removal centre where no one is held. The removal centre in Kurubas holds migrants to be deported who have been transferred to this removal centre from other cities including migrants apprehended in Bitlis, Hakkari, Muş and Şırnak.691 People issued a security restriction code can be held separately from others under worse conditions. Their access to NGOs and/or legal assistance is limited and lawyers reported facing difficulties in meeting these clients.692

In İstanbul, the Selimpaşa Removal Centre is for women, Binkılıç for men. These removal centres mostly accommodate ex-convicts or refugees involved in a criminal case. A removal centre was established in Tuzla for men. The major problem for lawyers is to determine the removal centre where the client is being held. PDMM do not share information on where the person is being held. Lawyers must proactively search for their clients in each removal centers, which may take to a couple of days.693

In İstanbul refugees are generally not informed about their rights in removal centres except in Selimpaşa - the removal centre where women are kept, and where the administrators are trying to implement better practices. The administrators agreed to put some posters on the walls of Selimpaşa Removal Centre in different languages explaining the international/temporary protection procedures and ways to access them alongside the phone numbers of several NGOs.694 Many refugees and people living in İstanbul have been transferred from İstanbul to other removal centres in different cities. This situation can violate their right to access legal representation (as lawyers do not always know their whereabouts).695

1.2. Airport holding facilities and police stations

There is a border facility for persons refused entry into Türkiye (“inadmissible passengers”) at international airports. These include İstanbul Airport, İstanbul Sabiha Gökçen Airport, Ankara Esenboğa Airport and İzmir Adnan Menderes Airport (see Access at the airport).

The authorities generally do not consider holding in transit zones as a deprivation of liberty, although a Council of Europe report of 2016 refers to them acknowledging that persons held in such facilities are deprived of their liberty.696

Police stations can be used for short-term detention of up to 48 hours prior to a Removal Centre.697 These are used in practice in provinces such as İstanbul and Mersin.

1.3. Unofficial detention facilities

Stakeholders have witnessed a number of practices consisting of de facto detention of people in facilities e.g. sport halls in different provinces, without a detention order, prior to being transferred to a Removal Centre or to signing voluntary return documents. It is not clear whether these centres are managed by PMM or the Directorate General for Security Affairs.

Şanlıurfa: Persons apprehended are detained in a sports hall for periods reaching one week before being transferred to the nearest Removal Centre in Gaziantep.698

İstanbul: In İstanbul the Foreigners Branch in Pendik is used as an intermediate place to transfer foreign citizens to the relevant removal centers.699 Detention in Pendik Police Department Foreigners Branch

sometimes lasts longer than 48 hours before a person is transferred to the removal centres. There are other ‘holding places’ in a few other parts of the city. These areas are legally police stations, but they are implicitly used as removal centres. Detention time exceeds 48 hours most of the time, including at Beyoğlu, Beşiktaş, and Kağıthane police stations where most refugees were held. Foreign citizens involved in a legal case were kept at the police station until called by the PDMM. They were kept for 2-3 days, sometimes even 7 days. Detention periods were extended to 10-15 days during the pandemic period in 2020. Since quarantine places were full, people were kept at police stations. There were refugees held at police stations for 14 days, exceeding the maximum period set in law. Some refugees were held in police stations because of the lack of a vehicle to transport them to a removal centre including in 2021.

Mersin: The basement of the Yumuktepe police station in Demirtaş district has been unofficially used for detention of persons pending transfer to the Removal Centre. In some cases detention reaches one or two months, and deportation and international protection procedures are being conducted in the facility. This practice was unchanged in 2020.

Hatay: A former facility of the Special Forces Unit (Özel Harekat Şubesi) of the Directorate of Police, located in 500 Konutlar district close to the Removal Centre, was still used for detention of persons caught in an irregular situation and for persons under a criminal investigation who are released by the Public Prosecutor in 2020. Persons detained there have reportedly been told to sign voluntary return documents, failing which they will be transferred to the Removal Centre. There have been reports of unlawful practice such as making people sign voluntary return forms by force or fraudulently, preventing lawyers from examining personal files of refugees or meeting them face to face. There are two floors and rooms for detention in the basement. Women and men are held in the same place in different cells. There seem to be pushes to apprehend migrants. Detained people do not get food directly in but have to pay for it from somewhere outside the police station. Lawyer-client meetings have been followed by a person who does not identify themselves. There is no third-party monitoring returns from here. UNCHR only monitors official voluntary returns which are managed by the PDMM.

In Van, irregular migrants are held in three police stations: Caldiran, Balaban and Beblesin police stations.

All Removal Centres in Türkiye are under the authority of PMM and each centre is managed by a director. The LFIP makes no explicit provision on conditions of detention of applicants for international protection. However, Article 4 of the Removal Centres Regulation provides that “The establishment, operation and operation of the Centres and the fulfilment of the services to be provided under this Regulation shall be carried out according to the following principles and procedures:

1. Protection of the right to life;
2. Human-centred approach;

7. Social and psychological strengthening of the housing;
8. Respect for the freedom of beliefs and worship of the people
9. Providing services to the residents without discrimination based on language, race, colour, sex, political thought, philosophical belief, religion, sect and similar reasons.”

Removal Centres are required to provide among others: accommodation and food; security; emergency and basic health care services; psychological and social support.\(^\text{707}\)

In 2017, in line with the monitoring provisions of the Regulation,\(^\text{708}\) PMM instructed all the mayoralties managing a Removal Centre to set up dedicated Migration Commissions comprising of experts, academics, civil society, officials from health and education institutions and municipality representatives, tasked with regular visits to the centres. The composition of the commission depends entirely on each mayoralty. Generally, Türk Kızılay is present in these commissions.\(^\text{709}\) In 2019, NGOs could still in theory be invited to attend the commissions by governorates but it became extremely rare. There is not enough information to know whether these commissions are active or not.

In 2020, the Constitutional Court ruled that a Kazak detainee had been subject to torture in Erzurum removal centre after being held in solitary confinement for 10 days. He was awarded 30,000 TL (i.e. approx. 3,000 EUR) for non-pecuniary damages.\(^\text{710}\)

2.1. Material conditions in detention

Conditions in Removal Centres vary from one facility to another. In 2020 the density in removal centres was lower compared to 2019 due to the effect of COVID-19 and quarantine measures prior to detention in removal centres for 10 or 14 days.

Recent observations of detention conditions in selected centres include the following:

İzmir (Harmandalı): The centre has capacity for 750 persons in a total of 126 rooms located in two blocks, “Block A” and “Block B”. “Block A” accommodates mainly single adults and persons under a YTS code, while families are detained in “Block B”.\(^\text{711}\) There are two separate rooms for persons with disabilities accessible by lift. Each room has six beds and is equipped with a bathroom and toilet. Some of the rooms require repair, while no curtains are provided. In addition, heat and humidity adversely affect living conditions in the centre.\(^\text{712}\) While rooms are cleaned every day, the family units have faced bug infestation which has led to allergies in children.\(^\text{713}\) The centre is equipped with a gym, a library, two spaces for religious practice, two playgrounds, television and internet stations, as well as a tailor and a hairdresser.

In 2019 there were up to 1,000 people held at the centre at any one time, so sometimes it was over capacity.\textsuperscript{714} During the pandemic, refugees were not kept in places which can be described as “quarantine”. As of the end of March 2021, 12-15 refugees were staying in a single room. The number of refugees accommodated on the same floor was approximately 200. Rooms were cleaned by the refugees themselves, not the staff. Sanitary products (masks, gloves, sanitizers etc.) were not provided by the removal centre. Access to doctors was severely limited. There was a bug causing swelling and itching of the skin. However, the authorities did not respond to complaints.\textsuperscript{715}

In 2021, there were reports of refugees and asylum seekers at the centre being insulted and humiliated, and being taken to a punishment floor where they are left with the hands cuffed behind their backs for hours.\textsuperscript{716} There was a fire in the removal centre on 23 June 2021 because of an electrical problem at the facility. A 21-year old Syrian died.\textsuperscript{717} Lawyers were not allowed to enter the removal center for six months after the fire, and new refugees were not admitted to the facility. People who had already been staying there were either released, transferred to other provinces, or simply deported.\textsuperscript{718}

Erzurum: Two Removal Centres are established in a large complex: GGM 1 has four blocks for detained persons and GGM 2 has two blocks. Each centre has a separate block for offices and administration.\textsuperscript{719} Each centre has a capacity of 750 places.\textsuperscript{720} Women are accommodated on the top floor of GGM 2.\textsuperscript{721} Bedrooms accommodate six people on average and include a bathroom and toilet, although they have no curtains.\textsuperscript{722} During its visit in 2018, the Human Rights and Equality Commission identified shortcomings such as clogged toilets and leaks, broken sinks, toilet doors and door handles, ceilings damaged by humidity, and a lack of adequate ventilation.\textsuperscript{723} It also witnessed interruptions in the provision of hot water in GGM 2.\textsuperscript{724}

GGM 1 has a playground and football, basketball and volleyball courts, a cafeteria, prayer rooms,\textsuperscript{725} playrooms for children, a library, an internet room which is not accessible to detainees, a projector room, a hairdresser and barber shop, while GGM 2 has a playground and similar indoor facilities.\textsuperscript{726} Some persons complained that they were not allowed outdoor access in GGM 2 on some days and that the sports facilities were not accessible.\textsuperscript{727} During a visit of the Human Rights and Equality Commission in 2018, a total of 1,157 people were detained, of whom 627 in GGM 1 and 530 in GGM 2. 16 children, 14 women, one elderly person and one disabled person were detained.\textsuperscript{728}

Gaziantep (Oğuzeli): Physical conditions in the facility are improving. Families are held together. However, a riot took place following the suicide of an Afghan national in the centre in February 2019. It was later established that detainees had gone on hunger strike in the centre.\textsuperscript{729}

İstanbul: Women are generally detained in the Selimpaşa Removal Centre, while men are held in Binkılıç.730

Antalya: People are held in cells that can be locked from the inside. Men and women are accommodated separately.731

Çanakkale: Conditions have been reported to be adequate overall.732

Hatay: Lawyers have received reports of substandard conditions. Persons have no access to showers or hot water, and only have 40 minutes of outdoor access.733

Kayseri: The centre has capacity for 750 persons and started operating in 2016.734 Rooms have bunkbeds and are equipped with a cupboard, bathroom and toilet.735 There are also two rooms for disabled persons, accessible by lift.736 The walls, rooms and linen were found to be generally in good condition during a visit of the Human Rights and Equality Commission in 2018.737 However, ventilation and hot water supply have been noticed as inadequate.738

The facility has a prayer room, a library, a gym and a computer room.739 During the visit of the Human Rights and Equality Commission in 2018, the centre held 630 persons, including 18 women, 59 children and two disabled persons.740 Due to the rapid turnover of persons, the centre has not exceeded its capacity.741 If there are no available places in the centre, people are transferred to other Removal Centres such as Kırıkkale or Çankırı.742 In Çankırı unaccompanied children are staying in the removal centre, where the conditions have been described as ‘terrible’.743

In Van a lawyer said the conditions are better in prisons than in the removal centre because people have the right to access books and other items in prisons. For instance, a Norwegian journalist client in a removal centre could not access medicines and books so decided to voluntarily return to Norway.744

In Ankara detained people have complained about low quality food, access to medicine and severe cold.745 Another facility exists in Esenboğa Airport in Ankara. People have access to the internet and a phone, water and food during their stay in the airport.746

In 2021, one stakeholder said that the conditions in detention centres are bad enough to force people to return voluntarily.747

2.2. Staff, health care and special needs

Detainees shall be provided “urgent and basic health care services which cannot be afforded by the person concerned”. Article 14(1) Removal Centres Regulation. Access to psycho-social support service is also possible. Article 14(2) Removal Centres Regulation.

In İzmir (Harmandalı), a monitoring visit of the Human Rights and Equality Commission in 2018 noted that there is one psychologist, 2 social workers and 2 teachers present in the centre, as well as one doctor and 5 health staff. Turkish Human Rights and Equality Commission, İzmir Harmandalı Geri Gönderme Merkezi Ziyareti, 2018/18, December 2018, para 18. However, most detainees reported being unaware of the presence of the psychologist. Ibid, para 37.

The Commission also expressed concerns about the lack of emergency response kits in the infirmary of the centre during its visit. Ibid, para 44.

Access to psycho-social support service is also possible. 749

In İzmir (Harmandalı), a monitoring visit of the Human Rights and Equality Commission in 2018 noted that there is one psychologist, 2 social workers and 2 teachers present in the centre, as well as one doctor and 5 health staff.750 However, most detainees reported being unaware of the presence of the psychologist.751 The Commission also expressed concerns about the lack of emergency response kits in the infirmary of the centre during its visit.752

Kayseri has one social worker, four teachers and one doctor.753 In Erzurum, a doctor is available from 08:00 to 17:00 and nurses work in shifts.754

Activities in Removal Centres vary across the country. In Erzurum, for example, detained Afghan children were able to access education in 2018.755 The same was reported in İzmir (Harmandalı), although a standard training programme is applied to children regardless of age or nationality.756 In Antalya, detained children cannot access education but psycho-social support is available in the Removal Centre.757

There have been allegations of ill-treatment against detainees by staff such as security guards in İzmir (Harmandalı).758 In Antalya, a Syrian national was tortured by officers in the Removal Centre in June 2018 and later transferred to the Gaziantep Removal Centre, all the while suffering physical violence during the transfer.759 Incidents of violence, handcuffing and pressure to apply for “voluntary return” from guards have also been reported in Hatay.760 Similar complaints were reported from applicants or foreigners released from Gaziantep. These especially referred to ill-treatment against persons with a YTS code, including barriers to their access to water and hygiene.761 According to lawyers, poor detention conditions in Removal Centres are likely to be used as a tool to pressure migrants into opting for voluntary return.

Under Article 68(8) LFIP, detained applicants for international protection will be provided opportunities to meet with their legal representatives, UNHCR officials and notaries. The law, however, fails to make explicit reference to the right of detained applicants to meet with NGO representatives. It is considered that this deliberate absence is meant to limit or deny detained applicants’ access to NGO legal counsellors, which must be seen as an arbitrary reduction of the safeguard in Article 68 LFIP.

Detained applicants may also receive visitors. In this regard, all visits will be subject to permission. Visits to detained applicants at border premises are subject to permission from the Vice-Governor’s Office in charge of the border gate. Visits to detained applicants in other facilities are subject to the permission of the PMM official in charge of the facility. Request for visiting a detained applicant may be turned down where the “applicant’s condition and the general circumstances are not suitable”. This vague formulation raises concerns that arbitrary restrictions may be imposed on visitors’ access to the centres.

Detention authorities shall determine the duration of the approved meetings and visits. On the other hand, they are required to take measures to ensure confidentiality of the encounters.

3.1. Access of lawyers to Removal Centres

According to an unpublished DGMM Circular of 17 December 2015, lawyers are only granted access to Removal Centres on the basis of written requests, and can only request a copy of documents deemed not to be confidential, provided they have a power of attorney. This practice changed in 2019 and lawyers were able to visit their clients in many removal centres without showing a power of attorney or written request, although this was not the case in İzmir, Kırıkkale or the new removal centre in Ankara.

In İzmir the removal centre management still required power of attorney to let the lawyers in to have a pre-meeting with their potential clients. Even though according to Code on Lawyers, lawyers have the right to meet with their potential clients without it. Lawyers have been also subjected to long delays and security checks including X-ray body searches before being able to interview clients. More generally, there have been allegations that detainees have not been allowed to meet with lawyers even where lawyers request to access them by name. Lawyers have also filed complaints against security guards.

762 According to UNHCR, this procedure is established with a view to ensuring that persons accessing the centres are accredited lawyers and does not constitute a violation of the right to a lawyer: Information provided by UNHCR, February 2018.

767 Information provided by a lawyer of the İzmir Bar Association, March 2019.
Harmandali Removal Centre management in İzmir does not report requests from refugees for legal aid to the lawyers directly. Lawyers become aware of the request through their relatives or by coincidence. This continued in 2020 when NGOs and social networks of the person in detention informed lawyers of the presence of their clients in removal centres. Lawyers have also complained to İzmir PDMM about physical limitations in the removal centre, such as unlawful body searches targeting lawyers. In 2019, lawyers from the İzmir Bar Association of İzmir were arbitrarily detained in the Harmandali Removal Centre during a visit to meet with asylum seekers. There have been other reports of restrictions for legal aid lawyers such as not letting the lawyer examine the personal file of the refugee or banning the lawyer from reading all documents in the file or prohibiting the lawyer from the client-lawyer meeting. This is a worrying issue as the time limit to appeal deportation is now seven days, meaning there are only seven days to contact their lawyer, collect all relevant data and file the lawsuit. In addition, if a lawyer does not accept a body search, requests to see their client are not accepted or they have to wait long hours in the removal centre. It seems that young lawyers in particular are subject to these unlawful practices. Removal centres in İzmir were emptied during COVID-19 lockdowns and nearly 750 foreign citizens were released from removal centres. It was very difficult for lawyers to track clients and how many days they had stayed in removal centres.

Quarantine and pandemic measures further restrained access to removal centres in İzmir in 2020. Lawyers and interpreters were reluctant to go to removal centres out of fear of COVID-19 contaminations, and NGOs started working from home. Lawyers who did go to the removal centre in COVID-19 times only had the opportunity to see the file. Meetings with clients was not allowed because of quarantine. If there is no payphone in the relevant section of the removal centre, refugees’ access to their family, lawyer, and the Bar Association was practically non-existent. Lawyers could not reach clients and there was no information about the fate of the person. Foreigners benefited from the decision of the Council of Judges and Prosecutors to suspend the legal time periods due to COVID-19 pandemic from April to 14 June 2020. However, after June 15, the seven-day time period continued to be a huge problem. A HES code was requested from lawyers to enter removal centres.

The removal centre in Ankara does not accept lawyers after 17.00. Lawyers have difficulties examining the files of their potential clients. The removal centre management asks for power of attorney to examine the files however Ankara PDMM has offered to assist in solving this issue. The removal centre is located far away from the centre and the only transportation is by car or taxi.

In Kırıkkale the removal centre is also far away from the city centre. Requests for a legal aid lawyer are not delivered to the bar association from the removal centre authority, which requests a power of attorney from the lawyer to access the removal centre. Requests for assistance are mainly received through the family members of the detained refugee or UNHCR.

In 2019 lawyers were also subject to searches in Gaziantep and Van removal centres. In Van removal centre the first person to deal with the lawyer is a gendarmerie or koy korucusu (‘village guard”) who can create problems especially for young lawyers such as unlawful body checks or prohibiting them from client-lawyer meetings. It is possible for lawyers to use the Union of Bar Association’s translation service through a fix line in the removal centre. There is no translator in the removal centre. In 2020 Van Bar Association and PDMM agreed a protocol on not conducting client-lawyer meetings except in very urgent cases after March 2020 due to COVID-19. For urgent cases a remote meeting took place by phone. As of June, this practice ended and face-to-face interviews restarted. There were many complaints from lawyers that cell phones were not allowed in the removal centre, and lawyers often could not meet their clients under pretexts such as staff shortages or because of small inconsistencies between the detained person's formal name and the name notified by NGOs.\textsuperscript{776}

Where the lawyer does not provide a sworn interpreter, the management of the centre usually relies on other detainees to provide interpretation, a practice which raises questions vis-à-vis the confidentiality of interviews in Removal Centres.\textsuperscript{777} Arabic-speaking staff of the centre provide interpretation assistance to lawyers when needed.\textsuperscript{778} In İzmir, lawyers need to bring their own interpreter who has to be under oath. Certified translators continued to be requested in 2021. There is a fixed line to use the translation service provided by the Turkish Bar Association but the fixed line is not in the lawyers' meeting room but in a migration officer's room, which is one floor above lawyer-client meeting room, meaning lawyers and their clients cannot benefit from it.\textsuperscript{779} There is no obstacle for the notary to enter, but the fees and related expenses are significant. Fees vary depending on whether the person has an ID and speaks Turkish or not. A power of attorney document costs around 1,000 Turkish Liras (approx. 100 EUR). However, if the lawyer is assigned through legal aid, this power of attorney can be presented to the court. Administrative courts in other provinces may not accept the assignment of legal aid from the İzmir Bar and demand a separate power of attorney.\textsuperscript{780}

In İstanbul NGO lawyers can access removal centres without submitting power of attorney but they usually wait for a long time. There are four detention centres in İstanbul: Selimpasa, Binkılıç, Tuzla and Pendik. Tuzla and Pendik have been recently activated. Kumkapı and Vatan Police Stations in İstanbul are also used. This means that when a legal aid lawyer receives an appointment through the legal aid service, the lawyer has to check these six locations to find out where the client is. Police officers can reportedly give misleading information to lawyers in order to prevent them accessing their client. Kumkapı and Vatan Police Stations are not lawyer-friendly places. For legal aid lawyers, access to removal centres is very difficult if they have no car. They are 60 km away from the centre. The current legal aid project does not always cover transportation costs. Lawyers are not always willing to accept appointments on refugee law cases because it takes at least 3 hours to access removal centres.\textsuperscript{781} In 2021, problems with accessing removal centres in İstanbul decreased.\textsuperscript{782}

In Kayseri, lawyers have reported having full access to the Removal Centre and benefitting from a separate room for meetings with clients; previously Removal Centre staff was present during meetings but this practice has now stopped.\textsuperscript{783} In Antalya, a security guard is present during lawyer / client meetings if the person has been issued a YTS code.\textsuperscript{784}

Lawyers entering Removal Centres such as İzmir (Hammandalı), Hatay, Adana or Mersin are only allowed to see their clients in highly secured meeting rooms equipped with cameras.\textsuperscript{785} In İzmir there are now separate rooms with one table and chairs specifically allocated for lawyers and their clients but they are monitored by cameras.\textsuperscript{786} Lawyers can take notes of the meeting. In Gaziantep, a room for meetings with lawyers is currently under construction. In some centres the meeting room doors are open, thereby not guaranteeing confidentiality.

Transfers of detainees between Removal Centres without notifying their legal representative or the family members often hinder lawyers’ access to detained clients.

Lawyers’ access to airports was restricted in recent years but this improved overall in 2019. There is now a new airport in Istanbul which is called Istanbul Airport. Conditions in the new airport for migrants who are not allowed to enter in Türkiye is better than the old airport, Atatürk Airport. There is a unit of the PDMM in the airport and lawyers can easily access case files. This is new and good practice. The main problems are accessing notaries and the long distance between the airport and the centre. In 2019, there were no legal aid request from airports where migrants were kept waiting at airports for a long time. Now, people who are not allowed to enter in Türkiye are sent back to their countries or a safe third country immediately.

At the beginning of COVID-19, lawyers were not allowed to meet their clients at the removal centres and kept in contact via phone. NGOs also mainly worked by phone. Some NGOs like the Positive Living Association went on the field and occasionally an NGO would accompany refugees to PDMMs for registration, but this was rare. Overall, NGO activity decreased and was limited to tele counseling.

In İstanbul there were serious problems in accessing Binkılıç, Selimpaşa, Tuzla removal centres and police stations as well as clients’ files due to COVID-19. Lawyers were asked to wait outside buildings, i.e. they were not allowed to enter the building and meet with their clients. Lawyers were not able to get a copy of clients’ file or get clear information about their client’s location. There were interpreters present in removal centers and providing interpretation services when necessary, but other translators likely to be more neutral were not allowed in the buildings. Attorneys in İstanbul used CIMER (Communication Directorate of the Presidency) extensively in cases where there was no access to files, and it was effective. The Presidency’s Communication Centre (CIMER) is an online platform established to provide a quick and effective response to requests, complaints and applications for information from the public. The administrative complaints mechanism is ineffective, judicial methods are rather slow, but CIMER is a very useful remedy in this regard. Due to the pandemic notaries and interpreters worked in shifts, and their fees were increased.

In İzmir, the effects of COVID-19, which started in 2020, continued in 2021 as well. The quarantine procedures implemented in some removal centers limited the access of lawyers to clients. Therefore, the requirement to file an appeal within seven days made it difficult to obtain information from the client. There was not a payphone in the quarantine zone where people were kept in some removal centres, and it was not clear which removal centres lawyers’ clients were in because they could not even reach their families. Their access to a lawyer was blocked. In 2021, deportation decisions started to be given in a much larger number - and according to a stakeholder, they seemed more arbitrary. Lawyers were not able to visit clients during the 14-day COVID-19 quarantine period. However, the appeal period against the deportation decision is seven days. Where removal center employees were COVID-positive access was also limited.

3.2. Access of UNHCR and NGOs to Removal Centres

The Removal Centres Regulation does not expressly regulate the conditions upon which UNHCR and NGOs have access to Removal Centres.

In practice, UNHCR does not enjoy unhindered access to Removal Centres but has developed working modalities with PMM. In previous years, UNHCR rarely visited removal centres, but visits were even less frequent in 2020 due to COVID-19. In 2021, UNHCR worked with IOM to train over 60 removal centre and PDMM staff on international protection, and organized a field visits, focus group discussions, roundtable meetings and workshops with around 100 removal centre officials, representatives of PMM and bar associations.

NGOs have no established protocols with PMM for access to Removal Centres. As regards access to and contact with family members, practice varies across the centres. In Gaziantep, detainees can call family members for a maximum of 15 minutes two days a week, while in Hatay they can call every day. Family visits are more restricted in Gaziantep.

D. Procedural safeguards

1. Judicial review of the detention order

The decision to detain an international protection applicant during the processing of his or her claim must be communicated in writing. The notification letter must provide the reasons justifying detention and the length of detention. The applicant must also be notified of the legal consequences of the detention decision and available appeal procedure. However, the LFIP does not impose a requirement to provide this information in writing.

In practice, due to limited familiarity with the rights of lawyers on the part of Removal Centres’ staff, applicants and their legal representatives rarely receive a copy of the removal decision and/or the detention order so as to know when the time limit for appeal starts running, or receive documents without official signatures and seals. In other cases, lawyers are prevented from examining the case files of their clients. In Hatay and Adana, access to files was easier in 2019 but it was difficult to get copies of necessary information. Lawyers understand this as a measure to prevent them from quickly intervening in detention.
cases. In Erzurum, people have reported being insufficiently informed of the reasons for their detention and their case.\textsuperscript{801}

While there is no requirement of automatic periodic review of the detention decision by either the judiciary or DGMM itself in relation to detention in the international protection procedure,\textsuperscript{802} pre-removal detention must be reviewed by the governorate on a monthly basis.\textsuperscript{803}

The decision to detain can be challenged at the competent Magistrates’ Court through a non-suspensive appeal.\textsuperscript{804} The law does not set out a time limit for appealing detention.

The competent Magistrates’ Court judge must decide on the judicial review application within 5 days. The decision of the Magistrates’ Court is final and cannot be appealed. However, there are no limitations on new appeals by the applicant to challenge his or her ongoing detention.\textsuperscript{805}

According to lawyers’ observations, the poor quality of detention review by Magistrates’ Courts persists as a problem. In the İzmir, İstanbul, Aydın, Hatay, Gaziantep, Adana, Kayseri and Erzurum Removal Centres,\textsuperscript{806} appeals against detention are rejected as a general rule.\textsuperscript{807} In Hatay, about 200 appeals against detention are filed per year.\textsuperscript{808} In İzmir lawyers are concerned about a ‘systemic practice’ in courts to reject administrative detention reviews. One lawyer has applied to the Constitutional Court based on the lack of careful assessment of the magistrate court.\textsuperscript{809} In Van appeals against administrative detention are usually rejected but there was a case of an Iranian client who appealed against his administrative detention decision twice. The first appeal was rejected but the second appeal was accepted after a month. The reason for the acceptance was ‘detention has already taken long enough’ which is not a criterion stated in the law. When the lawyer went to the removal centre to release their client they were informed that the client had been sent to the border to be deported. However, the deportation was stopped at the last minute.\textsuperscript{810} In Antakya there have also been no positive decisions on administrative detention and concerns that there is a ‘systematic’ legal practice on this issue.\textsuperscript{811}

One of the rare positive decisions in this area was issued by the Magistrates’ Court of Kırklareli on the application of Rida Boudraa, the first applicant who obtained an interim measure from the Constitutional Court. The lawyer of the applicant appealed again against the administrative detention decision after the issuance of the judgment of the Constitutional Court and the Magistrates’ Court accepted the application on the ground that “the applicant has a legal domicile and family life in Türkiye and there is no risk of fleeing the country.\textsuperscript{812} In a 2018 case, the 2\textsuperscript{nd} Magistrates’ Court of Edirne quashed a detention order on the basis that detention for over 6 months exceeded reasonable time limits.\textsuperscript{813} Flexibility with regard to detention review may also depend on the Magistrates’ Court examining the appeal. In the case of a person detained for six months, the appeal was denied by the Ankara Magistrates’ Court, which ordered a prolongation of detention for six more months,\textsuperscript{814} but following a separate appeal the Çanakkale Magistrates’ Court ordered his release and imposed reporting obligations.\textsuperscript{815}

One crucial gap in the LFIP provisions on detention concerns remedies against detention conditions.\textsuperscript{816} On 11 November 2015, the Constitutional Court ruled in the K.A. case that the mechanisms set out in LFIP “failed to foresee any specific administrative or judicial remedy which sets the standards of detention conditions and includes monitoring and review of the conditions” so as to ensure review of compatibility with relevant standards.\textsuperscript{817} The Court reiterated this position in several cases in 2016,\textsuperscript{818} which – similar to K.A. – concerned detention conditions in the former Removal Centre of İstanbul (Kumkapı).

Finally, where administrative detention is unlawful, the applicant can lodge a compensation claim (Tam Yargı Davası) before the Administrative Court.\textsuperscript{819}

In İstanbul in 2021 the 15\textsuperscript{th} administrative court of İstanbul started to receive applications concerning deportations and international protection applications due to the high workload at the 1\textsuperscript{st} Administrative Court. Therefore, there is a risk of a difference of opinion on the same subject matter between the two courts. The first administrative court of İstanbul in particular had some positive practices, especially during the period of prescription in deportation cases. There is still no clear consensus on this issue between courts, but if a conflict arises between these two courts in this issue, it is unclear how the higher courts will handle this issue.

In 2021, although one stakeholder saw an improvement in knowledge and the quality of judgments overall,\textsuperscript{820} there were continued inconsistencies in court decisions.

In Van in 2021 decisions on appeals for administrative detention were reportedly superficial with frequent small mistakes in final rulings. In one application, it said ‘Iraqi’ for an Afghan national. This showed a continuation of ‘chronic problems’ regarding the quality of judgments. One stakeholder reported they had stopped appealing against administrative detention decision as none were successful. There were reportedly more positive results for appeals against the deportation decision.\textsuperscript{821} When irregular migrants are apprehended, an administrative sanction, a fine between 3700-4200 TL, is imposed. One stakeholder files an appeal against these fines. For example, an administrative fine was set on a husband and wife who were members of the Iranian communist party. The court annulled the penalty for the woman but not for the man. Appeals against their deportation orders were accepted, and their asylum applications were received but the fine was not canceled. An application was lodged before the Constitutional Court regarding the fine in 2021.\textsuperscript{822}

Another stakeholder confirmed that administrative detention cases are generally upheld by the criminal court of peace. However, if the administrative court terminates the deportation order, the criminal court of peace judges immediately issue the decision and end the administrative detention. The persons can take up their cases and apply to the Constitutional Court under an individual application. The Constitutional Court has been influential in this case and made decisions on compensatory claims about detention conditions in 2021.\textsuperscript{823}

In 2021, an applicant appealed against the administrative detention issued based on "breach of public order" claims. The peace court accepted applicant's case highlighting the principal of presumption of innocence and ruled that the mere existence of G-87 restriction code is not a legitimate reason for administrative detention.\textsuperscript{824}

Detained international protection applicants must be given opportunity to meet with legal representatives, notary and UNHCR officials, if they wish so.\textsuperscript{825} Persons who do not have the financial means to pay a lawyer are to be referred to the state-funded Legal Aid Scheme in connection with "judicial appeals" pertaining to any acts and decisions within the international protection procedure.\textsuperscript{826}

However, the functioning of the Legal Aid Scheme in Türkiye requires the applicant to approach the bar association to make a formal request for legal aid. It remains very difficult for a detained asylum seeker to access the legal aid mechanism by him or herself, especially since the authorities do not provide information on the right to legal assistance in a language understood by the individual.\textsuperscript{827} In most cases, either an NGO or UNHCR will alert the bar association and seek to ensure the appointment of a legal aid lawyer to the person. Lawyers appointed by bar associations have ties and work with NGOs in individual cases. However, it is observed from the field that no NGO has direct access to Removal Centres for the purpose of providing legal assistance. This is even impossible in practice if the applicant is classified as a foreign terrorist fighter.\textsuperscript{828}

The requirement of a notarised power of attorney poses an additional constraint (see Regular Procedure: Legal Assistance). Since detained asylum seekers are not issued an identification card before they have had the possibility to register with the PDMM, it is impossible for them to notarise a power of attorney.\textsuperscript{829}

Furthermore, issuing a power of attorney and interpretation entail financial costs, which vary depending on the distance of the Removal Centre and the language of the individual. Some notaries did not accept requests from refugees who had a travel permit but who were registered in other cities.\textsuperscript{830}

In 2018 the Administrative Court of Ankara held that access to legal counselling is a basic human right and should be granted to refugees without the requirement of a power of attorney.\textsuperscript{831} Moreover, when a lawyer is appointed by a bar association to represent a person under the Legal Aid Scheme, the official appointment letter can serve as a temporary substitute in place of a notarised power of attorney. In practice, the courts accept representation of detained applicants under a legal aid appointment document without a power of attorney.\textsuperscript{832} Unfortunately, by 2021, the judges changed and in Ankara power of attorney was again required to represent clients in appeals against deportation decisions. The court charged lawyers who could not present a power of attorney within the seven days and rejected the cases in the final decision.\textsuperscript{833}

In Van, officials in the administrative detention center are in charge of ‘deciding’ whether a person needs legal assistance or not. For the last 8 years, they have not requested a lawyer, which prevents the functioning of the legal aid system. The governorship of Van announces that hundreds of “irregular migrants” get caught every day. However, from January-March 2022, the total number of lawyers assigned through legal aid was only 15.\textsuperscript{834} People have almost no access to the legal aid system from removal centers. For example, one stakeholder reported that a client was threatened after they sought legal assistance. Asylum-seekers seeking a lawyer’s help get discouraged and intimidated by officials. The period they spend in administrative detention is extended due to systematic pressure. Some clients refrain from legal assistance for this reason.

Van is listed as one of the pilot provinces in the UTBA project. This project can be bureaucratic and it can take up to a month to finalize the assignment of a lawyer. During this time, that applicant may even get deported. According to one stakeholder, the UTBA project does not strengthen the capacity of legal aid permanently, and more structural, permanent change is needed.\textsuperscript{835}

In İstanbul too there were concerns that the UTBA project can slow down the process of legal aid. There were also concerns that a large number of people were being trained at any one time and this could cause problems of quality in legal aid services. UTBA may be more needed in smaller cities rather than bigger cities like İstanbul.

In Ankara and Central Anatolia, there was a problem was with the lawyer’s appointments at removal centres. When there is an ongoing project (UTBA), lawyers are easily appointed, but the appointments are not always made, particularly towards the end of the year, due to the end date of the project. This has created significant problems for people in removal centres.

In Ankara, especially in legal aid appointments to removal centres, the power of attorney fee needs to be paid either by the client or by an NGO due to a change of the application of the 1st Administrative Court. In the past lawyers have paid it themselves because UTBA project reimbursement is too slow. At least one bar association does not appoint lawyers in deportation cases for this reason.\textsuperscript{836}

In the Aegean region those who need legal assistance are not always in removal centres where the UTBA is in place, for example, Malatya and Çorum.

UNHCR has run several workshops with removal centres, PMM, and bar associations on issues such as lawyers' problems, lack of interpreters, access to removal centers, and refugees' access to legal aid. UNHCR also supports removal centres with internal monitoring mechanisms and information provision for asylum seekers when they first come to removal centres. The EU Delegation has a project to provide legal aid support to removal centers in and around İzmir and provide mentoring support to young lawyers. Interpreters, social workers and psychologists have been employed by removal centres in the framework of this project.\(^{837}\)

Obstacles for lawyers in accessing removal centres throughout 2020-2021 are also described in Access to detention facilities.

E. Differential treatment of specific groups in detention

There is no known policy of differential treatment of persons in detention on the basis of nationality, although according to observations from stakeholders, some Removal Centres detain specific population groups. For example, İzmir (Harmandalı),\(^{838}\) Kayseri,\(^{839}\) and Hatay detain mixed populations, including irregular migrants and foreign fighters, Gaziantep mostly holds Syrians classified as YTS (Foreign Terrorist Fighters).

In İzmir there is differential treatment for people who have been assigned a code compared to other irregular migrants, for example, there are restrictions on their right to make phone calls and go outdoors. The detention conditions of YTS are worse than other detainees and they are subject to arbitrary body checks and have limited rights to leave their cells. There have been claims of torture and ill-treatment.\(^{840}\)

In İstanbul there are reports of discrimination especially against Afghan and Pakistani nationals who do not get released as easily. The deportation procedure is reportedly executed much faster for Afghan nationals. The situation of sex workers is also problematic. A Turkmen national was accused of being a sex worker and was held in the removal centre for one year, before being released due to the COVID-19 outbreak. There is also discrimination against people suspected of a crime who find it more difficult to get a positive decision from the administrative courts.\(^{841}\)

The LFIP provides three types of international protection status in accordance with Türkiye’s “geographical limitation” policy on the 1951 Refugee Convention.

1. Persons who fall within the refugee definition in Article of the 1951 Convention and come from a “European country of origin”\(^{842}\) qualify for refugee status under LFIP, in full acknowledgment of Türkiye’s obligations under the 1951 Convention. The Turkish legal status of refugee under LFIP should afford rights and entitlements in accordance with the requirements of the 1951 Convention, including the prospect of long-term legal integration in Türkiye. Only three persons had been recognised as refugees as of January 2018,\(^{843}\) although a March 2018 report of the Grand National Assembly referred to 70 persons with refugee status.\(^{844}\) There was no official data in 2019.

2. Persons who fall within the refugee definition in Article of the 1951 Convention but come from a so-called ‘non-European country of origin’, are instead offered conditional refugee status under LFIP. Conditional refugee status is a Turkish legal concept introduced by the LFIP for the purpose of differentiating in treatment between 1951 Convention-type refugees originating from ‘non-European’ states and those originating from ‘European’ states. The status of conditional refugee affords to beneficiaries a set of rights and entitlements lesser to that granted to refugee status holders and to subsidiary protection holders in some respects. Most importantly, conditional refugees are not offered the prospect of long-term legal integration in Türkiye and are excluded from Family Reunification rights.

3. Persons who do not fulfil the eligibility criteria for either refugee status or conditional refugee status but would however be subjected to death penalty or torture in country of origin if returned, or would be at “individualised risk of indiscriminate violence” due to situations or war or internal armed conflict, qualify for subsidiary protection status under LFIP. The Turkish legal status of subsidiary protection mirrors the subsidiary protection definition provided by the EU Qualification Directive. Similar to the conditional refugee status holders, subsidiary protection beneficiaries receive a lesser set of rights and entitlements as compared to refugee status holders and are barred from long-term legal integration in Türkiye. Notably however, unlike conditional refugees, subsidiary protection beneficiaries are granted family reunification rights in Türkiye.

\(^{842}\) For the purpose of “geographical limitation” in regards to the interpretation of the 1951 Convention, Government of Türkiye considers Council of Europe member states as ‘European countries of origin’.

According to the LFIP, foreign nationals who seek legal stay in Türkiye are required to obtain a residence permit. There are 6 types of residence permits available to foreign nationals. Neither the International Protection Status Holder Identification Document issued to international protection status holders nor the Temporary Protection Identification Document issued to beneficiaries of Temporary Protection are identified as “residence permits” as such in Turkish law. The LFIP does not envision the granting of residence permits to either international protection status holders or beneficiaries of temporary protection.

The law instead identifies these categories of foreign nationals to be “exempt from the residence permit requirement” that applies to other categories of foreign nationals. They are instead envisioned to stay in Türkiye on the basis of open-ended international protection status documents respectively. The International Protection Status Holder Identification Document “shall substitute a residence permit” within the meaning of being equivalent to residence permit for the person concerned in the sense of authorising legal stay in Türkiye.

Previously refugees were granted an International Protection Status Holder Identification Document with a validity period of 3 years, conditional refugees and beneficiaries of subsidiary protection were issued a document valid for 1 year. However, these provisions were amended on 24 December 2019. For those who are granted conditional refugee, subsidiary protection and international protection status, an identity document including foreign identity number is issued. The duration of validity of these documents, along with the rules on format and content, is to be determined by the Ministry of Interior.

Therefore, in summary, it should be concluded that the law stops short of offering clear legislative guidance as to the duration of legal stay envisioned for international protection status holders regardless of what types of international protection the person concerned was granted. International Protection Status Holder Identification Document granted to status holders are to “remain valid until terminated by DGMM”. That is, the discretion to terminate an International Protection Status Holder Identification Document and thereby the actual duration of legal stay afforded by an international protection status are left to the discretion of DGMM.

By default, in light of the non-refoulement obligation guaranteed by Article 4 LFIP and in the absence of Cessation or Withdrawal procedures, it is unclear whether there can be any other circumstances under which the International Protection Status Holder Identification Document issued to an international protection status holder may be justifiably terminated.

On the other hand, from the vantage point of an international protection beneficiary, since the International Protection Status Holder Identification Document cannot lead to Long-Term Residence in Türkiye and since time spent in Türkiye on the basis of an International Protection Status Holder Identification Document cannot count towards the fulfilment of the 5-year uninterrupted legal residence requirement for Naturalisation, the legislative framework in Türkiye fails to offer international protection status holders any prospect of long term legal integration in Türkiye.

This approach adopted in LFIP and reinforced by the RFIP should be interpreted as an extension of Government of Türkiye’s ongoing “geographical limitation” policy in relation to its obligations under 1951 Refugee Convention.

In İstanbul in 2020 there was more leniency regarding granting residence permits during the COVID-19 pandemic. In August 2020, the PDMM issued a circular calling those whose residence permit applications had been denied but who could not leave İstanbul due to the pandemic to reapply for a permit. Later, even those not originally included in the criteria were encouraged to apply for temporary residency. This policy was applied between August 2020 and January 2021. The PDMM imposed a re-application fee. Some applications resulted positively, but the exact number of persons concerned is not available. The PDMM mainly applied this policy for economic purposes, and to document the number of unregistered people.851

2. Civil registration

2.1. Civil registration of child-birth

Birth registration is both a right and an obligation for foreigners including beneficiaries of international protection. Births that take place in Türkiye need to be notified to the Population and Civil Registry Departments under the Governorates. Notification shall be done by the mother, father or legal guardian of the child. In the absence of parents or a legal guardian, the child’s grandmother, grandfather, adult siblings or other persons accompanying the child shall notify the Population and Civil Registry Departments.

The notification needs to be made to the Population and Civil Registry Departments within 30 days. After birth registration, a birth certificate will be issued for the child. The registration process and the issuance of the certificate are free of charge.

Reporting the birth of the child to the PDMM is important as the child will be issued with an identity document certifying his or her legal status in Türkiye. Registration enables children to access rights such as education and health care. Birth registration proves the age of the child and protects the child from being vulnerable to protection risks such as trafficking, child labour, child marriage, illegal adoption and sexual exploitation. Birth registration also proves the parental linkage between the child and the parents and protects the unity of the family. It can also help family reunification of the child with the parents in the future in case of family separation.

The language barrier has an impact on childbirth registration in practice.852

2.2. Civil registration of marriage

Turkish law is applied for all marriage procedures for international protection beneficiaries and applicants. Under Turkish law, a Turkish national and an applicant or beneficiary or two applicants or beneficiaries of different nationalities can be married by the Turkish authorities. All marriages carried out by the Turkish authorities are subject to the Turkish Civil Code and related regulations.

Marriages are conducted by marriage officers at the Marriage Departments of municipalities. Couples intending to marry therefore need to submit the relevant documents to municipalities. Relevant documents are:

851 Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2021.
852 Information provided by a stakeholder, February 2019.
• Petition of the marriage: the couple must file a petition of marriage (evlenme beyannamesi), signed by both individuals applying to marry;
• Celibacy document certifying that the applicants are not already married;
• Medical report confirming that the applicants are free from diseases that would prevent them from getting married;
• International protection applicant registration document; international protection applicant identity document or international protection status holder identity document;
• Four photographs.

Non-official marriages are not recognised in Türkiye. A religious marriage (carried out by imams) is only permitted after the official marriage.

In Antakya a new problem arose in 2019 linked to the data verification process (see section on Temporary protection identification document). It was revealed that some people had lied about their marital status, particularly single women to protect themselves from potential threats. A problem then occurred when the women really wanted to get married. This is a legally unresolved problem unfortunately that has meant people have tried to produce fake divorce or marriage documents. In Antakya, there has been an explosion in this type of fake documents. The courts only accept documents sealed by the Syrian consulate in Istanbul and apostilled by PMM. For the others, the public prosecutors open investigations based on ‘forgery of official documents’ and PDMM issues deportation decisions.

The number of lawsuits on the correction of civil records increased after the data verification process. As an example, a lawsuit was opened regarding a child who was registered with the wrong family. The court asked for registration documents showing that the child belongs to the Syrian family, but the latter was not able to receive such documents by an official authority in Idlib, where they came from. In civil rights matters, there are a lot of counterfeited documents circulating but people often have no other choice but to resort to counterfeit documents because the public authorities do not issue the necessary documents. The only document accepted by the courts is the one sealed by the Syrian Consulate in Istanbul. Opponents of the Syrian authorities are afraid to go to the Consulate, however.

Regional PDMMs now process data updates (civil status matters such as changing marital status, registration of a newborn etc.) over an electronic appointment system called E-Randevu. People can get an appointment by ringing 157 or goc.net.org. An appointment system is in place in big cities such as Gaziantep, Şanlıurfa, and Hatay where there are large refugee populations. In small cities such as Kahramanmaraş and Malatya, people can apply without an appointment. Appointment schedules depend on the province and may sometimes be very b’usy. There were reports of refugees giving bribes to get an appointment in Adana and Gaziantep, as the waiting period for an appointment could reached up to 2-3 months, except in urgent cases. This waiting time is one month in Adana. This system is used for data updates only.

As noted previously policies were introduced in 2021 that are discriminatory towards foreign citizens. This included on registering marriages. The Mayor of Bolu raised the price of getting married to 100,000 TL (5,700 EUR) for foreign citizens as part of his aggressive anti-migrant campaign.

In 2021, PDMMs focused on data updates because the number of registrations of newborns, address changes, address registry, and others was relatively high. This included İstanbul where in 2021 there was a high number of ID corrections and divorce cases. It was difficult for the legal aid service to assign a lawyer to each case, as there were many applications to the legal aid office.

853 Information provided by a lawyer from the Antakya Bar Association, February 2020.
854 Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2021.
There can be delays in divorce cases. If the residential address of a missing spouse cannot be determined, the litigation period can take a long time.\textsuperscript{856} In the divorce cases of Afghan protection seekers, courts request a document from the country of origin proving that the applicant was married in Afghanistan but due to the regime change, these documents cannot be obtained from the embassies, and lawsuits are frozen.\textsuperscript{857}

Address verification started at the end of 2021, beginning of 2022 for temporary protection holders then for international protection holders. In the \textit{southeastern region}, administrative fines are issued. In general, PDMM notifies those who do not live in their declared addresses that first their GSS will be deactivated then their IDS will be canceled. In \textit{Isparta}, IDs were canceled and there is no online appointment to reactivate the IDs. All appointments were taken for 2022 meaning that they will be living undocumented. It is expected that in \textit{Izmir} at least one quarter of all migrants' IDs will be deactivated if they do not return to their cities of registration. After the COVID-19 lockdowns, many people have tended not to go to PDMMs for the duty to sign, especially Somalis and that had led to an increase in cases of ID deactivation. In the \textit{Aegean region}, it is impossible to hand a written petition to PDMM making it difficult to open administrative lawsuits in relation to these issues.

3. Long-term residence

The EU Long-Term Residence Directive does not apply to Türkiye. However, as regards long-term resident status under Turkish law, Article 42(2) LFIP governing “long-term residence permits” in Türkiye specifically provides that international protection beneficiaries are not eligible for transition to a long-term residence permit.

4. Naturalisation

According to Law No 5901 on Turkish Citizenship, there are three procedures for naturalisation of foreign citizens. Citizenship may be acquired through:

a. \textbf{Normal procedure:} According to the normal procedure, the foreigner must have a valid residence permit in Türkiye for 5 years. The foreigner with a valid residence permit must not leave Türkiye more than 180 days during the 5-year residence period. If this period is exceeded, the 5-year period is restarted.

After the completion of 5 years, it is not possible to directly acquire citizenship. First, the Citizenship Committee makes an assessment of the economic status and social cohesion of the applicant. Afterwards, security checks are conducted by the local police and the National Intelligence Organisation and the collected information is sent to the General Directorate of Citizenship of the Ministry of Interior. If no issues are raised at the end of the security investigation, the applicant acquires the Turkish citizenship under a proposal of the General Directorate of Citizenship of the Ministry of Interior through the approval of the Minister of Interior.

b. \textbf{Marriage to a Turkish citizen:} If the marriage of the applicant lasts 3 years and is effective, the applicant can acquire the citizenship. However, the applicant again needs to be ‘cleared’ by a security investigation.

c. Exceptional circumstances: Citizenship based on exceptional circumstances is mostly granted to foreigners who bring industrial skills or contributing to the scientific, economic, cultural, social and sportive progress of Türkiye, without any residence or temporal conditions. In this way, it is aimed at granting qualified people Turkish citizenship as quickly as possible.

While some Syrian nationals under temporary protection have been able to access citizenship through the exceptional circumstances procedure (see Temporary Protection: Naturalisation), access to citizenship is not provided to non-Syrian nationals in practice.

Detailed statistics are not available but there was a reported decrease in citizenship granted in 2020. Those who were granted citizenship who were known to stakeholders were mostly university students or those married to a Turkish citizen. There were figures provided for citizenship granted to Syrians in 2021 but not for international protection holders.

Article 85 LFIP sets out the grounds and procedural rules governing cessation of international protection status.

The grounds for cessation of refugee status include the following cases where a beneficiary:858

- a. Voluntarily re-avails him or herself of the protection of his or her country of origin;
- b. Voluntarily re-acquires the nationality of the country he or she has lost;
- c. Has acquired a new nationality and enjoys the protection of the country of new nationality;
- ç. Has voluntarily returned to the country of origin;
- e. May no longer refuse to avail him or herself of the protection of the country of origin or habitual residence on the ground that the circumstances on which the status was granted no longer apply. In the assessment of change of circumstances, DGMM shall assess whether the change in the country of origin or habitual residence is significant and permanent.859

Subsidiary protection may also be ceased where circumstances have changed to such an extent that protection is no longer needed.860

Cessation is to be decided on an individual basis.861 Where cessation grounds apply, PMM shall communicate the review of status to the beneficiary in writing. The beneficiary shall have the opportunity to present his or her reasons to continue receiving protection, orally or in writing.862 The RFIP refers to oral or written observations being submitted “within a reasonable period”, without specifying the timeframe in which the beneficiary should respond to PMM.\textsuperscript{863}

An appeal against a cessation decision may be lodged under the same conditions as in the Regular Procedure: Appeal, before IPEC within 10 days or before the competent Administrative Court within 30 days.\textsuperscript{864}

Withdrawal ("cancellation") of international protection status is governed by Article 86 LFIP. The law provides that status shall be withdrawn where a beneficiary: (a) by way of false documents, fraud, deceit, or withholding facts, was granted protection; or (b) should have been excluded from international protection.\textsuperscript{865}

While LFIP does not expressly provide the same level of guarantees in withdrawal procedures as in Cessation, as it makes no reference to a right of the beneficiary to present his or her observations,\textsuperscript{866} the possibility to submit oral or written observations "within a reasonable period" is provided in the RFIP.\textsuperscript{867} The remaining rules and procedures are the same as in Cessation.

In 2021 the 1\textsuperscript{st} Administrative Court of Isparta ruled in a case of withdrawal. The applicant's international protection application was withdrawn by Burdur PDMM on the ground of failing to fulfil his signature duty. The applicant claimed that it was because of the COVID-19 pandemic. The Administrative Court ruled that the notification received by the applicant should have included information on the consequences of failure to fulfil obligations, and cancelled PDMM's decision.\textsuperscript{868} In late 2020 an applicant's international protection application was withdrawn due to non-completion of his duty to sign. In his appeal before the court, the applicant claimed there had been a systemic error in the official records and he did not infringe his obligation. The Regional Administrative Court of İzmir, 6th Chamber approved the decision and dismissed his appeal.\textsuperscript{869}

Family reunification is governed by Articles 34-35 LFIP. While the law allows refugees and subsidiary protection beneficiaries to be reunited with family members, under preferential conditions compared to other foreigners, conditional refugees are excluded from family reunification altogether. That is also implied by the fact that international protection beneficiaries are not granted a Residence Permit, whereas the law requires the sponsor to have resided in Türkiye for more than one year on a residence permit. Refugees and subsidiary protection holders are expressly exempt from this condition, but conditional refugees are not.

A refugee or beneficiary of subsidiary protection may reunite with the following family members:
- Spouse, whereby only one spouse may benefit from family reunification in the case of polygamous marriages,
- Minor children or minor children of the spouse;
- Dependent children or dependent children of the spouse.

As of July 2021, the Türk Kızılay had received 3,462 requests for family reunification in total. They also conduct family tracing and family messaging services.

2. Status and rights of family members

Upon arrival in Türkiye, family members receive a “family residence permit” for a maximum duration of validity of 3 years. Holders of this permit have access primary and secondary education institutions without obtaining a student residence permit.

Adult family members on a family residence permit may apply to transfer to a short-term residence permit after 3 years of residence in Türkiye. However, this condition may be waived in cases where the spouse has been a victim of domestic violence, or in the event of death of the sponsor.

C. Movement and mobility

1. Freedom of movement

PMM may restrict the residence of conditional refugees and subsidiary protection beneficiaries within a specific province and impose reporting requirements, for reasons of public security and public order. 881

While LFIP makes no reference to refugees, who should enjoy freedom of movement across the territory of Türkiye subject to the provisions of Article 26 of the 1951 Refugee Convention, the RFIP adds that such residence restrictions “may also be applicable for refugee status holders.” 882

The RFIP complements Article 82 LFIP by adding criteria such as the “person’s request, his or her special situation, medical and educational situation, kinship relations, culture, personal circumstances and capacity of the provinces” in the determination of the province where a conditional refugee or subsidiary protection holder will be allowed to reside. 883

In practice, beneficiaries of international protection are subject to the same “satellite city” dispersal policy governing the movement of asylum seekers (see Reception Conditions: Freedom of Movement).

2. Travel documents

Article 84(1) LFIP provides that refugees “shall be” provided (Refugee) Travel Documents as referred to in the 1951 Refugee Convention. DGMM shall determine the “format, content and duration of validity” of (Refugee) Travel Documents to be issued to refugee status holders in accordance with the 1951 Convention. 884 Neither the law nor its Implementing Regulation set out a strict duration of validity for refugee travel documents.

As regards conditional refugees and beneficiaries of subsidiary protection, “if they make a request for a travel document”, their request “shall be evaluated” in reference to Article 18 of the Passports Law. 885

Article 18 of the Passports Law governs the issuing of special travel documents that may be issued to foreign nationals referred to as “passports with a foreignnationals-only stamp” (Yabancılara Mahsus Damgalı Pasaport).

As such, conditional refugees and subsidiary protection holders are not issued Convention Travel Documents but “may be” issued another type of travel document referred to as “passport with a foreignnationals-only stamp”. The wording used in Article 84(2) LFIP suggests that the decision as to whether or not to grant a travel document upon request by a conditional refugee or subsidiary protection holder is subject to the discretion of DGMM and is therefore not a right as such.

Under Article 18 of the Passports Law, there are two types of “passport with a foreignnationals-only stamp”:

- The type that authorises either a single exit or a single entry and has a 1-month duration of validity; and
- The type that authorises a single exit and a single entry. The duration of validity of this type of passport is subject to Ministry of Interior discretion but “shall not be less than 3 months”.

No reports of “passports with a foreign-nationals-only stamp” issued to conditional refugees or subsidiary protection holders currently in Türkiye have been seen to date.

3. Resettlement

UNHCR works in collaboration with PMM to identify the most vulnerable cases and to assess their eligibility for resettlement. As of 10 September 2018, PMM pre-identifies cases based on vulnerability and refers them to UNHCR, similar to the procedure already followed for temporary protection beneficiaries (see Temporary Protection: Resettlement). In general, stakeholders have noticed that the criteria and standards of ‘vulnerability’ used now by PMM are different from the ones of UNHCR and NGOs. For instance, LGBTI people are not considered as vulnerable. The final decisions on resettlement are taken by the receiving countries.

All resettlement from Türkiye was suspended in early 2020, including German and Türkiye’s bilateral agreement on the readmission of refugees, due to the Corona Virus. Travel restrictions meant departure for resettlement was postponed. The COVID-19 situation significantly affected the processing for resettlement; however remote interviewing measures were set in place in five locations across Türkiye, in cooperation with DGMM, allowing interviews, which were suspended from March to June to gradually resume. The pandemic also affected resettlement departures because of the global pause of international flights between March and September. As of the end of October 2020, UNHCR provided over 5,633 resettlement submissions (4,625 Syrians and 1,008 refugees of other nationalities) to 18 countries; and 3,382 refugees (2,602 Syrian and 780 of other nationalities) departed for resettlement to 14 countries. NGOs reported that due to the economic crisis, the number of calls regarding resettlement increased enormously, meaning potentially that the pandemic had affected people’s wish to live in Türkiye.

In 2021 despite the challenges of the pandemic, there were many submissions and departures for resettlement. UNHCR submitted 12,270 files for resettlement in 2021 and 7,400 individuals departed from Türkiye through resettlement procedures. 76% of these were Syrian, 12% Afghan and 12% from other nationalities. It is expected that this will increase in 2022. According to PMM statistics, a total of 19,189 Syrians had been transferred to third countries between 2014 and June 2022, mainly to Canada, the US, the UK and Norway.

D. Housing

Similar to the situation of applicants (see Reception Conditions: Housing), beneficiaries of international protection are expected to secure accommodation through their own means in Türkiye.

E. Employment and education

1. Access to the labour market

With regard to the right to employment, the law draws a distinction between the different categories of international protection beneficiaries. Refugees and subsidiary protection holders have access to employment or self-employment after being granted status, on the basis of their International Protection Holder Identity Document without satisfying additional requirements.\(^{892}\)

These categories of beneficiaries also have preferential treatment with regard to the applicability of labour market tests. Any sectoral or geographical restriction on access to employment cannot be imposed on refugees or beneficiaries of subsidiary protection who have resided in Türkiye for 3 years, are married to a Turkish citizen, or have a Turkish child.\(^{893}\)

Conversely, conditional refugees are subject to the same rules as applicants for international protection. They are required to apply for a work permit, or for a work permit exemption in the sectors of agriculture and livestock works, after 6 months of being granted protection.\(^{894}\) Therefore, they may also be subject to sectoral or geographical limitations on access to the labour market (see Reception Conditions: Access to the Labour Market).

In practice, it seems that only a few conditional refugees are able to access work permits.\(^{895}\)

2. Access to education

The LFIP draws no distinction between applicants for and beneficiaries of international protection in relation to access to education (see Reception Conditions: Access to Education).

F. Social welfare

The LFIP draws no distinction between applicants for and beneficiaries of international protection in relation to social assistance (see Forms and Levels of Material Reception Conditions).

G. Health care

The LFIP draws no distinction between applicants for and beneficiaries of international protection in relation to health care (see Reception Conditions: Health Care).

Temporary Protection
Temporary Protection Procedure

The legal basis of the 2014 Temporary Protection Regulation (TPR) is Article 91 LFIP. Therefore, technically as a piece of secondary legislation, the provisions and implementation of the TPR must be compliant and consistent with the general normative framework laid down by the LFIP itself.

Under the new presidential system in place since 2018, all references to the “Council of Ministers” in the LFIP have been replaced by the term “Presidency”, since the Council of Ministers was abolished.996 No such amendment has been made to the TPR yet. For the purposes of clarity, the following sections refer to the “Presidency” rather than the “Council of Ministers”.

PMM is designated as the competent agency authorised to decide on the eligibility of persons for temporary protection in Türkiye in light of the scope laid down by the Presidency declaration decision and the general eligibility criteria laid down in the TPR.897 Following a reform in March 2018, responsibility for accommodation and other services also lies with PMM.898 The agency has therefore taken over responsibility for all measures relating to temporary protection from the Disaster and Emergency Management Authority (Afet ve Acil Durum Yönetimi Başkanlığı, AFAD).899

A. Scope and activation procedure

Temporary protection within the scope of Article 91 LFIP is a discretionary measure that may be deployed in situations of mass influx of refugees where individual processing of international protection needs is impractical due to high numbers.900 As such, temporary protection under the TPR is not defined as a form of international protection but a complementary measure used in situations where individual international protection eligibility processing is deemed impractical.

The application of the Temporary protection regime is to be declared by a decision of the Presidency.901 The declaration decision shall elaborate the scope of beneficiaries, the start date of the temporary protection regime and its duration, where necessary.902 It may or may not designate a limitation on the implementation of the temporary protection regime to a specific region in Türkiye. An existing temporary protection regime in place is to be terminated by a Presidency decision.903

The Presidency has the authority to order limitations on temporary protection measures in place, or the suspension of existing measures for a specific period or indefinitely, “in the event of circumstances threatening national security, public order, public security and public health”.904 In such a case, the Presidency shall have the discretion to determine the specifics of the treatment existing registered temporary protection beneficiaries and measures that will be applied to persons within the scope of the temporary protection regime who approach Türkiye’s borders after the limitation or suspension decision. Such very broadly and vaguely defined limitation or suspension measures are different from the actual termination of a temporary protection regime by means of a Presidency decision in accordance with Article 11 TPR.

897 Article 10 TPR.

901 Article 9 TPR.
902 Article 10 TPR.
903 Article 11 TPR.

B. Qualification for temporary protection

1. Eligibility criteria

The principal characteristic and justification of the temporary protection approach generally is to swiftly attend to the protection needs of a large number of protection seekers in a situation of mass influx of refugees where individual processing is considered both impractical and unnecessary. The temporary protection approach is meant to categorically apply to and benefit all persons falling within the scope of beneficiaries formulated by the host Government, without any personalised assessment of international protection needs.

While generally a Presidency decision is required for the declaration of a temporary protection regime, in the case of the TPR in place for persons escaping the conflict in Syria, the Turkish Government opted to formalise the existing de facto temporary protection regime already in place since 2011 by means of a provisional article incorporated in the main text of the TPR itself – as opposed to issuing a separate Presidency decision.

Provisional Article 1 TPR specifically establishes that “Syrian nationals, stateless people and refugees” who have arrived in Türkiye, whether individually or as part of a mass movement of people, due to events unfolding in Syria, are eligible for temporary protection in Türkiye.

This formulation appears to indicate that in addition to Syrian nationals; stateless persons originating from Syria, including members of the substantial stateless Palestinian population who were resident in Syria at the time of the beginning of the conflict in 2011, are also covered by the TPR. Practice is consistent with this interpretation, as stateless Palestinians from Syria are registered as temporary protection beneficiaries.\(^905\)

Provisional Article 1 TPR contains a phrasing which in practice is interpreted by border officials as a requirement for prospective beneficiaries to arrive directly from Syria, as opposed to travelling to Türkiye from or via a third country.

The provision speaks of persons who “arrive at our borders” or “have crossed our borders”, whether “individually” or “as part of a mass movement of people”. As such, it actually does not articulate a clear requirement of arriving directly from Syria at all. A person taking a plane from a third country and landing in a Turkish airport may be understood to have “arrived at our borders” “individually”. Since 8 January 2016, however, Türkiye no longer operates a visa-free regime for Syrians who enter by sea or air.

The imposition of visa requirements for persons coming by sea or air has been combined with strict enforcement of Provisional Article 1 TPR. Accordingly, PMM only admits into the temporary protection regime Syrians who arrive directly from Syria.\(^906\) Those arriving through a third country are excluded from the temporary protection regime. Although they should be allowed to apply for international protection under the LFIP, in practice they are not registered as international protection applicants. This includes Syrian nationals who may arrive through another country even if their family members in Türkiye already benefit from temporary protection.\(^907\)

\(^{907}\) Information provided by NGOs, March 2019.
In some cases, PDMM have referred these persons for a short-term visa and then a short-term residence permit. Health care and other benefits are not accessible free of charge on a short-term residence permit. In two known cases in 2018, however, Syrians arriving from Jordan at İzmir Airport were not allowed to access temporary protection and were returned to Jordan.

1.3. The cut-off date of 28 April 2011

Provisional Article 1 TPR also provides a cut-off date for purpose of inclusion in the temporary protection regime. It provides that persons who have arrived from Syria from 28 April 2011 or later are to be exclusively processed within the framework of the temporary protection regime. As such, they shall be barred from making a separate international protection application. If they had already made an application for international protection before the publication of the TPR on 22 October 2014, these applications were suspended and the persons concerned were instead processed as temporary protection beneficiaries.

Any persons who had arrived in Türkiye prior to 28 April 2011 and had already made an application for international protection were given the option of choosing whether they wished to remain within the international protection procedure framework or benefit from temporary protection. The number of Syrian nationals concerned by this provision is however very limited, since the population of Syrian asylum seekers in Türkiye in early 2011 before the beginning of the conflict in Syria was low.

1.4. Syrian nationals with regular residence permits

Similarly, any Syrian nationals who were legally resident in Türkiye as of 28 April 2011 or later, on the basis of a regular residence permit completely outside the asylum framework – like other nationalities of legally residing foreigners – are allowed the option of continuing their legal residence in Türkiye on this basis, unless they wish to register as temporary protection beneficiaries. In fact, the relatively small number of Syrian nationals who continue to arrive in Türkiye legally with valid passports in the period since the adoption of the TPR on 22 October 2014 still maintain this option.

In order for a foreign national to request and obtain a residence permit after they arrive in Türkiye, he or she needs to have legally entered the country with a valid passport and either based on a short-stay visa or visa-exemption grounds depending on the nationality. Since 2016, however, Türkiye no longer allows visa-free entry to Syrian nationals. One problem encountered by such Syrian residence permit holders is that when and if the validity period of their passport expires and they do not generally manage to have it extended, they are no longer eligible for an extension of their residence permit.

   - Yes
   - No

2. Does the law provide for an appeal against the first instance decision in the cessation procedure?

3. Do beneficiaries have access to free legal assistance at first instance in practice?

   - No

Temporary protection status shall cease for a particular beneficiary where he or she:

a. Leaves Türkiye voluntarily;
b. Avails him or herself of the protection of a third country;
c. Is admitted to a third country on humanitarian grounds or for resettlement.

Voluntary return was a prominent issue and concern in the temporary protection system in 2019. The Minister of Justice stated that in 2019, 373,592 Syrian nationals had left Türkiye to return to their country of origin and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs declared that around 371,000 people had returned to safe zones in Syria. The Ministry of Defence has said that around 580,000 Syrians repatriated in 2019 including 380,000 to the Euphrates Shield Zone, 135,000 to the Peace Spring Shield Zone and over 65,000 to the Olive Branch Zone. These statements should be read with caution, however, vis-à-vis the voluntariness of returns to Syria, and re-entry to Türkiye of persons who have travelled to Syria. In 2020 stakeholders interviewed did not report any major change in policy but due to COVID-19 the situation was different with less detention due to social distancing measures and less returns due to travel restrictions between March and September 2019. In 2021 return was still high on the agenda and in early 2022 the government said that over 500,000 Syrians had returned home. There was Turkish support for Syrians returning with the 'Together we stand with Idlib' programme to build housing. According to officials, 59,679 homes have been constructed by Turkish organisations and institutions in the Idlib, Euphrates Shield and Olive Branch Operations regions. Türkiye is also building mosques, hospitals and schools in the area.

2.1. Voluntariness of repatriation

The TPR does not specify how the cessation criterion of voluntary departure from Türkiye is to be assessed. In theory, when a temporary protection beneficiary indicates the intention to return to Syria, he or she is interviewed by a panel consisting of PMM, UNHCR and civil society; the latter not being applied in practice. A lawyer can also be present in the interview. The panel assesses whether return is in fact voluntary and the underlying reasons behind it. Return cases are often related to people having property or a job in Syria.

There was a campaign on return undertaken in 2019. According to İstanbul PDMM, 42,888 irregular migrants were sent to detention centres in several cities and 6,416 unregistered Syrians were sent to temporary accommodation centres between 12 July 2019 and 15 November 2019. Unregistered single men were sent to removal centres such as Tuzla or Pendik. Even registered people were sent to removal centres in July 2019.\textsuperscript{918}

Amnesty International has also documented cases of persons being sent to removal centres, many of which concerned Syrians who were deported from Istanbul and were apprehended while they were working or walking down the street. Amnesty International further documented 20 cases of forced returns between 25 May and 13 September 2019, most of which (14) were carried out in July 2019. The Turkish authorities have said these were cases of “voluntary returns,” and claim that over several years, more than 315,000 Syrians have left of their own free will. However, Syrians consistently say they are being misled about the “voluntary return” forms they are being told or forced to sign, i.e. through intimidation, threats and beatings. Some people say they were also beaten on their journey to the border by the Gendarmerie. All the deportees said they were sent to northwestern Syria.\textsuperscript{919}

Lawyers in Antakya reported an approximate 20%-30% rise in deportation cases after the operations carried out in Istanbul in July 2019.\textsuperscript{920} The number of Syrian refugees whose temporary protection was ceased, and litigation on the matter, also rose significantly.\textsuperscript{921} The main reasons for cancelation were voluntary returns and ‘the serious suspect that they are involved in a criminal act’. The latter is against the presumption of innocence and in addition the authorities often interpret the latter when a Syrian refugee is a plaintiff or witness in a case or a criminal investigation. As a result, Syrian victims do not dare to complain before the authorities out of fear of being deported.\textsuperscript{922}

UNHCR continued to monitor voluntary returns in 2021. According to their 2021 report, UNHCR observed the voluntary return interviews of 22,275 Syrians (over 17,200 families) in 16 provinces across Türkiye, including the southeast region, Istanbul, Izmir and Ankara. More than 90% of the total interviews observed by UNHCR were undertaken in the southeast. The preferred destinations of return in 2021 were Aleppo, Idlib, Ar-Raqqa and Al Hasakeh. Most returnees stated that the main reason for the decision to return to Syria was to reunite with family members or to care for dependent family members.\textsuperscript{923}

Where temporary protection is terminated based on cessation, DGMM issues a “V87” code to mark the person as a “voluntarily returned foreigner”. The person is usually left at the border and handles the return process him or herself.\textsuperscript{924} However, beneficiaries are not always adequately informed of the process.

Moreover, the aforementioned interview procedure is not followed in Removal Centres. Persons signing voluntary return documents – often following pressure from authorities (see Detention of Asylum Seekers) – do not undergo an interview by a panel aimed at establishing whether return is voluntary.\textsuperscript{925}

\subsection*{2.2. Re-entry following cessation}

It is common for refugees to travel back to Syria for administrative reasons e.g. renewal of passport, and then to return to Türkiye.\textsuperscript{926}

Admission to the temporary protection regime of persons who previously benefitted from temporary protection in Türkiye but their status was ceased is assessed on an individual basis by PMM. \(^{927}\) PMM is authorised to grant or deny renewed access to temporary protection status upon repeat arrival in Türkiye.

There continue to be cases of people whose temporary protection status was ceased, and who were issued a “V87” code, being unable to re-access rights upon return to Türkiye. DGMM issued a Circular on 7 January 2019, instructing PDMM to lift the “V87 code” in respect of persons returning to Türkiye after having signed a “voluntary return document”, especially pregnant women, elderly persons and children, as of 1 January 2019, to allow them to re-access services. \(^{928}\) The Circular also requires PDMM to provide detailed information to temporary protection beneficiaries on the legal implications of signing a “voluntary return document”.

In Antalya requests for reactivation of temporary protection were high in 2019. In case of deportation for a registered Syrian, temporary protection was deactivated and a code called a c-114 was issued. In case of return to Türkiye, temporary protection was not re-activated during the first year of return leaving Syrians at risk of deportation even in the case of a minor problem or where they are the plaintiff or witness of a criminal issue or complaint. People sign voluntary return forms often without knowing what they are for and deportations are carried out mostly on weekends. There was a case of a married woman with four children including one disabled child who was deported alone to Syria. \(^{925}\) However, the ‘V-87” circular had a positive effect. Interviews for those whose temporary protection had been cancelled began to be held mainly for vulnerable refugees with no criminal record in Türkiye. \(^{930}\)

In İzmir in 2019, the temporary protection of Syrians who were previously and unlawfully deported and kept in detention centres was not re-activated once they returned to Türkiye which is against the law. However, Syrians with special needs like victims of violence or international human trafficking were treated with more care by PDMM. \(^{931}\) The deactivation of temporary protection can be problematic for families with school-age children. In urgent cases, PDMM can reactivate temporary protection in a limited way - meaning that it is activated only for health or education purposes. \(^{932}\) In 2020, when temporary protection was deactivated in İzmir, people were released with an obligation to regularly report and sign-in but their legal status remained uncertain. The Constitutional Court issues interim measures but it only rules over the question whether an applicant should be deported to the country of origin (Syria) or not. It does not give an injunction order not to be deported to a third country. As a result, there is an increasing practice of Syrians receiving deportation orders to a third safe third country. Therefore, the interim measures issued by the Constitutional Court are not functional. \(^{933}\) This has led to people signing voluntary return forms and returning to Syria but then returning back to Türkiye. Upon return, these persons often do not apply to PDMM offices and live unregistered due to their lack of trust in authorities. \(^{934}\)

The question of cessation has also arisen in the context of the readmission of Syrian nationals from Greece to Türkiye under the EU-Türkiye statement. An amendment to the TPR was introduced on 5 April 2016 to clarify that Syrian nationals, who entered Türkiye after 28 April 2011 and who transited irregularly to the Aegean islands after 20 March 2016, “may” be provided temporary protection. \(^{935}\) PMM statistics refer to 412 Syrian “irregular migrants” readmitted by Türkiye from 4 April 2016 to 5 April 2021 – an increase of 8 persons in 2020. \(^{936}\) These returns were frozen in 2021 as far as stakeholders were aware.

3. Exclusion and cancellation of temporary protection

a. Persons for whom there is serious reason to believe that they have been guilty of acts defined in Article 1F of the 1951 Convention;
b. Persons for whom there is serious reason to believe that they have engaged in acts of cruelty, for whatever rationale, prior to arrival in Türkiye;
c. Persons who have either participated in or provoked crimes or acts referred to in 1 and 2 above;
d. Persons, who, having participated in armed conflict in country of origin, have not permanently ceased armed activities after arrival in Türkiye;
e. Persons proven to have engaged, planned or participated in terrorist activities;
f. Persons who, prior to their arrival in Türkiye, committed crimes that would be punishable with a prison sentence in Türkiye, and have left country of origin or residence in order to avoid punishment;
g. Persons convicted of crimes against humanity by international courts;
h. Persons who commit any of the crimes listed in Article 4(7) of the Turkish Criminal Code i.e. crimes related to state secrets and espionage.

Such cancellation is applied in practice for temporary protection holders designated as foreign terrorist fighters (YTS), for example, even where criminal proceedings have not led to a conviction.\(^938\) In some cases, DGMM has also ordered cancellation on the basis of Article 8(1)(e) TPR.\(^939\) It has also been applied in cases of inconsistencies between the personal details in the Temporary Protection Identification Document and the passport of the refugee, which have been determined as provision of misleading information to PMM.\(^940\)

PMM is responsible and authorised to carry out and finalise the exclusion assessments and to communicate exclusion decisions to the persons concerned. Where it is identified that an existing beneficiary falls within the exclusion grounds listed above, their temporary protection status shall be cancelled. DGMM can delegate this power to governorates as of 25 December 2019.\(^941\)

Nevertheless, given that the LFIP provides for a derogation from non-refoulement, temporary protection beneficiaries may also be subject to removal procedures without their status being cancelled. Such deportation cases were frequent in 2018 (see Protection from Refoulement).

\(^941\) Article 12(2) TPR.
In 2020, beneficiaries of temporary protection were not informed by the authorities of the cancellation of their protection. They did not receive any written document providing the grounds for such cancellation; thus preventing any possibilities to appeal. Most of them learned about the cancellation of their temporary protection when going to a PDMM for other reasons, such as updating data or when their General Health Insurance (GSS) was deactivated.

In 2020 cancellation of temporary protection was prevalent in the south east region because of people ‘being a threat to public security’, not paying administrative fines or not updating data. Those who were involved in the Edirne/Pazarkule incidents described in Access to the territory and push backs also lost their temporary protection. The cancellation of temporary protection was also prevalent in Konya where there are many Syrians. Reasons included allegations of false statements about civil status or again it affected those who went to Edirne in February 2020 to try to cross the border.942

There had been a statement in 2019 that Syrians would be deported if they did not go to the provinces where they were registered. This process was called ‘address verification,’ and it was still in progress in İzmir in 2021. If it is determined that the person is not in the province where they are registered, their registration is deactivated, but it is not canceled. It is legally impossible to deport many of the people so PMM has difficulty imposing a sanction. Address verifications were also started in Ankara and Central Anatolia. If the Syrian applicant cannot be found at the specific address, their IDs can be cancelled. Their IDs were reactivated when they went to PDMM, but those who could not go to PDMM lost their IDs. It is estimated by Syrian led NGOs and activists that 150,000 IDs have been cancelled as of April 2022.943 At the same time, it is impossible to get an appointment from the Syrian Embassy, and people have to pay.

C. Access to temporary protection and registration

1. Admission to territory

While Article 6 TPR provides that all persons within the scope of the Regulation shall be protected from refoulement, the overall framework laid down by the TPR fails to explicitly guarantee the right of access Turkish territory for prospective beneficiaries. Persons approaching Türkiye’s borders without a valid travel document may be admitted to territory within the discretion of the provincial Governorate.944

Furthermore, either the Presidency has the discretion to order “limitations” or “suspension” of existing temporary protection measures in place “in the event of circumstances threatening national security, public order, public security and public health”, including the possibility of the imposition of “additional measures concerning the mass movement of people both along Türkiye’s borderline and beyond Türkiye’s borderline”.945 This formulation appears to indicate that the Turkish Government may choose to seal Türkiye’s borders to persons seeking temporary protection in Türkiye, either for a specific period or indefinitely, where considerations of national security, public order, public security and public health are deemed to require so.

Access through the Turkish-Syrian land border has been limited through different restrictions. Türkiye completed the construction of a 764km concrete wall on its Syrian border in June 2018, and installed

945 Article 15 TPR.
The wall stretches along the border provinces of Gaziantep, Kilis, Hatay, Mardin, and Şırnak. Human Rights Watch reported the Turkish-Syrian border to be “effectively closed to new asylum seekers” in 2018. In March 2019, however, Türkiye announced the opening of a border-crossing point in the Afrin region, named “Olive Branch”. There border-crossing point is being reinforced with new technology. For example, in July 2020 Türkiye started to patrol the border using surveillance balloons able to scan an area of eight square kilometres.

The physical barrier has not completely stopped arrivals, although it has exacerbated difficulties in crossing the Turkish-Syrian border. Refugees have reportedly had to climb the border wall, or to bribe border guards to enter Türkiye. There are also reports of tunnels and that the wall has increased smugglers’ prices. PMM figures for 2021 refer to a total of 162,996 apprehended irregular migrants countrywide, of whom only 17,562 were Syrian nationals. The largest group at 70,252 were Afghans. This represents an increase on 2020, where a total of 122,302 persons were apprehended, of whom 17,562 were Syrians and 50,161 Afghans, and when numbers of arrivals were significantly reduced due to COVID-19.

Allegations of pushbacks and violence at the Turkish-Syrian border continued. In a 2018 report, Human Rights Watch referred to 137 incidents of interception of Syrians after crossing the border between December 2017 and March 2018. There are reports that Turkish officers fire guns at times to stop people entering the country. Applications for international protection are not accepted at the border.

In October 2019, Türkiye launched a military offensive in northeastern Syria which Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan said was aimed at removing Kurdish-led forces from the border area and creating a “safe zone” to which millions of Syrian refugees could be returned. Türkiye spoke of returning ISIL fighters to the region and presented a plan to the United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres for resettling up to two million Syrian refugees in the areas under its control. Attacks on Idlib causing the death of more than 50 Turkish soldiers in February 2020 escalated tensions in the region and led to President Erdogan ‘opening the gates’ between Türkiye and the EU, saying amongst other things thatTürkiye could not cope with another mass influx(8,111),(991,982) of refugees from Syria. This led to Greece closing its border, criticisms of both Europe and Türkiye’s handling of the situation and concerns for the human rights of migrants and refugees in the middle. These incidents are further described in Access to the territory and push backs.

In 2020, the Women’s Solidarity Foundation also reported allegations of sexual violence and harassment committed by Turkish soldiers and security guards against Syrian women crossing the Turkish border.\textsuperscript{961}

In 2021 despite the wall being built on the eastern border, some people manage to cross the border and enter Türkiye. They are being pushed back when caught by the authorities, but the majority of attempts are called ‘blocking’ by Turkish authorities – not pushing back.\textsuperscript{962}

2. Registration under temporary protection

The PDMM are formally in charge of registering temporary protection beneficiaries.

The registration process of Syrians was not smooth in 2019. Vulnerable groups had priority in registration procedures but the number of Syrians who did not receive ID documents increased. The main problem was the increase in the number of ‘closed cities’ and the problems in getting travel permits from PDMMs. Without valid travel permits, Syrian refugees are at risk of deportation or administrative detention.\textsuperscript{963}

After the July 2019 operation in İstanbul, all Syrians registered in Antakya were sent back to Antakya, which had repercussions for the situation there. Antakya is now closed for new registrations except vulnerable cases due to the high number of Syrian refugees. Even in these cases, registration takes a long time. If during the data verification process it is found that the person lied during the initial registration process that person is immediately deported due to a crime under Article 206 of the Turkish Criminal Code called ‘lying during the constitution of an official document’. The person is also banned from re-entering Türkiye and a V-87 code is imposed.\textsuperscript{964}

However, the list changes according to capacity and if there is a health or education emergency, both groups of protection holders can be directed to other cities. Istanbul is reportedly closed to registration of both non-Syrians and Syrians except for justified reasons such as education, health or employment. However, Istanbul PDMM is reportedly not accepting registrations due to educational needs as it would mean registering the whole family which leads to an increase in numbers.\textsuperscript{965}

As described in Registration of the asylum application, PDMM suspended its activities and limited access to its offices from March to June in 2020 because of COVID-19. This hampered access to the Temporary Protection procedure and created additional delay. In the Central Anatolian region, following time periods for a registration appointment for temporary protection applicants were reported in 2020:

In 2021, registration of temporary protection continued, although not in all cities. At the end of the year there were 3,737,369 people registered under temporary protection. This is an increase of 95,999 compared to 2020, although these are not all registrations of new arrivals. Registrations are closed in many cities (see The “satellite city” system). For example, due to the increase in population density in Istanbul and people’s concerns, registrations have been closed in Istanbul since 2019, except for some instances (family reunification, access to treatment, having a work permit, vulnerable groups). Another problem widely encountered is when the father of the family has temporary protection, but his wife and children come to Türkiye illegally, try to register in Istanbul but have difficulties in accessing registration. The new 25% rule or “deconcentration policy” will also affect cities with larger populations of Syrians such as Kilis where over 38% of the population is made up of Syrians under temporary protection.

After changes to the LFIP in December 2019, the law now foresees an administrative fine for those who provide accommodation to unregistered foreigners even unknowingly. In many provinces registration for Temporary Protection and International Protection is not taking place, foreigner citizens cannot complete registration even if they want to. This could lead to a rise in homelessness.

PMM collects biometric data, including fingerprints, during registration and maintains electronic files for each beneficiary in the agency’s electronic file management system named “Göç-Net” – an internal database available to DGMM staff to facilitate registration procedures.

2.1. Security checks and pre-registration

As discussed in Eligibility, Article 8 TPR makes provisions for exclusion of persons from temporary protection, without however designating a procedure for the exclusion assessment. However, as Article 22 TPR instructs that persons who are determined to fall within the exclusion grounds shall not be issued a Temporary Protection Identification Card, it implies that the registration interview should also entail the exclusion screening of applicants.

In practice, this has been crystallised through a pre-registration phase prior to temporary protection registration introduced in March 2016. Pre-registration is conducted with a view to conducting security checks within a period of 30 days, the modalities of which are set out in an unpublished circular. Syrians readmitted to Türkiye from Greece under the EU-Türkiye statement are also channelled under pre-registration.

In many locations around Türkiye, due to high numbers, lack of interpreters and the conduct of security checks, applicants are given pre-registration appointments and face substantial delays before registering, which may take several months and vary from one province to another. Applicants also face other practical impediments to registration such as errors on the part of PMM officials, which may only be corrected following time-consuming legal intervention.

971 Information provided by İzmir PDMM, December 2017.
973 In Konya, for example, registration is reported to take 2 months at the time of writing: Information gathered following a visit to an NGO, February 2019.
974 Information provided by Adana Bar Association, February 2018.
The delay in registration leads to problems in accessing health care and other services, which require the beneficiary to have a Temporary Protection Identification Card and a Foreigners Identification Number (YKN), which is listed on the card.

It should be noted, however, that certain categories of vulnerable groups are issued a Temporary Protection Identification Card without waiting for the 30-day period of pre-registration. This includes: (a) children aged 0-12; persons in need of urgent medical treatment; pregnant women; elderly persons; and unaccompanied children. In practice, people with special needs such as persons with health conditions or women in advanced stages of pregnancy benefit from prioritisation in the registration procedure.

2.2. Completing registration before the PDMM

After the completion of the pre-registration phase, the applicant is required to appear before the PDMM within 30 days in order to obtain the Temporary Protection Identification Card. Failure to appear before the PDMM 15 days after the expiry of that 30-day time limit without a valid reason leads to the activation of a “V71” code on “unknown location” (Semt-i meçhul). The “V71” code suspends the registration procedure and can only be lifted after the PDMM confirms the continuation of the procedure or after search and apprehension records are registered in the database.

3. Appeal

Since the TPR itself does not have a dedicated provision listing specific remedies for persons concerned against negative decisions, all acts and actions of competent authorities within the scope of the TPR are subject to general rules of accountability derived from Turkish administrative law, unless there is a dedicated specific remedy provided in the LFIP itself.

As mentioned in International Protection: Removal and Refoulement, there is a specific dedicated remedy provided by the LFIP against deportation decisions. According to Article 53 LFIP, deportation decisions can be challenged at competent Administrative Court within 7 days. Appeals against deportation decisions have automatic suspensive effect. The competent Administrative Court is required to finalise the appeal within 15 days. Administrative Court decisions on deportation appeals are final, may not be appealed onward in a higher court.

All other scenarios of possible unfavourable decisions and practices are subject to general rules of accountability derived from Turkish administrative law. Under Article 125 of the Turkish Constitution, all acts and actions of the administration are subject to judicial review. According to Article 7 of the Law on Administrate Court Procedures, acts and actions of the administration must be challenged within 60 days at competent administrative courts. Applications with the Administrative Court generally do not carry automatic suspensive effect, but applicants may file an associated halt of execution request, which may or may not be granted. There is no general time limit on Administrative Courts for the finalisation of the appeal. Unfavourable judgments of administrative courts can be challenged in the higher administrative court.

4. Legal assistance

Article 53 TPR guarantees the right to be represented by a lawyer in relation to matters of law and procedure vis-à-vis authorities. It also makes a reference to the provisions of state-funded legal aid (Adli Yardim).

975 On some occasions, courts have granted orders to allow vulnerable persons to access health care. See e.g. 2nd Children’s Court of Gaziantep, Decision of 18 July 2016.
976 DGMM Circular 2017/10 of 29 November 2017 on principles and procedures for foreigners under temporary protection.
enshrined in the Law on Attorneys, which provides for state-funded legal assistance to persons who cannot afford to pay a lawyer.

In Türkiye, state-funded legal aid is delivered by bar associations, subject to considerations of “means” and “merits”. A project implemented by UNHCR and the Union of Bar Associations in Türkiye throughout 18 provinces funds bar associations specifically for international and temporary protection cases (see International Protection: Regular Procedure: Legal Assistance).

Another obstacle relates to the requirement of a notarised power of attorney (see International Protection: Regular Procedure: Legal Assistance). As per the Union of Notaries Circular 2016/3, the Temporary Protection Identification Document is included in the list of documents accepted by public notaries. However, some notaries remain reluctant to grant power of attorney on the basis of such documents.

Article 51 TPR guarantees persons concerned and their legal representatives’ access to file and documents, with the exception of “information and documents pertaining to national security, public order, protection of public security, prevention of crime and intelligence”. This excessively broad, blanket space of exception generates the risk that in certain situations lawyers representing persons seeking to challenge their treatment will be prevented from being able to access all relevant information. In the current regional context and security environment, with a heavy emphasis on the identification and prevention of persons with alleged links to terrorist groups, the restrictions allowed by Article 51 TPR on lawyers’ access to file is concerning.

Article 51 TPR also provides guarantees for the confidentiality of personal information and documents.

In 2021 there were some problems for Syrians accessing legal aid. The legal aid service does not look for a poverty certificate from the refugee applicant, but some courts do. If the applicant cannot submit a poverty certificate issued by the neighborhood authority (muhtar), the request is immediately rejected. The local authority in Esenler reportedly said that there was an instruction from the governorship and the Ministry of Interior Affairs to not give poverty certificates to Syrians. Family and civil courts of the first instance do not accept legal aid requests without this document. Even if the legal aid request is accepted, in cases where the client has to be heard before the court, the judge asks for a translator, and the client pays the translator fee. The legal aid budget should typically cover this cost.978

D. Detention in the temporary protection framework

As a rule, temporary protection beneficiaries should not be detained. The TPR does not feature any explicit provision governing administrative detention of persons within the scope of temporary protection laying down grounds and procedural safeguards that apply. Article 35 TPR does, however, provide that beneficiaries who fail to comply with the obligations set out in the Regulation may be temporarily or permanently prevented from residing outside a Temporary Accommodation Centre. Where this provision is applied, beneficiaries are forbidden from leaving the camp, thereby being de facto in a state of detention.

In addition, detention has also been – arbitrarily – imposed in some cases as a sanction against temporary protection beneficiaries who violate their obligation to stay in their assigned province, although practice in this regard is not uniform. For example, temporary protection beneficiaries apprehended for irregular exit by sea are transferred to Removal Centres and are held there until the completion of pre-registration, unless they pose a threat to public safety and security.979

978 Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.
979 Information provided by a stakeholder, February 2018.
Temporary protection beneficiaries may be subject to detention for the purpose of removal (see International Protection: Grounds for Detention) where their status is cancelled or they fall within the exceptions to the principle of non-refoulement (see Protection from Refoulement).
The temporary protection framework laid down by the TPR, first and foremost, provides a domestic legal status to beneficiaries granting legal stay in Türkiye; protection from punishment for illegal entry or presence and protection from refoulement.

“The first 4 years can be referred to as the first period in which both authorities and the Syrians themselves regarded the crisis as a rather short-term problem, an assumption because of which steps such as meeting such temporary needs as accommodation, nutrition, and health were taken rather than planning new lives.

The second period includes the years 5, 6, 7, and 8, the current one. In this period, due to the anticipation that the crisis is not going to be resolved in a short time, there has been a mobility in Türkiye with regard to the Syrians. The Syrian population that used to live around the border towns and in South East Anatolia, have recently migrated to industrialized cities where the labour market is more active and today, Istanbul alone hosts around 600 thousand Syrians. The focal points of this second period have been participation in education opportunities, special needs of women and children, child marriage, child labour, and problems of people with chronic diseases, the disabled, and the elderly, etc. During this period, protection has come into prominence and the actors focused more on the aforementioned issues. Besides, access to livelihood and labour market has become more important subjects. As a result of the mobility in Türkiye and the increase in participation in the labour market in this period, Syrians have become more visible in Türkiye.”

2019 could potentially be identified as the beginning of a third period: one of social cohesion and return. As already mentioned, PMM issued a strategy, the Cohesion Strategy and National Action Plan. According to the strategy, six thematic areas are to be addressed by PMM: social cohesion, information, education, health, labour market and social support (social services and benefits). However, events in Istanbul in the summer of 2019 also saw a rise in irregular migrants sent to detention centres in several cities and unregistered Syrians sent to temporary accommodation centres. Amnesty International documented cases of Syrians deported from Istanbul, including 20 cases of forced returns and other stakeholders have expressed concerns about the voluntary nature of those signing voluntary return forms, particularly from detention. After a field visit to Türkiye in 2019, an NGO from the Netherlands reported testimonies that Syrian refugees in detention centres had been forced to sign a ‘voluntary’ return document. Several of these refugees were also mistreated by the Turkish security services or denied access to medical care.

However, 2020 was then the year of COVID-19 and with the end of COVID-19 and the fall of Afghanistan to the Taliban, 2021 became the year of anti-migration rhetoric, severe limitations in access to protection and return.

In terms of integration, Türk Kızılay runs 16 community centres for migrants in different locations across the country. Municipalities also have a central role in the provision of services and integration support through projects. In the past the lack of a national integration plan led to fragmentation and lack of coordination in the area of integration. The Cohesion Strategy and Action Plan (2018-2023) was hoped to solve some of these issues, but it remained largely unimplemented in 2020 due to the COVID-19 crisis and where it was implemented in 2021 it was done so very quietly due to public unrest over migration and the economic crisis that affected Türkiye. One stakeholder reported that in their opinion the government was hesitating to take permanent steps in terms of integration despite the very clear need for the rights of Syrians under temporary protection to be increased including through the attainment of citizenship.

An interesting report from March 2022 on urban refugees in Marmara989 gave the municipality view of integration in Türkiye. The report studied the situation for Syrian temporary protection holders in thirteen provinces and 94 municipalities and challenges. It found that the three most common problems that municipalities encounter regarding immigrants and refugees are the lack of a budget and legal problems arising from the limitations in the legislation related to their jurisdiction, a lack of data, and negative reactions from local people. The main problems experienced by Syrian temporary protection holders are poverty, being employed as unqualified, cheap labour and housing. Syrian refugees most often request help from municipalities with financial and other aid, employment and shelter.

International NGOs have also been active in border provinces since the beginning of the Syrian conflict. In 2015, for example, there were approximately 150 NGOs including international NGOs in Gaziantep. Currently, however, the scope of foreign NGOs’ activities is limited and under close monitoring by the competent PDMM, as organisations need to obtain permission to operate in Türkiye and renew it regularly. 990

A. Status and residence

1. Protection from refoulement

Article 6 TPR guarantees protection from refoulement to persons granted temporary protection. However, an exception to this rule was introduced by way of emergency decree in October 2016, providing that a deportation decision “may be taken at any time during the international protection proceedings” against an applicant for reasons of: (i) leadership, membership or support of a terrorist organisation or a benefit-oriented criminal group; (ii) threat to public order or public health; or (iii) relation to terrorist organisations defined by international institutions and organisations. 991 The reform was consolidated by Law No 7070 on 1 February 2018.

Since 2018, deportation decisions have been increasingly issued to Syrians based on the abovementioned provisions, similar to persons seeking international protection in Türkiye.

991 Article 54(2) LFIP, as amended by Article 36 Emergency Decree 676 of 29 October 2016. The provision cites Article 54(1)(b), (d) and (k) LFIP, the latter inserted by Emergency Decree 676.
In one case, the Administrative Court of İzmir quashed a deportation decision against a Syrian national on foreign terrorist fighter (YTS) grounds, due to the fact that no evidence of terrorist activities had been established and that a criminal investigation was still pending. However, in a different case concerning a Syrian national detained on public security grounds while criminal proceedings were ongoing, the Magistrates’ Court of Hatay refused to order release from detention on the basis that there existed a risk of absconding. In another case, the Court refused to terminate detention, despite the existence of an interim measure from the Constitutional Court.

According to changes to the LFIP in December 2019, entry bans can now be applied to those who are in the country.

The Temporary Protection Regulation was also amended in December 2019. According to these amendments, Syrians that are under temporary protection shall be deported if they do not comply with their notification duty three times consecutively.

In early 2020 in Antakya the number of deportations executed was quite low. Instead, Syrian refugees are forced to sign a voluntary return form. In the case of a deportation decision, individuals are either sent to a third safe country (which is not applicable to Syrians) or held in a removal centre. In the removal centre, individuals are threatened that they will be held there for six months, plus another six months, and forced to sign the voluntary return form. They are told that they can come back to Türkiye illegally anytime. People sign the form, leave Türkiye and illegally re-enter Türkiye, but when they are caught upon return they are deported to Syria directly without any court process or decision because they do not know that a V-87 code (an entry ban) has already been put on their names. Those apprehended on the border are also being registered, their fingerprints are taken and forced to sign a voluntary return form to prevent them from legally entering Türkiye. Unregistered refugees staying in Antakya do not leave their houses due to fear of deportation.

In Gaziantep, voluntary return forms are also being signed by force and the temporary protection status of those who return to Türkiye is not re-activated except vulnerable cases. This is a general application in the region and PDMMs say that this is the decision of the Governorates. They do not apply the DGMM circular of January 2019 on Cessation of Status of Syrians due to Voluntary Return. People are afraid to leave their houses due to a fear of deportation.

In some cases in 2019, Syrian refugees were deported to the ‘safe zone’ established by Türkiye in northern Syria and courts found this practice to conform with the law. Stakeholders were concerned that UNHCR only monitors limited cases of voluntary returns, those that happen at the Öncüpınar border, (‘real’ voluntary returns) but not the ones from removal centres.

In 2021, Türkiye began talks with UN about returns to Syria. Although in practice people cannot be deported to Syria, deportation decisions are being issued. In 2021, several cases filed against deportation before the İzmir Administrative Court were successful on the grounds that no evaluation had been made as per the extent of Article 55 LFIP. Towards the end of 2021, the İzmir Administrative Court developed jurisprudence that Syrians could be deported to a safe third country. Although there is no practice about the safe third country, due to the change it was no longer possible to appeal against deportation. The foreign ID numbers of those who have had a deportation decision issued against them are not reactivated, which encourages irregular status. This has wide-ranging consequences such as parents not enrolling their children in school but sending them to work. Some irregular refugee workers lost their lives in İzmir. Thus, the policy of not registering people has left its mark.

For a discussion on case law of Administrative Courts and the Constitutional Court on the derogation from non-refoulement, see also International Protection: Removal and Refoulement. For more information on the safe third country concept as applied to Syrians in 2020, see the section on the Safe third country.

2. Temporary protection identification document

The TPR provides a registration procedure and envisions the issuing of Temporary Protection Identification Documents (Geçici Koruma Kimlik Belgesi) to beneficiaries upon registration. This card serves as the document asserting the concerned person’s status as a beneficiary of temporary protection.

Article 25 TPR explicitly excludes temporary protection beneficiaries from the possibility of long-term legal integration in Türkiye. According to Article 25, the Temporary Protection Identification Document issued to beneficiaries does not serve as residence permit as such, may not lead to “long term residence permit” in Türkiye in accordance with Articles 42 and 43 LFIP.

Temporary Protection Identification Documents list a Foreigners Identification Number (YKN) assigned to each beneficiary by the Directorate General of Population and Citizenship Affairs. In Türkiye, all legally resident foreign nationals are assigned YKN which serve to facilitate their access to all government services. International protection applicants and status holders within the framework of LFIP are also given such YKN. Currently, YKN assigned to all categories of legally resident foreign nationals, including temporary protection beneficiaries, categorically start with the digits of 99.

A verification and update process of data of Syrians under temporary protection was completed at the end of 2018, in close cooperation with UNHCR. UNHCR reported that 96% of the verification target across Türkiye was met through this exercise. According to stakeholders, however, the verification process only covered about 50 to 60% of temporary protection beneficiaries in regions such as İstanbul, Şanlıurfa or Hatay.

There had been a statement in 2019 that Syrians would be deported if they did not go to the provinces where they were registered. This process was called ‘address verification,’ and it was still in progress in İzmir in 2021. If it is determined that the person is not in the province where they are registered, their registration is deactivated, but it is not canceled. It is legally impossible to deport many of the people so PMM has difficulty imposing a sanction. People who are taken into administrative detention have said they are being forced to return voluntarily, but it is difficult to prove.\textsuperscript{1007} Voluntary return forms need to be signed under the supervision of the Red Crescent and UNHCR, but this rule may not be followed. In some cases, law enforcement pushes people across the border without being registered. Or they are forced to return voluntarily by restricting their fundamental rights and freedoms. Address verifications were also started in Ankara and Central Anatolia. If the Syrian applicant cannot be found at the specific address, their IDs can be cancelled. Their IDs were reactivated when they went to PDMM, but those who could not go to PDMM lost their IDs. It is estimated by Syrian led NGOs and activists that 150,000 IDs have been cancelled as of April 2022.\textsuperscript{1008} At the same time, it is impossible to get an appointment from the Syrian Embassy, and people have to pay.

3. Naturalisation

As discussed in International Protection: Naturalisation, citizenship may be granted through: (a) the normal procedure, following 5 years of residence; (b) marriage to a Turkish citizen; or (c) the exceptional circumstances procedure.

Time spent in Türkiye under a Temporary Protection Identification Document may not be interpreted to count towards the fulfilment of the requirement of 5 years uninterrupted legal residence as a precondition in applications for Turkish citizenship. The Minister of Interior stated in January 2019 that there were 53,099 naturalised Syrians in Türkiye, although this figure includes persons who arrived on residence permits prior to 2011.\textsuperscript{1009} This figure rose to 110,000 as of 14 February 2020.\textsuperscript{1010}

Temporary protection beneficiaries who arrived after 2011 can only access naturalisation through marriage to a Turkish citizen or through the exceptional circumstances procedure. Citizenship under exceptional circumstances is granted on the basis of certain profiles and criteria such as skills which could contribute to Türkiye. Generally, citizenship is granted to highly qualified Syrians in practice, although other categories can also obtain it.\textsuperscript{1011}

The process to acquire citizenship is not clear. There are reportedly four phases but there are applicants who have been waiting for a very long time.\textsuperscript{1012}

The government initiated a preliminary study to offer Turkish citizenship to qualified Syrians in 2018. The situation of about 10,000 families was examined by DGMM, corresponding to 20,000 persons. Information on the families was discussed in the Citizenship Commission. It was anticipated that the cases would take a long time to process, since a significant part of the information on Syrians was based on their own statements.\textsuperscript{1013} There was no update on this process in 2019. As of January 2021 there were concerns that applications for citizenship from Syrian nationals had been indefinitely postponed.\textsuperscript{1014}

There is another route to Turkish citizenship under exceptional circumstances for foreign investors to ensure capital flow to Türkiye. According to this arrangement, citizenship can be acquired in exchange for purchasing property of at least $1 million or investing in fixed capital of at least $2 million, or creating new employment for at least 100 people or depositing in in Türkiye at least $3 million with a reservation of not withdrawing it for three years or of buying governmental bonds of $3 million with a reservation of not selling them for three years, or acquiring investment fund of $1.5 million. The limit for real estate ownership decreased down to $250,000 in 2018. According to data from January 2020 collected from the General Directorate of Deeds and Lands (Tapu ve Kadastro Genel Mudurlugu), 6,694 foreigners have received Turkish nationality through purchasing property since 2017. Iranian nationals rank first (1,475) with Iraqis in second place with 842 and Afghans third with 812.

In 2019, Syrians in Antakya requested information on exceptional citizenship through acquiring property but as far as lawyers know the quota for foreigners to acquire property has been exceeded in Antakya. The process is not transparent and mostly regulated thorough internal communication in PMM and PDMM. The majority of Syrians remain ineligible for naturalisation under the aforementioned exceptional circumstances. The criteria for naturalisation are not consistently applied, while the duration of the process also varies.

Unaccompanied children accommodated in child protection shelters are granted citizenship if it is established that they have no relatives in Türkiye. The legal status of children born in Türkiye was discussed by a 2018 report of the Refugee Rights Commission of the Grand National Assembly. According to the report, as many as 276,000 children born in Türkiye are stateless (haymatlos), since they hold neither Syrian nor Turkish identification papers.

The number of new-born Syrians in Türkiye was 450,000 as of February 2020. Many of these can be presumed to stateless. The Turkish Parliament’s Refugee Sub-committee in 2018 spoke of over 300,000 Syrian children stateless in Türkiye. Türkiye is not a party to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness or the 1997 European Convention on Nationality. Stakeholders have expressed concerns that Türkiye does not currently provide these children unconditional birth-right citizenship and that the Regulation on Temporary Protection does not include time spent in Türkiye under temporary protection towards the five years’ uninterrupted legal residence as a precondition for applications for Turkish citizenship by naturalisation. In addition, nationality legislation in Syria does not guarantee women the right to transmit their Syrian nationality to their children. This with the loss of documentation due to the Syrian

B. Family reunification

Article 49 TPR appears to grant temporary protection beneficiaries the possibility of “making a request” for family reunification in Türkiye with family members outside Türkiye. While the article provides that PMM shall “evaluate such requests”, the wording of this provision does not indicate strictly a right to family reunification for beneficiaries. It is rather worded as a possibility subject to the discretion of PMM.

According to Article 3 TPR, a beneficiary’s spouse, minor children and dependent adult children are defined as family members. The article also provides that in the case of unaccompanied children, “family unification steps shall be initiated without delay without the need for the child to make a request”.

In practice, Türk Kızılay is the main actor working on family reunification applications, especially reunification of children with their families in Türkiye, while AFAD manages family reunification requests in the border regions. According to their statistics, as of April 2022 3,869 people have received support from Türk Kızılay with family reunification to date.\textsuperscript{1028} They also provide accompaniment in case of child reunification in Türkiye and family tracing services.

C. Movement and mobility

1. Freedom of movement

The temporary protection declaration decision of the Presidency may contain the implementation of temporary protection measures to a specific region within Türkiye as opposed to countrywide implementation.\textsuperscript{1029} The Presidency has the authority to order limitations on temporary protection measures in place, or the suspension of existing measures for a specific period or indefinitely, "in the event of circumstances threatening national security, public order, public security and public health".\textsuperscript{1030}

Article 33 TPR also provides that temporary protection beneficiaries are “obliged to comply with administrative requirements, failure of which will result in administrative sanctions”. Among other requirements, they may be "obliged to reside in the assigned province, temporary accommodation centre or other location” and comply with “reporting requirements as determined by provincial Governorates”. This provision clearly authorises PMM to limit freedom of movement of temporary protection beneficiaries to a particular province, a particular camp or another location.

However, it was not until August 2015 that Turkish Government authorities imposed a dedicated instruction to introduce controls and limitations on the movement of Syrians within Türkiye. On 29 August 2015, an unpublished DGMM Circular ordered the institution of a range of measures by provincial authorities to control and prevent the movement of Syrians inside Türkiye. Its existence became known when security agencies particularly in the southern provinces began to act on this instruction and started intercepting Syrians seeking to travel to western regions of the country. It appears that the impetus behind this measure was to halt the growing irregular sea crossings of Syrian nationals to Greek islands along the Aegean coast. Following the EU-Türkiye statement, movement restrictions have been enforced more strictly vis-à-vis temporary protection beneficiaries. Obtaining permission to travel outside the designated province has become more difficult, while routine unannounced checks in the registered addresses of beneficiaries have also increased.

DGMM Circular 2017/10 of 29 November 2017 specifies that PDMM may introduce reporting obligations on temporary protection beneficiaries by means of signature duty. Failure to comply with reporting obligations for three consecutive times without valid excuse may lead to implicit withdrawal and cancellation of temporary protection status and to the issuance of a “V71” code based on “unknown location” of the person. Beneficiaries may request a travel authorisation document in order to travel outside the province in which they are registered. The document is issued at the discretion of the competent Governorate and may not exceed 90 days in duration, subject to a possible extension for another 15 days. The beneficiary is required to notify the Governorate upon return to the province. Failure to do so after the expiry of the 90-day period leads to a “V71” code, as a result of which the person’s status is considered to be implicitly withdrawn. The “V71” code is deactivated if the person approaches the PDMM with valid justification, following an assessment of the case.

Movements of temporary protection beneficiaries seem to continue, nevertheless. PMM statistics on apprehensions for irregular migration do not discern irregular entries from irregular exits from Türkiye, yet indicate that the majority of apprehensions occur in western and southern provinces. By the end of 2021, Syrians accounted for 23,469 of the total number of 162,996 apprehensions across the country. The largest group at 70,252 were Afghans.

Temporary protection beneficiaries may also move between provinces inter alia to seek employment. This is often the case for Syrians living in Şanlıurfa or İstanbul and relocating to Ankara for work opportunities. To reduce informal employment, the Ministry of Family and Social Services has provided employers with the possibility to make one official declaration before a public notary that a beneficiary is starting employment, in order for that beneficiary to transfer his or her place of residence within 30 days. However, due to obstacles in obtaining a work permit (see Access to the Labour Market), and to the fact that employers do not actively make the necessary official declarations, they are not able to change their address from the place of first registration to Ankara.

1032 Council of Europe Special Representative for Migration and Refugees, Report of the fact-finding visit to Türkiye, 10 August 2016, para IV.5.
In January 2020, the Governor of İstanbul reported that the number of Syrians living in İstanbul under the temporary protection law had been reduced to 479,420 people in 2019, which is 78,200 less than 2018 and that nearly 100,000 unregistered Syrians had been removed from İstanbul.\footnote{See also, InfoMigrants, ‘Türkiye, nearly 100,000 unregistered Syrians removed from İstanbul’, January 2020, available at: https://bit.ly/3anYDUR.} The Turkish authorities reportedly arrested about 118,432 irregular migrants in İstanbul during 2019, compared to only 28,364 in 2018.\footnote{Middle East Monitor, ‘Official: Number of Syrians decreased in İstanbul during 2019’, 6 January 2020, available at: https://bit.ly/2QQYrFS.} In an official press release the İstanbul Governate said that 42,888 non-Syrians were transferred from İstanbul to removal centres along with 6,416 Syrians to Temporary Accommodation Centres, from 12 July to 15 November 2019.\footnote{İstanbul Governate, ‘Düzensiz Göç, Kayıtsız Suriyeliler ve Kayıt Dışı İstihdam İle İlgili Basın Açıklaması’, 15 November 2019, available in Turkish at: https://bit.ly/33LBDwB.} In early 2022 this was formalized in the “25% rule”, whereby from May 2022 it is against the law for any region or area in Türkiye to have a population of foreign nationals that is more than one-quarter of the total population. This includes both people who have made Türkiye their permanent home and those who are merely visiting the country. 781 neighbourhoods in different provinces are now closed to foreign nationals seeking address registrations for temporary protection, international protection, and residence permits, as well as changes to their city of residence if they are foreign nationals with residence permits or are under temporary or international protection, with the exception of newborns and instances of nuclear family reunification. Adana, Ankara, İstanbul, İzmir, Muğla, and Antalya are some of the cities that fall into this category, along with a great number of others.\footnote{https://www.goc.gov.tr/mahalle-kapatma-duyurusu-hk}

2. Travel documents

Article 43 TPR provides that if temporary protection beneficiaries make a request for a travel document, these requests “shall be evaluated” in the framework of Article 18 of the Passport Law. As described in International Protection: Travel Documents, Article 18 of the Passport Law envisions the two types of “passport with a foreign-nationals-only stamp” (Yabancılara Mahsus Damgalı Pasaport) with different durations of validity. Therefore, the current temporary protection framework does not foresee the provision of (Refugee) Travel Documents to temporary protection beneficiaries within the meaning of the 1951 Convention.

Stakeholders are not aware of any such “passports with a foreign-nationals-only stamp” issued to a temporary protection beneficiary. That being said, there are cases of temporary protection beneficiaries being allowed to travel on their Syrian passports to third countries for private purposes, although in some cases these individuals encounter difficulties in entering Türkiye upon return.

3. Resettlement and family reunification departures

3.1. The general procedure

PMM pre-identifies cases for resettlement consideration among the registered temporary protection caseload through the PDMM and makes referrals to UNHCR in lists. When UNHCR identifies the applicants most in need of resettlement from these lists, it presents them to third countries.

The final decision is taken by the third countries. They examine the files and decide whether to accept the relevant applicants, especially after conducting security checks. IOM organises the implementation of health checks, the preparation of travel documents and the cultural orientation of those accepted for resettlement.
Departure of temporary protection beneficiaries to third countries for the purpose of resettlement is subject to the permission of PMM. A so-called “exit permission” must be issued in order for a beneficiary to be allowed to exit Türkiye to a third country either for the purpose of a temporary visit or on a permanent basis for the purpose of resettlement.

The same exit permission requirement also applies to temporary protection beneficiaries in the process of departing from Türkiye for the purpose of family reunification with family members in third countries. Syrians seeking a family reunification departure from Türkiye must first register with PMM as a temporary protection beneficiary before they can subsequently request and obtain an “exit permission” to leave Türkiye to a third country. IOM supports the process for family reunification departures to Germany. In Türkiye, many refugees want to reunite with family members in Europe. IOM conducts family reunification interviews. Often a Syrian family has some members in Germany, with other family members in neighbouring countries such as Lebanon and Türkiye. The person in Germany receives refugee status or subsidiary protection status. In Türkiye, family members apply for a family reunification visa through the German Consulates and can migrate to Europe. There is an interview list of 10 questions, including the problems experienced in Türkiye and problems with integration. The majority of families mention discrimination, particularly for children in school. This seems prevalent in Şanlıurfa. In 2021 many families from Syria who had been living in Türkiye for several years wanted to go to Europe because of the economic crisis. This meant applications have increased.

There is a family reunification unit in the Ministry of Family and Social Services, but the dormitories have no information. There is a department called ISS (international social services) in the Ministry; if they get informed about a case about family reunification, they follow up. However, other institutions in Türkiye do not know much about the ISS unit. The Ministry is currently being restructured as the Ministry of Family and Social Services. Since the structure of the Ministry changes so frequently, there is no continuity with policies and practices on family reunification, so organizations like Türk Kızılay have been managing these processes, however, their project recently ended.

In practice, however, certain profiles of temporary protection beneficiaries are issued a “V91” code referring to “temporary protection holders in need of exit permission” (Ülkeden Çıkışı İzne Tabi Geçici Koruma Kapsamindaki Yabancı) and which prevent them from exiting Türkiye. “V91” codes are usually issued to highly qualified Syrians.

According to PMM statistics, a total of 19,189 Syrians had been transferred to third countries between 2014 and June 2022, mainly to Canada, the US, the UK and Norway. All resettlement from Türkiye was suspended in early 2020, including German and Türkiye’s bilateral agreement on the readmission of refugees, due to the Corona Virus. The COVID-19 situation significantly affected the processing for resettlement; however, remote interviewing measures were set in place in five locations across Türkiye, in cooperation with DGMM, allowing interviews, which were suspended from March to June to gradually resume. The pandemic also affected resettlement departures because of the global pause of international flights between March and September.
3.2. The 1:1 resettlement scheme

The EU-Türkiye statement of 18 March 2016 established a specific resettlement procedure ("1:1 scheme"), under which one Syrian national would be resettled from Türkiye to EU Member States for each Syrian national returned from Greece to Türkiye, taking into account the UN vulnerability criteria.\(^{1043}\)

In practice, participation in resettlement may vary from one region to another. For example, while temporary protection beneficiaries residing in İstanbul and İzmir may generally be interested in resettlement under the 1:1 scheme, this is not an option pursued by people living in Gaziantep or Hatay.

As of June 2022, the following numbers of refugees had been resettled to the EU under the 1:1 scheme:

From 2016 up until June 2022, a total of 33,961 Syrians had been resettled to the EU through the one-to-one policy.\(^{1044}\) Resettlement procedures were suspended from March until July 2020 in the context of...

Frontex registered a 46\% increase in migrants arriving from Türkiye in 2019, despite the deal with the EU to curb migrant influx into the bloc.\textsuperscript{1046} The situation became extremely tense in February and March 2020 after an escalation of tensions in northeastern Syria. Turkish President Erdogan ‘opened the gates’ between Türkiye and the EU, saying amongst other things that Türkiye could not cope with another mass influx of refugees from Syria. This led to Greece closing its border, criticisms of both Europe and Türkiye’s handling of the situation and concerns for the human rights of migrants and refugees in the middle.\textsuperscript{1047} Overall, the number of arrivals from Türkiye went down in 2020 by three-quarters to around 20,000.\textsuperscript{1048} The numbers of arrivals stayed around the same in 2021.\textsuperscript{1049}

\subsection*{1. Temporary Accommodation Centres}

The TPR does not provide a right to government-provided shelter as such for temporary protection beneficiaries. However, Article 37(1) TPR, as amended in 2018, authorises DGMM to build camps to accommodate temporary protection beneficiaries.\textsuperscript{1050} These camps are officially referred to as Temporary Accommodation Centres.\textsuperscript{1051} A further amendment to the LFIP in 2018 sets out provisions on the financing of camps set up by DGMM.\textsuperscript{1052}

Articles 23 and 24 TPR authorise DGMM to determine whether a temporary protection beneficiary shall be referred to one of the existing camps or allowed to reside outside the camps on their own means in a province determined by the Ministry of Interior Affairs. Amended Article 24 TPR authorises DGMM to allow temporary protection beneficiaries to reside outside the camp in provinces to be determined by the Ministry of Interior Affairs.\textsuperscript{1053} It also commits that out of temporary protection beneficiaries living outside the camps, those who are in financial need may be accommodated in other facilities identified by the Governorate.

As of June 2022, there were seven such large-scale camps accommodating a total of 49,348 temporary protection beneficiaries, spread across five provinces in Southern Türkiye in the larger Syria border

The cost of operation of the camps and service provision there is significant. The number of residents thus decreased from 56,970 in April 2021 to 49,346 in June 2022.

The number of temporary accommodation centres has been steadily reducing in recent years. The main problems for those remaining are social cohesion, language barrier, access to services and housing. Apart from Türk Kızılay and NGOs with formal cooperation agreements, other organisations have access to the camps only upon request.

There were reports in 2020 that 53 Syrian and Afghan refugees who had been waiting to be accepted by the Greek authorities on the border in Edirne for more than a month, were forcibly transported to Osmaniye camp by bus. In April 2020, Greek authorities claimed that 2,000 refugees from Osmaniye camp had been transported to Greece by the Turkish coastal guard.

By the end of 2021 less than 1.5% of Syrians lived in camps: Adana (Sarıçam – the most crowded), Hatay (Apaydın, Yayladağı, Altınözü), Kilis (Elbeyli), Kahramanmaraş, Osmaniye (Cevdetiye).

2. Urban and rural areas

With the overall size of the temporary protection beneficiary population sheltered in the camps steadily declining, the vast majority of the current population subject to Türkiye’s temporary protection regime reside outside the camps in residential areas across Türkiye. As of 31 December 2021, the total population of temporary protection beneficiaries registered with Turkish authorities was listed as 3,737,339. As of June 2022, less than 1.5% were accommodated in the Temporary Accommodation Centres, whereas 3,635,139 were resident outside the camps (see Statistics).

More than half of the 3.6 million Syrians were registered in 4 out of the 81 Turkish provinces (İstanbul, Gaziantep, Hatay and Şanlıurfa). While İstanbul hosts the largest number of registered temporary protection beneficiaries, this only corresponds to 3.48% of its population. Conversely, temporary protection beneficiaries correspond to 21.54% of the population in Gaziantep, 20.9% in Şanlıurfa, 26.34% in Hatay and 74.54% in Kilis.

According to a report of the National Police Academy:

“While a substantial part of the refugees who do not stay in the centres reside in houses they rent either through their own means or with the support of NGOs or individual citizens, a percentage of them stay in blighted neighbourhoods of cities which were evacuated as part of urban transformation projects. It must be noted that those living in these neighbourhoods live their lives under harsh circumstances and are deprived of healthy housing conditions. Although the refugees who can afford to rent a house are assumed to have no problems, it must be taken into account that the vast majority of refugees have poor economic conditions. The refugees in poor economic conditions live in groups or are forced to live in low-cost and unhealthy houses to decrease their housing costs… Their living spaces are mostly small, dark, humid and unhealthy apartments on the ground or basement levels. The unhealthy conditions of these flats directly affect refugees' state of health and cause various health problems.\(^{1060}\)

The level of inclusion and quality of accommodation of temporary protection beneficiaries varies from one province to another. "Syrians with means or Turkish relatives to help them buy property might have good accommodation, while a large portion with fewer financial means find accommodations in basements, warehouses, and storage and shanty houses closed with plastic or nylon covers."\(^{1061}\)

Research from the University of Gaziantep, based on a survey of 1,824 persons in 129 Syrian households in Gaziantep, found that an average of 6.6 residents live in each household, with 30% of the surveyed households accommodating more than one family. According to recent data, 70.53% of Syrians in Türkiye are Women and Children.\(^{1062}\)

Incidents of tension and violence by locals against Syrians have also been reported. In Mardin, seven Syrian families received letters in February 2019 threatening them with violence if they refused to leave the neighbourhood within seven days.\(^{1063}\) In İstanbul there was a serious incident when a landlord in Bayrampaşa broke the door of his tenant flat, a Syrian family, with an axe.\(^{1064}\) Governors in different provinces lead migration coordination groups aiming at improving social cohesion. In Kayseri, for example, this group visits a family of refugees each week.\(^{1065}\) On the other hand, the Governor of Hatay stated ahead of the local elections on 31 March 2019 that Syrians should avoid leaving their homes on election day.\(^{1066}\)

A report from 2019 on discrimination in Türkiye found that discrimination against refugees, particularly from Syria, and against groups that do not conform to heteronormativity due to gender identity are the most prevalent forms of discrimination in Türkiye.\(^{1067}\) The Media and Refugee Rights Association has also produced recent analyses on very negative reporting in the media on refugee issues,\(^{1068}\) including blaming refugees for a lack of access to healthcare for host populations.\(^{1069}\)

The negative portrayal of Syrians and refugees in the media seems to have sharpened during the Coronavirus pandemic. An analysis of the news between 1 February 2020 and 21 July 2020 revealed violations of refugee rights in 495 news articles published during that time. People seeking international protection seekers were accused of being responsible for COVID-19’s spread across the country and of being potential virus carriers, while their lack of access to basic rights and services during the pandemic was not discussed at all.\(^{1070}\)

At the same time negative attitudes to refugees, Syrians in particular, seems prevalent. The İstanbul Political Research Institute conducted research on Turkish citizens’ attitudes towards refugees in İstanbul.

The Institute organised semi-structured one-on-one interviews with 1,636 Turkish citizens in İstanbul between December 2019 and January 2020. According to the report:

- 10.8% of participants believed that the Syrian population was Türkiye’s biggest problem.
- Participants perceived the Syrian population as a threat, citing economic and security-related issues (7.7-9 out of 10). Moreover, people who encounter Syrian refugees on a daily basis have reported higher threat perception rates than others.
- 78% of participants believed that the Turkish government supports and protects Syrian refugees more than Turkish citizens. 58% did not accept that Syrians are victims of civil war.
- 1 out of 3 of the participants felt strong negative emotions towards Syrian refugees such as anger and rage.
- People who encountered Syrians in their daily life were more likely to participate in anti-Syrian activities.

In a survey by Metropoll in 2021, the majority of the participants did not want Syrians in Türkiye. The situation of migrants is becoming more and more difficult before elections in Türkiye in 2023.

1.1. Legal conditions and obstacles to access in practice

Temporary protection beneficiaries have the right to apply for a work permit on the basis of a Temporary Protection Identification Card, subject to regulations and directions to be provided by the Presidency. The Regulation on Work Permit for Foreigners under Temporary Protection, adopted on 15 January 2016, regulates the procedures for granting work permits to persons under temporary protection.

Temporary protection beneficiaries are required to apply for a work permit in order to access employment. An application for a work permit may be lodged following 6 months from the granting of temporary protection status,\textsuperscript{1075} by the employer through an online system (\textit{E-Devlet Kapısı}) or by the beneficiary him or herself in the case of self-employment.\textsuperscript{1076}

The Regulation foresees an exemption from the obligation to obtain a work permit for seasonal agriculture of livestock works.\textsuperscript{1077} In that case, however, beneficiaries must apply to the relevant provincial governorate to obtain a work permit exemption.\textsuperscript{1078} The Ministry of Family and Social Services may also limit the number and provinces where temporary protection beneficiaries may work under seasonal agriculture of livestock jobs.\textsuperscript{1079} Beyond special rules in the context of agriculture and livestock work, the Regulation prohibits beneficiaries from applying for professions which may only be performed by Turkish nationals.\textsuperscript{1080}

When deciding on the granting the right to apply for a work permit, the Ministry of Family and Social Services takes into consideration the province where the beneficiary resides as a basis.\textsuperscript{1081} However, it may cease to issue work permits in respect of provinces which have been determined by the Ministry of Interior to pose risks in terms of public order, public security or public health.\textsuperscript{1082}

The Ministry may also set a quota on temporary protection beneficiaries based on the needs of the sectors and provinces.\textsuperscript{1083} The number of beneficiaries active in a specific workplace may not exceed 10\% of the workforce, unless the employer can prove that there would be no Turkish nationals able to undertake the position. If the workplace employs less than 10 people, only one temporary protection beneficiary may be recruited.

As of 2021, the work permit fee is 378.70TL.\textsuperscript{1084} Under the Regulation, temporary beneficiaries may not be paid less than the minimum wage.\textsuperscript{1085}

The number of work permits issued to temporary protection beneficiaries has slowly increased following the adoption of the Regulation on 15 January 2016. In Şanlıurfa, for example, the Association of Syrian Businessmen has signed a Memorandum of Understanding for the investment of 80m TL to establish 20 factories with a total employment capacity of 1,500 workers.\textsuperscript{1086} According to the Ministry of Family and Social services, the number of companies having at least one Syrian founder was 15,159 as of 29 February 2019.\textsuperscript{1087} In 2019 a total of 145,232 work permits were issued including 63,789 to immigrants from Syria. 93\% of work permits for Syrians were granted to men and 7\% to women.\textsuperscript{1088}

Between 2016 and 2019, a total of 132,497 work permits were issued to Syrians registered in Türkiye, including renewals of already existing work permits. This means approximately 1 million Syrians are estimated to be working informally without legal protections and rights.\textsuperscript{1089}

Civil society organisations are an important employer for Syrians under temporary protection. According to stakeholders, there were 150 national and international NGOs and about 14,000 employees working in Gaziantep by the end of 2015. However, as of that date, the state started strictly monitoring international NGOs working at the border. Irregularities on the part of international NGOs in relation to the obligation to employ people with work permits have led to a significant number of administrative fines. In one case, the Magistrates’ Court of Hatay has annulled such a fine on the ground that it is incompatible with the a special protection provisions for humanitarian aid NGOs in the Law on Work Permit of Foreigners and the Refugee Convention.\(^\text{1090}\)

Despite the legal framework introduced in 2016 to regulate access to the labour market for temporary protection beneficiaries, substantial gaps therefore persist with regard to access to employment in practice. Beneficiaries receive little or no information on the work permit system, as the number of community centres providing information about such opportunities remains limited; 16 centres were operated by Türk Kızılay as of January 2020.\(^\text{1091}\)

The process for work permits for Syrians in Türkiye was difficult in 2021. One stakeholder estimated only 100 thousand Syrians have work permits. Employers do not want to get a work permit, and when they do, Health and Safety Labour Watch (İşçi Sağlığı ve Güvenliği Meclisi) is monitoring workplace homicides, including those of refugees and migrants. These include cases of child labour, such as Ula Kerem, a 13-year-old Syrian girl who lost her life in a work-related murder in Mersin in 2021 when her scarf got caught in a citrus packing machine.\textsuperscript{1092}

1.2. Working conditions

Temporary protection beneficiaries in Türkiye are impacted by the widespread practice of undeclared employment under substandard working conditions and low wages.\textsuperscript{1093} Undeclared employment flourishes in the agricultural sector, particularly in provinces such as Adana.\textsuperscript{1094} Despite initiatives such as a recent UNHCR-funded agricultural skills training in southeastern Türkiye,\textsuperscript{1095} Syrians work long hours – in many cases exceeding 11 hours a day – for 38 TL / approx. €4, a portion of which is withheld by “handlers” (elciler) who act employment agents.\textsuperscript{1096} In other provinces such as Muğla, undeclared employment frequently occurs in the construction sector,\textsuperscript{1097} while in Ankara it is prevalent in the furniture manufacturing industry in Altındağ. In İstanbul, a report published by the United Metalworkers’ Union (Birleşik Metal İşçleri Sendikası) on the situation of Syrian refugees in the textile industry.\textsuperscript{1098} According to the report, the wages of 46% of Syrian and of 20% of Turkish workers are below the minimum wage level. It can be said that the minimum wage is not applicable in textile ateliers operating without licence (Merdivenaltı atölyeleri). In terms stratification of wages in the labour market, Turkish men are at the top, followed by Turkish women, while Syrian men close to the bottom and Syrian women at the bottom.

Poor health and safety conditions at work are also a matter of concern. According to Health and Safety Labour Watch 112 refugee workers lost their lives in work-related accidents in 2019 including as a result of fires, equipment failure and road accidents.\textsuperscript{1099}

During the COVID-19 pandemic, labour demand emerged in some work areas because some Turkish citizens did not go to work due to COVID-19 restrictions. Syrian refugees met some of this demand but for very low wages, especially in the southern parts of Türkiye such as Mersin, Adana, etc. They also faced important difficulties in accessing remote education and social assistance. This situation was not only specific to Syrians but all seasonal agricultural workers. There were also concerns about a lack of hygiene equipment and of masks to prevent the spread of COVID-19. Protective equipment was supplied by NGOs, the UN, the EU and some municipalities but it was not systematic nor regular.\textsuperscript{1100}

Women, in particular, face significant challenges in obtaining effective access to the labour market. This is due, on the one hand, to obstacles such as lack of childcare and lack of information and training opportunities. On the other hand, traditional gender roles assigned to women as caretakers, especially in southern Türkiye regions such as Şanlıurfa, mean that women’s access to public space is limited compared to men, while training opportunities mainly revolve around traditional vocations such as hairdressing or sewing. In addition, where they do take jobs outside their homes, women in the textile sector often face discrimination and ill-treatment. This is namely the case for ateliers operating without licence (Merdivenaltı atölyeleri) in İstanbul, where women and girls work in the rear of basements and in windowless rooms for long hours.

The Association for Migration Research conducted field research with 48 Syrian women from 3 different provinces in Türkiye (Mersin, Gaziantep, and İzmir). All interviewees were low-wage workers employed under precarious conditions. Most of the participants could not work outside due to pressure from their male relatives or husbands, which meant piece work was the main form of employment. Those who worked outside explained that they needed their male family members’ consent to continue working. Women encounter various difficulties in accessing the labour market, such as building social relations, finding a safe workplace, as well as a lack of language proficiency and education. NGOs were regarded as ideal workplaces for refugees. However, several cases of discrimination were also reported by interviewees. For example, five women working for national NGOs reported that they were subject to differentiated treatment compared to their Turkish colleagues. In addition, NGOs mostly hire employees on a project basis for specific time periods which can often be inconsistent for refugee women. However, working for NGOs offered relatively better working conditions compared to other options such as retail jobs and day care work. Interviewees employed in the textile industry worked more than 12 hours a day and even the highest salary was reportedly below the minimum wage. Informal employment also caused discriminatory work practices.

The situation for women was also significantly impacted during COVID-19. A shoemaker spoke of the hardships of keeping up with housework while making shoes at home. The financial situation of families who live on waste collection were considerably affected by lockdown measures making it difficult for them to choose between providing food for the household and buying necessary sanitary equipment such as masks. A study with 300 women refugees in İzmir found that 84.5% of the participants lost their jobs in the course of the pandemic and 83% of those who are employed had problems relating to their salaries.

The Turkish labour market also presents high exploitation risks for children, given the widespread phenomenon of child labour and exploitation in areas such as agriculture, textile factories, as well as... restaurants in cities such as Ankara. In the textile sector, approximately 19% of the workforce is underage, while this number is as high as 29% in respect of Syrians. Syrian working children under the age of 15 are much more visible in the industry than Turkish children.\footnote{United Metalworkers’ Union, Suriyeli Sığınmacıların Türkiye’de Emek Piyasasına Dahil Olma Süreçleri ve Etkileri: İstanbul Tekstil Sektörü Örneği, June 2017, available in Turkish at: \url{http://bit.ly/2DIrq6p}.} The Worker Health and Safety Council documented the case of a 5-year-old Syrian child forced to work in Gaziantep in 2017.\footnote{Worker Health and Safety Council, ‘Göçmen çocuk sömürüsü: 5 yaşında çocuklar çalıştırılıyor’, 28 March 2017, available in Turkish at: \url{http://bit.ly/2FoFzpu}.} According to the Turkish Medical Association, children in textile industries work 12-hour shifts for 300 TL a month.\footnote{Birgün, ‘Günde 12 saat çalıştırılıp ayda 300 TL kazanıyorlar’, 20 August 2018, available in Turkish at: \url{https://bit.ly/2HG2KzY}.}

2018 was declared as the year of the fight against child labour in Türkiye. The (then) Ministry of Labour and Social Security announced a six-year National Action Plan to Fight Against Child Labour in 2017 and a project of 10 milion TL was announced for NGOs and public authorities to conduct activities in ten pilot cities during this period.\footnote{National Action Plan for the Fight against Child Labour, 29 March 2017, available in Turkish at: \url{https://bit.ly/2GhE6q0}.} \footnote{Information provided by Development Workshop, February 2019.} Dedicated monitoring bodies were set up for the purpose of preventing child labour in six cities under that National Action Plan.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, March 2020.} The bodies continued to be active in 2019. Monitoring Commissions held meetings every month and raised awareness among NGOs and other public bodies.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.}

A new project "The Elimination of Child Labour in Seasonal Agriculture" with the International Labour Organization (ILO) Office for Türkiye in cooperation with the General Directorate of Labour of the Ministry of Family and Social Services and with funding from the European Union (EU) started in October 2020. There were plans to reach out to working children, families, employers, school administrators, teachers, mukhtars (village/neighbour masters) and agricultural intermediaries to withdraw children from labour and redirect them to schooling, as well as strengthen the capacities of national and local institutions.\footnote{See, ILO, A New Era Starts in Combating Child Labour in Seasonal Agriculture, 23 November 2020, available at: \url{https://bit.ly/3oq24SU}. In 2022, the economic crisis in Türkiye made affording basic goods more difficult for everyone, but particularly those in precarious employment. One stakeholder noted an increase in child labour and early child marriage due to the crisis and that the social aid available was no longer suitable due to inflation.\footnote{Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.}

Research conducted with over 15,000 Syrians as well as Turkish citizens and employers that was published in early 2021 found that approximately 30% of the Syrians participating had changed their first province of registration, mainly because that they were not able to earn a living there. Although 93% of Syrians taking part had a job, only 55.8% of them declared that they work in a job, and almost all of those who did were employed informally.\footnote{Akyıldız, Ş., Kenanoğlu, M., Güven, S., Kurt, T., Doğanay, C., Kadkoy, O. for TEPAV (Turkish Economic Policy Research Foundation of Türkiye), Supply and Demand-Side Analysis of Syrians in the Labour Market, February 2021, available in Turkish at: \url{https://bit.ly/3RcYolk}.}

Syrians’ experiences regarding the integration process differ from city to city. However, "low wages", "having to work informally / without security" and "language barriers" were the most reported problems in all provinces. Most of the Syrians, who stated that they did not experience any problems in their working and social life, stated that they could speak Turkish. As the education level of Syrians increased, their probability of being exposed to bad working conditions decreased.\footnote{Page 7.}
A significant portion of craftet Syrians who have been able to participate in the workforce regularly or irregularly, formally or informally, could work in jobs suitable for their experiences in Syria or the professions they have acquired in Türkiye. On the other hand, Syrians with professions such as teachers, lawyers and engineers either did not participate in the labour market because they could not find a job suitable for their skills and experience, or they had to work in jobs far below their qualifications.\textsuperscript{1119}

There is a serious gap in the legal regulations of municipalities, which are local government units, for Syrian refugees. Metropolitan Municipality Law No. 5216 and Municipal Law No. 5393 do not contain any financial and technical regulations for the areas of providing services and assistance to refugees. This situation leaves the decision of the municipalities to help and provide services to foreign citizens, especially Syrians, living within their borders, to the initiatives of the municipalities.\textsuperscript{1120}

Under Turkish law, “basic education” for children consists of 12 years, divided into 3 levels of 4 years each. All children in Turkish jurisdiction, including foreign nationals, have the right to access “basic education” services delivered by public schools. All children registered as temporary protection beneficiaries have the right to be registered at public schools for the purpose of basic education.

2.1. Public schools

Public schools in Türkiye are free of charge. They instruct in Turkish and teach a standardised Ministry of National Education curriculum, and are authorised to dispense certificates and diplomas to foreign national children with full validity.

In order to enrol in public schools, children and their parents need to have Temporary Protection Beneficiary Identification Cards. Children who are not yet registered can be temporarily enrolled as a “guest student” which means that they can attend classes but will not be provided any documentation or diploma in return, unless they subsequently complete their temporary protection registration and are officially admitted by the school.\textsuperscript{1121}

Where a foreign national child is enrolled at public schools, the Provincial Directorate of National Education is responsible for examining and assessing the former educational background of the student and determine to which grade-level the child should be registered. In case there is no documentation regarding the past educational background, the Provincial Directorate shall conduct necessary tests and interviews to assess the appropriate grade-level to which student shall be assigned. In mid-2018, the Ministry of National Education launched an Accelerated Learning Programme (Hızlandırılmış Eğitim Programı, HEP) to reach children aged 10-18 who have missed three or more years of schooling. The programme runs in 12 provinces. The programme had reached 10,894 children by mid-2019. In 2020 a tender was released for bids to help develop an online Accelerated Learning Programme after the impact of COVID-19 and a year of online schooling for children in Türkiye.

The Ministry of National Education was due to build 129 new schools with EU funding under the Facility for Refugees in Türkiye, to increase the enrolment rate. Another 55 schools were planned to be built by 2021 with World Bank funding. As of January 2022, the EU facility for refugees in Türkiye factsheet reported 89 new schools built.

The education response in Türkiye is led and coordinated by the Ministry of National Education (MoNE). The numbers of Syrian children enrolled in formal education continues to increase. At the start of the 2019/20 school year, 684,253 Syrian children under temporary protection were enrolled in Turkish public schools and temporary education centres, representing 63 per cent of school-aged Syrian children. In 2021, according to MoNE data, 854,000 children under temporary and international protection were enrolled in formal education, with around 35% of Syrian children of school age remaining out of school.

However, according to an UNESCO report, the number of additional teachers that would be needed to cover the entire population of Syrian refugee children of school age is as high as 80,000. UNICEF estimates as many as 400,000 children out of school. Drop-out rates, particularly at high school level, are linked to factors such as the high level of child labour in the job market, as well as early marriages. Bullying at schools is still a huge unresolved problem. Fear of deportation also has an impact on access to school, affecting around 8,500 children in Bursa, for example. Refugee children are not offered additional Turkish language classes so as to be able to follow the curriculum effectively.

To ensure children's access to the education system, another programme, Conditional Cash Transfer for Education (CCTE), is financed by ECHO and implemented through a close partnership between the Ministry of Family, Labour and Social Services, the Ministry of National Education, AFAD, Türk Kızılay and UNICEF. The CCTE programme provides vulnerable refugee families with bimonthly cash payments to help them send and keep their children in school. Cash assistance is available only for persons who can submit the school registration documents to the social service units of the Ministry. A family can receive payment provided the child attends school regularly; a child should not miss school more than 4 days in one month. According to Türk Kızılay, in cases where a child has not attended school for over 4 days, their protection officers visit the family to identify the cause of absence; child labour, child marriage, peer bullying are the most common factors. According to observations from practice, CCTE has been more effective at elementary school level.

In addition, the PIKTES (Project on Promoting Integration of Syrian Kids into the Turkish Education System) is a European Union funded project implemented by the Turkish Ministry of National Education. It aims to increase the integration of Syrian children, access to quality education and increasing the enrolment and attendance rates of Syrian children and youth in quality formal education. In early 2020, UNICEF, SGDD-ASAM and the Ministry of National Education launched the ‘Assistance Programme for Registration to Schools’ (Okula Kayıt İçin Destek Programı) aiming to reach out to 65,000 Syrian students aged between 5-17 at risk of leaving the education system.

In 2019, the Ministry of National Education opened ‘social cohesion courses’ where students can learn about different cultures and daily life in Türkiye.

Türk Kızılay Community Centre, Şanlıurfa has been following the situation of around 90 Syrian children dropping out school per month and the community centre tries to understand the real reasons behind their non-attendance at school. It is often due to early marriage of girls and boys being forced into child labour. There are social cohesion classes at schools in Şanlıurfa. They give regular trainings at schools on peer bullying, non-discriminatory practices, rights of children, hygiene and social cohesion. Also, they provide psychological support and regular health checks for students.

More generally, experts estimate lack of education as a common feature among the Syrian population in Türkiye. According to a survey, 33% of respondents reported to be illiterate, while another 13% reported to be literate without having attended school. Syrian girls are more likely to drop out of school. Registration problems, financial difficulties, care responsibilities, conservative family structures and early marriages are all reasons for low levels of schooling among Syrian girls.

In 2020, schools were closed for long periods during the COVID-19 pandemic and education shifted to distance-learning that could be accessed through a TV or other device. This affected all children but disproportionately affected those without a device or room to study. Refugee children, especially young girls’ education was affected by the pandemic to a great extent. A study in İzmir of 300 women found that only 53.5% of Syrian refugee girls had access to a suitable environment for study. As of April 2021 schools were still closed for the majority of children. Access to long distance education (EBA) is still problematic. Some ongoing EU programmes have been redesigned. For example, student support packages (meal packages etc.) for students could not be used for students since they could not go to schools in 2020. Some of these funds will be allocated towards buying new tablets and electronic devices for students.1144

Among Syrians nomadic agricultural workers, their children’s participation in distance education was close to 0% from research conducted in Adana, Mersin, and Şanlıurfa, although previously it was very low too. In Adana, as for all seasonal agricultural workers, children only attended school when they were physically close to a school and it is the same for nomadic / semi-nomadic groups.1145

In 2021, a stakeholder confirmed that the schooling rate was also very low among Syrians in İstanbul. Access to education had become more difficult which in turn meant that child labour had increased.1146

2.2. Temporary Education Centres (GEM)

The Ministry of National Education Circular 2014/21 on “Education Services for Foreign Nationals” of 23 September 2014 introduced the concept of Temporary Education Centre (Geçici Eğitim Merkezi, GEM) and provided a legal framework for the supervision and monitoring of the aforementioned private schools run by Syrian charities – which had hitherto existed outside the regulatory framework of the Ministry of National Education and were therefore unlawful but tolerated by the provincial authorities. GEM are specifically defined as schools established and run for the purpose of providing educational services to persons arriving in Türkiye for temporary period as part of a mass influx. They were generally provided to children living in camps, whilst children of school age outside the camps had the option of either attending a public school in the locality, which teach the Turkish school curriculum and instruct in Turkish, or a GEM.

Private Syrian schools are generally not free. They charge students varying amounts of fees. It was not clear what legal validity any diplomas or certificates issued by the temporary education centres would have going forward, while the Provincial Directorate of National Education authorities are authorised to determine such questions if and where the child is subsequently admitted to a public school or a university in Türkiye. Another challenge concerned the quality of education provided in GEM, since courses were taught by Syrian teachers, often volunteers.1147

The Ministry of National Education planned a gradual phase out of the GEM.1148 From September 2016 onwards, all Syrian children entering kindergarten or first grade have to be enrolled in Turkish schools and not GEM. The Ministry of National Education has also encouraged children entering fifth and ninth grade to register at Turkish schools.

As of 2019 there were 199 GEMs in 11 provinces educating 39,178 Syrian children.1149 The final GEM closed in 2020. For some stakeholders, the closure of GEM was carried out too rapidly and will lead to difficulties for teachers in handling curricula to mixed classes of Turkish and Syrian children.1150

2.3. Higher education

Temporary protection beneficiaries also have the right to higher education in Türkiye. In order to apply and register with an institution of higher education, students are required to have completed either the 12 years of Turkish basic education or equivalent experience. Children who have attended a certified GEM can also be approved to have fulfilled that requirement on the basis of the equivalence determination carried out by the competent Provincial Directorate of National Education.

In Türkiye, admission to universities is subject to the requirement of taking a standardised university entrance examination and additional requirements by each university. Students who started their university studies in Syria but were not able to complete them, may ask universities to recognise the credits (courses) that they have passed. The decision whether to recognise courses passed in Syria is made by each university and may differ from one department to another.¹¹⁵¹ Sometimes there can be problems in the recognition of previous education including qualifications. Studies in GEMs can also be in Arabic and there can be more general language problems.

Tuition fees for Syrian students were covered by the Presidency for Turks Abroad and Related Communities (Yurtdışı Türkler ve Akabra Topluluklar Başkanlığı, YTB) for the 2017-2018 and 2018-2019 academic years for state universities;¹¹⁵² this is not the case for private universities. Students still needed to cover the costs of local transportation, books and living expenses. There are a number of organisations providing scholarships to Syrian students for higher education study in Türkiye. These organisations include: YTB, UNHCR through the DAFI scholarship programme, and NGOs (e.g. SPARK). Scholarships awarded through YTB and DAFI cover the costs of tuition and pay students a monthly allowance for accommodation and living expenses.¹¹⁵³ The number of Syrian students enrolled in Turkish higher education institutions rose to 47,483 in the 2020/21 academic year.¹¹⁵⁴

In 2020 and 2021 UNHCR worked with YTB to provide university scholarships for refugee students as well as institutional capacity support. For the academic year 2020-2021, UNHCR contributed to the tertiary education of 744 students under temporary protection through higher education scholarship programmes.¹¹⁵⁵ In 2021, UNHCR contributed to the tertiary education of 695 Syrian students for DAFI (Albert Einstein German Academic Refugee Initiative) and higher education scholarships. UNHCR also supported 27 higher education advisors who act as academic advisors to scholarship students and who provided over 12,000 counselling sessions to both refugee and Turkish students in need.¹¹⁵⁶ Meanwhile, the fee waiver policy that exempts Syrians benefitting from temporary protection from paying university fees was cancelled in 2021. UNFPA noted this was likely to reduce future enrolments significantly.¹¹⁵⁷

Temporary protection beneficiaries, regardless of their age, can also benefit from free of charge language education courses as well as vocational courses offered by Public Education Centres structured under each Provincial Directorate of National Education. According to the Directorate on Life-Long Learning 599,475

Syrians benefitted from vocational and other trainings by the State in 2019. Some NGOs also provide free language courses and vocational courses to temporary protection beneficiaries in some localities.

Türk Kızılay has 16 community centres including a new centre in Kocaeli. Türk Kızılay ran an Adult Language Training Programme (ALT) together with the Ministry of National Education and UNDP aiming to provide Turkish language assistance to Syrians to help them into employment from March 2019 to June 2021. Funded through the EU Trust Fund the programme provided people in ten provinces with language lessons. Participants were paid €0.9 per hour to attend three hours a day, three days a week. 42,082 people received a payment through the scheme. The Vocational Course Incentive also provides incentive payments for beneficiaries’ vocational training in different sectors such as food, textile, service, agriculture and animal husbandry as well as courses requiring technical expertise and craftsmanship. Participation in vocational courses is supported with 40 TL or 60 TL per day and those who attend the Turkish Language Courses are entitled to 180 TL per month. Community Centres organize various courses and activities for the beneficiaries to improve their life skills. Community Centres also provide certification approved by the General Directorate of Lifelong Learning of the Ministry of National Education at the end of vocational courses.

In 2021, UNHCR worked with the Ministry of National Education to provide language, vocational and lifelong training in 17 Public Education Centres (PECs). 4,600 Syrians benefitted from Turkish language courses and 2,000 from life-long learning classes.

F. Social welfare

The law draws no distinction between temporary protection beneficiaries and applicants for and beneficiaries of international protection in relation to social assistance (see Forms and Levels of Material Reception Conditions).

Cash assistance programmes implemented mainly by Türk Kızılay through a dedicated bank card (Kızılaykart), have focused mainly, though not exclusively, on temporary protection beneficiaries. These include the following:

- Emergency Social Safety Net (ESSN): The EU-funded ESSN programme was launched on 28 November 2016 by the World Food Programme, Türk Kızılay and the Ministry of Family and Social Services, under the coordination of AFAD. Families under international or temporary protection and excluded from registered employment are eligible for assistance under ESSN, which extends a monthly allowance of 18 € per family member through the Kızılaykart. Applicants for international protection fall within the scope of this programme.

The ESSN scheme is the single largest humanitarian project in the history of the EU. 1 April 2021 was the one-year anniversary of a new partnership to deliver ESSN between the Turkish Government, the Turkish Red Crescent (Türk Kızılay), the International Red Cross, and the EU. 3.4 billion TL were distributed in the first year. The value of the transfer rose from 120 TL to 155 TL and 1.8 million people received cash assistance. As of May 2022 1,451,336 people were being reached.

In the context of the ESSN, the Kızılay Food Card developed in cooperation with the World Food Programme offers a smart card technology developed for people in need to meet all their needs at food stores. International protection applicants who hold a YKN go to the Social Assistance and Solidarity Foundations of their satellite city and fill in an application form for a Kızılay Card. If the applicant has a disability, this should be proved by a medical report. Also, people with special needs are prioritised in practice. After 5-9 weeks, applicants can receive their cards ready to use from the contracted bank.

- Complementary Emergency Social Safety Net (C-ESSN): From 2021 this programme has provided additional support for the most vulnerable people receiving ESSN who cannot be referred to livelihood programmes. It supports them to access basic needs. As of March 2022, 373,276 people were receiving support.

- In-Camp Programme: This programme provides cash assistance to refugees residing in Temporary Accommodation Centres. As of May 2022, 42,387 people were benefiting from it.

- Conditional Cash Transfer for Education (CCTE): The EU-funded programme CCTE aims to support refugee families in sending their children to school (see Access to Education) by providing bimonthly payments. The amounts disbursed on a bimonthly basis vary depending on the level of education. The CCTE is being disbursed to 800,839 beneficiaries as of May 2022. CCTE has mainly focused on primary school children. Although the programme is welcomed, some stakeholders have said that the amount given for the CCTE is symbolic and could be more effective if increased.

- Accelerated Learning: Around 20,000 Syrian refugee children and young people are enrolled in accelerated learning programmes helping them make up for lost years of schooling, where they also got basic literacy and numeracy classes, and Turkish language courses. Since 2017, the EU has also provided transportation to an average of 6,000 children per month to help them attend their formal and non-formal education activities.

COVID-19 has also affected the access to basic needs to a great extent in 2020. Research in İzmir among Syrian women found severe issues relating to the access to basic food products. The state food allowance was found inadequate by 83.7% of the 300 participants in the study. Although there were different aid programs provided by the State, refugees were either ill-informed about them or simply could not access them due to complex bureaucratic processes. Consequently, 72.7% of the 300 interviewees could not benefit from food aid.\textsuperscript{1176} These problems were compounded by the financial crisis in 2021.

G. Health care

1. Conditions for health care

All registered temporary protection beneficiaries, whether residing in the camps or outside the camps, are covered under Türkiye’s General Health Insurance (GSS) scheme and have the right to access health care services provided by public health care service providers.\textsuperscript{1177} The health care services are no longer free of charge following a legal amendment of 25 December 2019 and they have to pay a contribution fee determined by the Ministry of Interior Affairs to access primary and emergency health care services and medicines.\textsuperscript{1178} This does not apply to vulnerable groups, however. The practice of contribution fees is different in each province with no uniform application. Reimbursement is not foreseen in the law.

Persons who are eligible for temporary protection but have not yet completed their registration have only access to emergency medical services and health services pertaining to communicable diseases as delivered by primary health care institutions.

Temporary protection beneficiaries are only entitled to access health care services in the province where they are registered. However, where appropriate treatment is not available in the province of registration or where deemed necessary for other medical reasons, the person concerned may be referred to another province.\textsuperscript{1179}

The “income test” to assess means classifies the beneficiary according to the level of income. Persons in the “G0” class have health care premiums covered entirely, while individuals in categories “G1”, “G2” and “G3” proportionally cover some of their health care costs.\textsuperscript{1180}

During the COVID-19 pandemic refugees and migrants (including undocumented) were given access to COVID-19 treatment and testing, however, a number of barriers to these services remained including other out-of-pocket health care expenditure and the language barrier.\textsuperscript{1181} Materials have been provided in Arabic to help combat this by UNHCR, ASAM and others. Reports from stakeholders in 2021 included that beneficiaries of international and temporary protection had to pay for vaccines.\textsuperscript{1182}

1.1. Scope of health care coverage

Under the Turkish health system, differentiation is made among primary, secondary and tertiary public health care institutions. Health stations, health centres, maternal and infant care and family planning centres and tuberculosis dispensaries that exist in each district in each province are classified as primary healthcare institutions. State hospitals are classified as secondary health care institutions. Research and training hospitals and university hospitals are classified as tertiary health care institutions.

\textsuperscript{1177} Article 27 TPR.

\textsuperscript{1179} Basak Bilecen and Dilara Yurtseven, ‘Temporarily protected Syrians’ access to the healthcare system’ (2018) 15:1 Migration Letters 133, 118.

Temporary protection beneficiaries are entitled to spontaneously access initial diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation services at primary health care institutions. These providers also undertake screening and immunisation for communicable diseases, specialised services for infants, children and teenagers as well as maternal and reproductive health services.

Temporary protection beneficiaries are also entitled to spontaneously approach public hospitals in their province. Their access to medical attention and treatment in university and research and training hospitals, however, is on the basis of a referral from a state hospital.\(^{1183}\) In some cases, state hospitals may also refer a beneficiary to a private hospital, where appropriate treatment is not available in any of the public healthcare providers in the province. In such a case, the private hospitals are compensated by the GSS scheme and the beneficiary is not charged.

As a rule, referrals to university hospitals and private hospitals are only made for emergency and intensive care services as well as burn injuries and cancer treatment. This is confirmed in practice in Hatay, Adana and Mersin, where temporary protection beneficiaries cannot access the research and training hospitals without a medical doctor referral. Costs are not covered by the State promptly, however.

Temporary protection beneficiaries’ access to secondary and tertiary health care services is conditional upon whether the health issue in question falls within the scope of the Ministry of Health’s Health Implementation Directive (SUT). For treatment for health issues which do not fall within the scope of the SUT or for treatment expenses related to health issues covered by the SUT, which however exceed the maximum financial compensation amounts allowed by the SUT, beneficiaries may be required to make an additional payment. For example, prosthetic surgery was previously not covered by health care services in Adana, thereby posing an important obstacle.\(^{1184}\)

Free health care coverage for registered temporary protection beneficiaries also extends to mental health services provided by public health care institutions. A number of NGOs are also offering a range of psycho-social services in some locations around Türkiye with limited capacity. The need for mental health support is pressing. The University of Marmara highlighted in 2018 that 6 out of 10 Syrian refugee children suffer from mental health conditions such as PTSD and depression.\(^{1185}\)

With ECHO funding until the end of 2019, the “Geçici Koruma Altındaki Suriyelilerin Sağlık Statüsünün ve Türkiye Cumhuriyeti Tarafından Sunulan İlgili Hizmetlerin Geliştirilmesi” (SIHHAT) project has established 187 Migrant Health Centres (Göçmen Sağlık Merkezi) for Syrian beneficiaries of temporary protection in 28 provinces. Syrians can approach these centres as primary health care institutions. Migrant Health Centres employ 790 mainly Syrian doctors, 790 nurses, 300 support staff, 84 technicians and 960 patient guides.\(^{1186}\) The second phase was announced in December 2020 “Supporting Migrant Health Services in Türkiye (SIHHAT 2)” will focus on increasing the quality of migrant health services and the integration of services and staff to the Turkish Health System. The project aims to increase the number of Migrant Health Centres, the number of healthcare staff with a special focus on Health Literacy, Mental Health and Psychosocial Support, Reproductive Health, Physiotherapy and Rehabilitation with EUR 210 millions of support.\(^{1187}\)

\(^{1184}\) Information provided by a lawyer of the Adana Bar Association, February 2018.

In addition, the “Strengthening Health Care Infrastructure for All (SHIFA)” project aims to construct new migrant health centres and provide medical equipment, maternity, health kits and capacity building with EUR 90 millions of support. A first steering committee meeting was held in October 2021.

1.2. Medication costs

According to SUT, persons covered by the general health insurance scheme are expected to contribute 20% of the total amount of the prescribed medication costs. The same rule also applies to temporary protection beneficiaries, while the rest was previously covered by AFAD.

That said, in terms of access to medication, complications and inconsistent implementation are observed across the country. However, Türkiye has repeatedly claimed that the amount allocated for service expenditure for Syrian refugees is 40 billion Turkish Lira and the major service unit is health care.

2. Obstacles to access in practice

The language barrier is one of the key problems encountered by temporary protection beneficiaries in seeking to access health care services. The language barrier also hinders access to mental health treatment. Although there are interpreters available in some public health institutions in some provinces in the south of Türkiye, in most health care facilities including Migrant Health Centres no such interpretation services are available. A major practical obstacle for refugees is that hospitals in Türkiye give appointments to patients over the telephone. Since hospital appointment call centres do not serve prospective patients in any language other than Turkish, foreign nationals need the assistance of a Turkish speaker already at appointment stage.

The Ministry of Health operates a free hotline that provides limited distance interpretation services to temporary protection beneficiaries, doctors and pharmacists. However, the hotline does not provide any general counselling to beneficiaries about the healthcare system or assistance in obtaining appointments at hospitals. The Danish Refugee Council also operates a limited free hotline service providing interpretation services to Syrians in Arabic and Turkish for the purpose of facilitating interactions with health care providers. Türk Kızılay, for its part, provides an interpreter and a social worker under its Child Protection Centre project, who accompany children at hospitals in Ankara where needed. The Numune and Dişkapı State Hospitals in Ankara also have one interpreter each.

Türk Kızılay also runs community centres providing services on health and protection. 16 centres are currently operational. These centres identify the needs of temporary protection beneficiaries e.g. accessing health care, and also offer psycho-social support.

1193 Information provided by an NGO, February 2019.
Vulnerable and marginalised groups such as sex workers face more acute challenges to accessing services, including information on sexual health, due to the fact that they do sex work informally, often through intermediaries – who in some cases are perpetrators of discrimination and violence – and under heavy working conditions. A number of Syrian sex workers interviewed in 2017 by Red Umbrella Sexual Health and Human Rights Association were unaware of HIV testing and counselling centres and had limited knowledge of health care facilities they could go to if needed. There is very limited information currently on this vulnerable group.

In Antakya there have been complaints about a lack of translators in hospitals. Migrant Health Centres employ Syrian doctors and these centres also provide services to those having no IDs and protection. Stakeholders have complained about access to the Kanuni Sultan Suleyman hospital in Istanbul which has turned away refugees including pregnant Syrian women.

A professor working on Syrian women’s healthcare has reported that the presence of a Turkish citizen positively influences doctors’ and nurses’ attitude towards Syrians. A Syrian doctor who runs a private clinic in Fatih/Istanbul confirmed that Syrians’ temporary protection status is generally suspended even after a short visit to Syria. Upon return they cannot reactivate their IDs or, therefore, access basic services. Undocumented refugees have to wait until their health condition becomes very serious before they can access free healthcare services. Those who cannot afford to pay medical expenses are being reported to the police or the hospital confiscates their passports until they pay. Women’s reproductive health problems can be overlooked. A study among Syrian women refugees in Izmir found that approximately 70% of the 300 participants had difficulties in accessing to medical institutions. Participants in the focus group reported several cases where they weren’t accepted in healthcare centres on the grounds that their cases were not urgent.

The language barrier is still a challenge for refugees seeking medical help. There have been reports of translators and interpreters not translating their complaints and making fun of patients. Research has shown that 50.8% of women remain silent after being exposed to violence or ill-treatment.

The new regulation on charging a contribution rate to Syrians refugees will impose a serious barrier to access to health but it may not be applied to vulnerable groups. There was no further information in 2020 as to how this was being applied for different groups.

Seasonal or agricultural workers do not go to secondary and tertiary health centres. There are two reasons for this, the first is the number of people at hospitals and in 2020 there was also the fear of COVID-19 infection. For primary care, they tend to go to family physicians. There is a project run by Doctors of the World who offer health services to seasonal agricultural workers but there is almost no health service for nomadic / semi-nomadic groups who prefer immigrant health centres in Gaziantep when they have the money and when transportation is available.\textsuperscript{1204}

In September 2021, a new application called ‘emergency travel documents specific to foreigners ’ started to be given to those receiving health treatment in mobile field hospitals in controlled land by the Turkish state in Syria and who have urgent health needs in Türkiye. This document permits them to live and stay in Türkiye to get proper health treatment for a limited period such as three or six months. Once the document has expired, the person has to re-enter Türkiye. The exact number is unknown, but more than 1000 Syrians have this document and live in Türkiye. Generally, their entry is from Hatay, and their first application should be at Hatay State Hospital and then they are referred to another state hospital. Sometimes they are referred to private hospitals, which means that they have to start the process again. Some state hospitals do not recognize this document and do not provide the service. The service is not free of charge, and lawyers have applied for health protection measures before the relevant courts because these people primarily have serious health conditions like cancer. Those affected are issued a code (V-160), and so cannot obtain an ID card. These documents cause many problems- in referral to a university hospital or living in Türkiye for a long time without an ID card. Those affected also cannot access other services, and any person accompanying them has no access to services due to a lack of an ID card. Once these documents expire, and people have to go back to the city of the first entry, often they do not have sufficiently good health to travel from one city to another.\textsuperscript{1205}

H. Guarantees for vulnerable groups

As with the LFIP, the TPR also contains definitions of “persons with special needs” and “unaccompanied children” and provides for additional guarantees. According to Article 3 TPR, “unaccompanied minors, persons with disability, elderly, pregnant women, single parents with accompanying children, victims of torture, sexual assault or other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence” are to be categorised as “persons with special needs”.

The TPR and other related secondary legislation providing the legal framework and procedures for the provision of services to temporary protection beneficiaries identify the Ministry of Family and Social Services as the responsible authority for “persons with special needs”.

As provided by the AFAD Circular 2014/4 on “Administration of Services to Foreigners under the Temporary Protection Regime”, “services such as accommodation, care and oversight of unaccompanied minors, persons with disabilities and other persons with special needs are the responsibility of the Ministry of Family and Social Services. The Ministry is responsible for the referral of vulnerable persons to children centres, women shelters or other appropriate places.”

Being identified and registered as a “person with special needs” entitles beneficiaries to additional safeguards and prioritised access to rights and services. They should be provided “health care services, psycho-social assistance, rehabilitation and other support and services free of charge and on priority basis, subject to the limitations of capacity.”\textsuperscript{1206}

\textsuperscript{1205} Information provided by a stakeholder, May 2022.
\textsuperscript{1206} Article 48 TPR.
Article 3 TPR defines an “unaccompanied minor” as “a child who arrives in Türkiye without being accompanied by an adult who by law or custom is responsible for him or her, or, a child left unaccompanied after entry into Türkiye, provided that he or she did not subsequently come under the active care of a responsible adult”.

Türkiye is a party to the Convention on the Rights of the Child and domestic child-protection standards are generally in line with international obligations. According to Turkish Law, unaccompanied children, once identified, should be taken under state protection with due diligence under the authority of the Ministry of Family and Social Services.

Article 48 TPR provides that unaccompanied children shall be treated in accordance with relevant child protection legislation and in consideration of the “best interests” principle. The 2015 Ministry of Family and Social Policies Directive on Unaccompanied Children provides additional guidance regarding the rights, protection procedures and implementation of services for unaccompanied children. The Directive designates the PDMM as the state institution responsible for the identification, registration and documentation of the unaccompanied children. PDMM are also entrusted the responsibility of providing shelter to unaccompanied children until the completion of the age assessment, health checks and registration / documentation procedures upon which the child is referred to the Ministry of Family and Social Services.

Once the PDMM refers the child to the relevant Provincial Ministry of Family and Social Services Child Protection Directorate, temporary protection beneficiary unaccompanied children aged 0-12 are to be transferred to a child protection institution under the authority of the Ministry of Family and Social Services. Unaccompanied children between the ages of 13-18, who do not demonstrate any special needs may be placed in dedicated “child protection units” providing services within the premises of camps under the authority of the Provincial Child Protection Directorate under the Ministry of Family and Social Services. In practice, however, the referral mechanisms set out in the 2015 Directive are not being used according to stakeholders’ observations.1207

According to the TPR, unaccompanied children are mainly housed in Ministry of Family and Social Services shelters but may also be placed in Temporary Accommodation Centres if appropriate conditions can be ensured.1208 In practice, unaccompanied children between the ages of 0-18 are transferred to the nearest Provincial Child Protection Directorate. These children are not only Syrians, but include children from Afghanistan, Iraq, Somalia and South Africa. Unaccompanied children are placed in the child protection units established by the Ministry in Ağrı, Konya, Yozgat, Gaziantep, Bilecik, Erzincan, İstanbul and Van. As of March 2018, there were 288 children in these centres. 8 children are being cared for by families. Socio-economic support services are provided to 450 children who live with their families.1209

Türk Kızılay also runs a Child Protection Centre (Çocuk Koruma Merkezi) under a pilot project launched in March 2017. Its difference from child protection centres run by the Ministry of Family and Social Services lies in its primary role in preserving integration and social inclusion of refugee children. There is only one such centre established at the moment, located in Altındağ, Ankara, close to the Ankara community centre managed by Türk Kızılay. Children benefitting from the Child Protection Centre live with their families. There, they benefit from a range of activities for children aged 6-18, including drama and music lessons and Turkish language courses. Activities, workshops, seminars and trainings are organized under various topics to provide psychosocial support with the children in the Child Friendly Space and Youth Friendly

Space for 6-18 age group. The meals from Turkish Red Crescent (Türk Kızılay) Ankara Branch Soup Kitchen are served to children twice a day. There is also shuttle service for children coming to the centre. As of January 2020, 47,769 children have benefitted from the centre’s services.¹²¹⁰

According to a March 2018 report of the Grand National Assembly, a total of 53,253 children living outside camps have lost one parent, while 3,969 children in camps have lost their father, 390 have lost their mother and 290 have lost both.¹²¹¹

The psychosocial well-being of Syrian children in Türkiye has been visibly impacted from the traumatic effects of war and flight, as well as deprivation, lack of opportunities for social interaction, and limited access to basic services. According to a European Commission report, citing figures by the government, an estimated 25% of Syrian children suffer from sleeping disorders.¹²¹² The University of Marmara has noted that six out of ten Syrian refugee children suffer from mental health conditions such as PTSD and depression.¹²¹³

2. Women and girls under temporary protection

2.1. Protection from domestic violence

As regards the protection of women, Article 48 TPR refers to Türkiye’s Law No 6284 on Protection of the Family and Prevention of Violence, and the Implementing Regulation of this law, which provides a series of preventive and protection measures for women who are either victim or at risk of violence.

These guarantees are particularly important in light of the persisting risks of gender-based violence or even death generally affecting women in Türkiye.¹²¹⁴ As highlighted by a June 2018 study, given the crowded living conditions in which women find themselves in urban areas (see Housing), “the risks for gender-based violence, sexual abuse of girls and child marriage in crowded arrangements are high and hard to address.”¹²¹⁵ Incidents of such violence include the rape of a pregnant Syrian woman in 2017, who was subsequently murdered with her 10-month-old baby in the province of Sakarya.¹²¹⁶ In 2018, a Syrian woman was killed by her uncle in Bursa.¹²¹⁷ In 2020 two of the attackers were sentenced to 4 years 7 months and 3 years and 20 days imprisonment.¹²¹⁸ In early 2020, there was also a case of a mother and daughter in a refugee camp who were allegedly forced into sex work to meet their basic needs.¹²¹⁹

¹²¹¹ Grand National Assembly, Göç ve Uyum Raporu, March 2018.
Women subjected to or at risk of domestic violence or sexual or gender-based violence by people other than family members must be protected by the competent state authorities. When a woman contacts the police or any other state institution or a third party informs the authorities, depending on the case, either preventive or protective measures should be taken. Temporary protection beneficiary women can also benefit from these measures.

On the basis of a referral from either the police, women can be referred to Centres for the Elimination and Monitoring of Violence (Şiddet Önleme ve İzleme Merkezi, ŞÖNİM), which then refer them to women shelters (kadın konukevi) run by the Ministry of Family and Social Services, municipalities or NGOs in accordance with available capacity.

The problem, however, is that the overall number and capacity of women’s shelters in Türkiye falls very short of the need (see International Protection: Special Reception Needs). According to experts, the number of centres should be around 8,000 to cater for existing needs. Since women’s shelters are meant to accommodate both Turkish and foreign nationals in the locality, temporary protection and international protection beneficiary women are also affected by the capacity problems. The need for women’s shelters in regions such as Gaziantep, Adana, Şanlıurfa is pressing.

Another related practical limitation is that, although the law clearly provides that both women at risk of violence and women who have actually been subjected to violence should be able to access shelters, in practice due to capacity problems only women who have actually been subjected to violence are offered access to existing shelters. In most cases, shelters also inquire into the women’s claim to ascertain that violence is “certain” and request evidence such as an assault report or a criminal investigation, although practice is not uniform across the country. Shelters in Gaziantep request medical reports and ask women whether they have filed a report with the police, whereas in Osmaniye they do not. For foreign women to access women’s shelters in Ankara managers request a medical report evidencing the physical violence and a written criminal complaint.

As a rule, women placed in shelters can stay in the facility up to 6 months. This period can be extended on exceptional basis. Victims of trafficking are invited to leave the country within one month (see International Protection: Special Reception Needs).

The Women Shelters Regulation issued in 2013 also clearly indicates that for a woman to be admitted to a shelter, she is not required to provide a valid identity document. However, a Temporary Protection Identification Document is required of women seeking to be admitted to shelters in practice. In 2019 some women’s shelters in İstanbul required registration in the city and an identity number to accept applicants. In urgent cases, women who are not accommodated in women’s shelters may also stay at “mercy houses” run by municipalities for 2-3 days. Apart from İstanbul, above, these houses are run by the municipalities of Altındağ, Yenimahalle, Ulus and the Central Municipality in Ankara, for example.

In İstanbul, women who could not access registration and could not obtain a permit to travel could not access protection mechanisms in 2020. NGO activities were also limited. Accessing women shelters is also problematic and the case of woman being rejected by the shelter administration despite being a victim of violence was also reported. She was able to get shelter in a Şefkat-Der (Mercy House) and stayed there for a while, in poor conditions however.\textsuperscript{1227}

The number of beds in shelters decreased in 2020 due to COVID-19 measures and only very serious cases were accepted. NGOs often have to try to ‘convince’ police officers in police stations that a woman has been subject to violence. The process at police stations takes a long time, i.e. at least half a day. Conditions in shelters are restrictive and many migrant women leave after 2-3 days due to discrimination and psychological violence from Turkish women. LGBTI+ women are automatically excluded from these shelters.\textsuperscript{1228}

In the Marmara region, shelters look for the presence of a criminal complaint lodged before the prosecutor’s office. There are women who had to come from another city without a travel permit and in these cases, there is an additional fear of going to the police due to the fear of deportation. Also, shelters do not want to accept women coming from other cities and tend to transfer these women to other shelters in other cities. In some cases, women were transferred to removal centres for accommodation purposes.\textsuperscript{1229} In 2021 in the Marmara region, İstanbul Municipality’s shelter supported many women but other municipalities' shelters’ management imposed different requirements on whether the applicant poses a security risk or there is another place to stay instead of a shelter.\textsuperscript{1230}

In 2021, the Adana Family Court decided to apply electronic handcuffing for a Syrian man who had committed domestic violence against his wife. The electronic handcuffing is a pilot project ongoing in 15 cities in Türkiye.\textsuperscript{1231}

Practice indicates persisting obstacles to effective protection of women from domestic violence. In Muğla, for instance, where child marriages remain very frequent among Syrians, women and girls face an array of difficulties, ranging from delays of up to one day in police stations, to the regular tendency of authorities to bring the perpetrator to the police station against the will of the victim for the purposes of reconciliation. Women are placed in shelters only if they refuse such reconciliation.\textsuperscript{1232} According to organisations assisting refugee women and girls, there is limited awareness and involvement in these cases on the part of the Muğla Bar Association.\textsuperscript{1233}

Syrian women living in Ankara subject to violence have faced difficulties in going alone to hospital or to the PDMM. They often do not know how to read or men do not allow them to go out alone. In Ankara, Diskapi and Ulus State hospitals are not well equipped in terms of translators although NGOs try to help Syrian women in this process. In 2021, in some towns in Central Anatolia women who were victims of SGBV had their applications taken, and they could access protection immediately. They were a priority in some cities. In some small towns, some SONIM’s (shelters) accept refugee women even without a criminal complaint reported against the perpetrator. However, in Ankara, the shelter requires a criminal complaint and the ID card of the applicant.\textsuperscript{1234}

The Women’s Solidarity Foundation published a report on social, psychological, and legal support for Syrian women living in Ankara between 1 July 2019 and 24 February 2020. One of the biggest shortcomings for

Syrian women was the lack of translators and interpreters in public institutions. This challenge does not just impede accessing state support but in some cases causes irremediable damages. Complicated bureaucracy in public institutions such as courthouses is also frequently encountered.\textsuperscript{1235}

In one case, a Syrian woman who sought to obtain a restraining order against her ex-husband was taken to the police centre without being provided any information. She reported that after a long wait for a translator, she was exposed to ill-treatment by the translator in the police station. In another case, a Syrian woman spoke of going to the police station to file a domestic violence complaint against her husband. Police officers reportedly threatened her, saying: “You are not legally married, no measures will be taken even if you file a complaint against him. If you come to the police station one more time for the same purpose, you will be deported.”\textsuperscript{1236}

Victims of human trafficking and violence who approached to NGOs to get support, reported that some NGOs do not carefully examine their case. A Syrian woman said that she was forced to tell her traumatizing story more than once to an NGO but the NGO did not get in touch with her about her counseling needs.\textsuperscript{1237}

Discriminatory behavior is common among public officers working at courthouses. Alongside open hate speech, public officers can display other forms of discrimination against refugees, such as not properly informing them or slowing down the judicial process. For example, in one case officers at the legal aid office persistently refused to print a copy of a Syrian woman's ID even though there was a printer available in the office.\textsuperscript{1238}

Access to justice in the courts is further complicated due to language barriers. Women receive notifications from the courts in Turkish not in Arabic including in SMS messages. Syrian women’s cases can be rejected due to a lack of translators in the courts or a lack of knowledge on the part of the legal aid staff. In the past, the Gelincik Centre from the Ankara Bar Association provided specialist services to Syrian women victims of violence but now this service is provided by the legal aid office which has no specific experience in dealing with these issues.

Court orders on suspension in case of domestic violence are given however they are not very effective since the perpetrators and victims live either in the same household or same quarter. Violence by the Turkish police or on the migration route is prevalent but not visible at all. Syrian women cannot talk about this type of sexual harassment and violence.\textsuperscript{1239}

UNHCR launched a gender-based violence awareness-raising and mass information campaign as an inter-agency effort in 2020. It focused on the development of gender-based violence and mental health and psychosocial support messages targeting refugee committees, including community engagement and feedback.\textsuperscript{1240} In the southeast region an increase was noticed in gender-based violence in 2021 as well as a lack of access to protection mechanisms. The municipalities run a hotline which served as an effective tool for women victims of gender-based violence, but shelters were full. There was, however, an increase in human trafficking residence permits given by PDMMs, especially in Gaziantep PDMM.\textsuperscript{1241}

2.2. Polygamous and arranged marriages

In addition to violence, protection of women and girls below 18 involved in arranged marriages and unofficial polygamous marriages – including “second wives” and girls sold into marriage by their families – is another

While both practices are criminalised under Turkish law, polygamous marriages are legally recognised in Syria and women are not always aware of the differences between the two countries’ legal framework and their rights. These problems have also led to an increase in early divorce rates among girls below 18, as well as a rising number of children abandoned by their mothers due to marriage to Turkish men.\textsuperscript{1244} Despite criminalisation in Turkish law, in practice temporary protection beneficiaries have limited opportunities to claim the relevant legal safeguards and protection measures for lack of sufficient public information and crucially very short supply of counselling and legal assistance services available to refugee women. In addition, public authorities such as health care institutions often refrain from discharging their legal obligation to inform the police of child marriage cases when treating child brides and mothers.\textsuperscript{1245} Where they do inform the authorities, police officers may refrain from investigating the cases.\textsuperscript{1246} Statistics on such reports are not available countrywide.

Initiatives such as the Child Protection Centre run by Türk Kızılay in Altındağ, Ankara offer information to women on early pregnancy, child marriage, sexual harassment, reproductive rights and contraception. SGDD-ASAM also runs Women’s Health and Counselling Centres in a number of provinces including Mersin, providing language courses and health care among other services.\textsuperscript{1247} Bodrum Women’s Solidarity Association provides trainings and workshops on sexual health, hygiene along with legal counselling and social cohesion activities.\textsuperscript{1248}

CARE Türkiye provides critical early and forced marriage information to Syrian and Turkish community members in Gaziantep, Kilis and Şanlıurfa through community events, one on one legal counselling and empowering girls under threat of early marriage to access legal remedies in coordination with Turkish authorities. Through a rights-based approach, CARE trains Syrian community members on key protection messages, including early marriage, which are disseminated through an innovative peer to peer approach and CARE’s community-based Information Protection Spaces.\textsuperscript{1249}

In addition, polygamous marriages have an impact on refugees’ access to certain rights such as Social Welfare. The assistance granted under the ESSN, for instance, is only provided to one wife and her registered per household.\textsuperscript{1250}

Finally, the issue of arranged marriages is not confined to women in Türkiye. Reports have also documented cases of refugee men sold into marriage.\textsuperscript{1251}

2.3. The situation of sex workers

Specific groups such as sex workers are in a particularly vulnerable position due to the frequent interpretation of sex work as conduct threatening public order or public health in Türkiye.1252

3. Torture survivors under temporary protection

Both LFIP and TPR identify “torture survivors” among persons with special needs. Torture survivors, like all other temporary protection beneficiaries, have access to a range of healthcare services in public hospitals, including psychiatric assistance. There are also a small number of NGOs that specialise in treatment and rehabilitation services to torture survivors.

4. LGBTI persons under temporary protection

Persons belonging to lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex populations are not defined by the TPR as a category of “persons with special needs”. The lack of a gender-sensitive registration procedure under TPR has an impact on their ability to disclose their sexual orientation or gender identity or being registered as persons with special needs.1253

LGBT refugees feel unsafe and vulnerable due to a climate of widespread discrimination, although they generally perceive Turkish host communities to be more tolerant than Syrian communities.1254 They are also targeted by hate crime and violence. On 25 July 2016, a Syrian man in İstanbul was reportedly kidnapped by a group of men, repeatedly raped and beaten before being murdered.1255 A man was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment after unjust provocation and good conduct abatements.1256

Syrian trans women, including trans sex workers, are faced with discriminatory – in some cases violent – treatment in their contacts with authorities, ranging from dealings with police authorities, to registration with DGMM, or to accessing health care services or housing.1257 In one hate crime incident reported on 17 December 2016 in İstanbul, a trans woman sex worker was murdered by a person posing as a client.1258 Another trans woman from Syria was found dead in her hotel room in Beyoğlu, İstanbul, on March 9, 2018.1259 In Yalova, a refugee trans woman, Ayda, was attacked by a large group of men in her neighbourhood on 30 May 2018.1260

Sexual orientation is also a factor hindering people’s access to housing, as temporary protection beneficiaries living in crowded apartments with other Syrian nationals are often forced to leave or to consent to sexual abuse when their sexual orientation is revealed.1261 In other cases, discrimination coming from family members or local communities pushes trans persons to move to larger cities in Türkiye. Even in large cities such as İstanbul, however, LGBT persons face barriers in terms of access to health care and many report being unable to approach official health care institutions, but rather refer to UNHCR implementing partners. Their access to health care, including in Migrant Health Centres (see Health Care) is hindered by high levels of discrimination. Trans refugee women often cannot access essential health treatment. Their personal data is not properly protected and they can be subject to non-consensual HIV tests.

The Hatay Bar Association supported the case of a trans woman living in a Temporary Accommodation Centre to access gender reassignment surgery and change of gender at a state hospital.

5. Ethnic minorities under temporary protection

The number of members of ethnic minorities, such as Roma, Dom and Lom groups from Syria are not known for certain but in 2018 it was around 20,000 in the provinces of Gaziantep and Şanlıurfa. In Gaziantep, these groups generally live in rural areas, work in seasonal agricultural work and refrain from registering out of fear of being discriminated by the public authorities. In the Şirinevler district of Gaziantep 70% of the population is Dom. In 2019 the Dom population in Gaziantep decreased by around 10,000 as people migrated to big cities like Istanbul or Ankara because of discrimination. Young Dom women and men started to work in İstanbul especially in the textile sector in small enterprises. Others are employed in the seasonal agriculture sector in the region as well as in Central Anatolian provinces such as Konya, Eskişehir or Aksaray. The daily wage is more or less the same as their Turkish counterparts now although they still face exploitation. In Gaziantep, there is a huge industrial area in the Unaldi district where many Syrians including Doms, are employed without a work permit. In rural areas, families generally live together. However, in big cities, they prefer not to be visible and live separated from each other.

These groups are under temporary protection, however they generally have old versions of identity documents such as “guest” cards and YKN cards starting with the digit “98” (see Temporary Protection Identification Document). One reason for this is the fear of being discriminated in PDMM. They do not comply with their duties of reporting due to perceived and actual institutional discrimination and so have major difficulties in accessing basic services. While improvements with regard to raising awareness were noted in 2019, there is still no standardised practice towards the Dom community. From 2019 travel documents were issued online which makes it difficult for Dom communities to access.

The Dom community was badly affected by the İstanbul operation in July 2019 with some families being deported to the safe zone (Bab area). Some families returned to Gaziantep but the temporary protection of those who signed voluntary return forms was not reactivated when they came back and was eventually cancelled. This group is very frightened of deportation and so do not report any violations that occur.

Access to health is still quite problematic for the Dom community due to discrimination so they prefer going to the Migrant Health Centre funded by UNCHR with Syrian doctors. The Syrian doctors working in these centres earn less than their Turkish colleagues and the quality of the service can be low.

Dom groups traditionally did not get married but they are starting to do so in order to access social benefits as this is one of the requirements. Women have also begun to be more conscious about their civil rights. The Kirkayak Cultural Centre helps Dom communities access services and rights such as registering newborn babies. In 2019 they assessed the educational needs of Dom students and launched a project to attract more students to education as well as to provide training on anti-discrimination and bullying.\(^{1269}\) In \textbf{Nizip} (Gaziantep) there is a small Dom community with a school just next to their camp. Children from the Dom community were not attending the school but through the Centre’s efforts two children are now attending.

Dom children were affected by the COVID-19 pandemic as schools were closed in Türkiye for the majority of age groups and for the majority of the year. Remote education was not accessible for this group. Projects such as PIKTES (Project on Promoting Integration of Syrian Kids into the Turkish Education System) can be beneficial for those who live in the city and have a regular life routine but not those who live nomadically or whose families are seasonal agricultural workers.\(^{1270}\)
